Chapter Case Notes

"Substantial Compliance" With Growth Policy Standard Not Abrogated by 2003 Amendment — Purpose of Statutory Requirements: In a dispute over the necessity for the city to substantially comply with its growth policy, the Supreme Court held that the 2003 amendments to this section did not abrogate the "substantial compliance" standard adopted by the Supreme Court in Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 Mont. 334, 631 P.2d 1282 (1981), and affirmed in N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Bd. Of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 Mont. 327, 137 P.3d 557. The Supreme Court held that the 2003 amendments simply clarify that strict compliance with the growth policy is not necessary. The court also pointed out that the substantial work that goes into a growth policy pursuant to Title 76, chapters 1 and 2, would be undercut if the courts were not to require that a governing body substantially comply with its own growth policy. Heffernan v. Missoula City Council, 2011 MT 91, 360 Mont. 207, 255 P.3d 80.

Part 1
General Provisions

Part Compiler's Comments

Validating Clause Not Codified: Section 11-3855, R.C.M. 1947, a validating clause, was not codified. The section has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 55, Ch. 246, L. 1957, as amended by sec. 24, Ch. 247, L. 1963.

Saving Clause: Section 25, Ch. 247, L. 1963, was a saving clause.

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Authority of Self-Governing Local Government to Enforce Master Plan (now Growth Policy): A local government unit with self-governing powers may not refuse to file a certificate of survey because the involved parcel encompasses less than 40, but equal to or more than 20, acres even if its master plan (now growth policy) prohibits divisions of land of such size. A local government that has adopted a master plan (now growth policy) to regulate future land-use planning and zoning may condition issuance of permits for the construction, alteration, or enlargement of structures upon compliance with such plan. 42 A.G. Op. 16 (1987).

76-1-101. Planning boards authorized.

Compiler's Comments

Validation Clause Not Codified: Section 11-3802, R.C.M. 1947, validating preexisting planning boards and actions taken by such boards, was not codified. It has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 2, Ch. 246, L. 1957.

Case Notes

Adoption of Comprehensive Development Plan (now Growth Policy) as Prerequisite to Zoning Authority: The clear and unambiguous language of 76-2-201 requires that a county adopt a comprehensive development plan (now growth policy) for an entire jurisdictional area. Only after the adoption of such a plan may a county adopt zoning regulations. Allen v. Flathead County, 184 M 58, 601 P2d 399, 36 St. Rep. 1839 (1979). See also Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282, 38 St. Rep. 1124 (1981).

76-1-103. Definitions.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 455 inserted definition of land use management techniques and incentives and definition of market incentives; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 8, 2007.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 599 in definition of growth policy at end substituted "that was adopted pursuant to this chapter before October 1, 1999, or a policy that was adopted pursuant to this chapter on or after October 1, 1999" for "that meets the requirements of 76-1-601"; deleted definition of units of government that read: ""Units of government" means any federal, state, or regional unit of government or any county, city, or town"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 9, 2003.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 582 substituted growth policy for master plan as defined term, after "means" inserted "and is synonymous with", and substituted "master plan, or comprehensive plan that meets the requirements of 76-1-601" for "or any of its parts such as a plan of land use and zoning, of thoroughfares, of sanitation, of recreation, and of other related matters"; inserted definition of neighborhood plan; in definition of plat substituted "on a map or plan" for "upon the earth and represented on paper"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 582, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Transition: Section 36, Ch. 582, L. 1999, provided: "A governing body that adopts a master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 1999, may adopt zoning regulations that are consistent with the master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 2, part 2 or 3, until October 1, 2001."

Administrative Rules

ARM 17.36.101 Definitions.

Attorney General's Opinions

No Legal Effect of Comprehensive Plan Adopted Before October 1, 1999, as Basis for New Zoning Regulations: Pursuant to the transition and applicability language in Senate Bill No. 97 (1999) (Ch. 582, L. 1999), a comprehensive plan adopted prior to October 1, 1999, has no legal effect as the basis for new local zoning or subdivision regulations unless it meets the requirements of a growth policy under 76-1-601. Zoning regulations that were adopted pursuant to master plans, comprehensive plans, and comprehensive development plans prior to October 1, 2001, are enforceable, but county and municipal zoning regulations may not be adopted or substantively revised after October 1, 2001, unless a growth policy is adopted for the entire area of the planning board having jurisdiction. Application of previously adopted zoning regulations does not constitute the adoption of zoning regulations, so rezoning is not precluded, and routine minor revisions that do not have any impact on growth policy may be made. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

76-1-106. Role of planning board.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 599 in (1) near middle after "community development" inserted "if requested by the governing body"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 9, 2003.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 582 in middle of (1) substituted "growth policy" for "master plan"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 582, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Transition: Section 36, Ch. 582, L. 1999, provided: "A governing body that adopts a master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 1999, may adopt zoning regulations that are consistent with the master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 2, part 2 or 3, until October 1, 2001."

Case Notes

Impermissible Spot Zoning — Little Test Applied: The Supreme Court found illegal spot zoning by applying three prongs of the Little test and determined: (1) a proposed power plant constituted a heavy industrial use and differed significantly from agricultural uses that dominated the surrounding area; (2) the area to be rezoned was relatively small both in absolute size and in terms of landowners affected; and (3) the proposed rezone smacked of special legislation that would accrue to a single landowner to the detriment of surrounding farmers and ranchers. Moreover, the fact that the power plant could have pursued a special use permit from the board of adjustment did not undermine the spot zoning claim. Plains Grains L.P. v. Bd. of County Commr's, 2010 MT 155, 357 Mont. 61, 238 P.3d 332, following Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981).

Zoning Arguments Based on Expired County Growth Policy Dismissed as Moot: Plaintiffs raised issues concerning a 2005 zoning amendment that were dependent upon a 1987 Flathead County growth policy. While the case was pending, the policy was subsequently replaced by a new growth policy in 2007, which provided that land use zoning in existence at the time the 2007 policy was adopted would remain in place. Because the issues were dependent on an expired growth policy, any decision by the Supreme Court on appeal would not grant effective relief or return plaintiffs to their original position, so the appeal was considered moot and was dismissed. Country Highlands Homeowners Ass'n, Inc., v. Flathead Bd. of County Commr's, 2008 MT 286, 345 M 379, 191 P3d 424 (2008), explained in Plains Grains L.P. v. Bd. of County Commr's, 2010 MT 155, 357 Mont. 61, 238 P.3d 332.

Expansion of Anchor Institutions Part of Neighborhood Plan — Approval of Zoning Proposal Affirmed: Plaintiffs contended that allowing expansion of a grocery store and a hospital did not comport with the goal of a neighborhood plan to maintain a sense of history and protect key landmarks, that the expansion would increase traffic congestion and create a pedestrian unfriendly environment, and that the scale of the big box style store was inconsistent with the character of the neighborhood, which the neighborhood plan sought to preserve. Defendants argued that the expansion stabilized two of the neighborhood's most important anchor institutions, thereby fulfilling a goal of the neighborhood plan to expand and enhance existing businesses. The City Council approved the expansion, and plaintiffs sued. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, and plaintiffs appealed, also contending that the zoning proposal constituted illegal spot zoning. The Supreme Court affirmed. Not every zoning proposal will be consistent with every goal and objective expressed in a city's growth plan documents. However, the modified zoning proposal in this case complied with the growth plan by improving existing businesses and enhancing the growth of the anchor institutions, which was considered to be in the public interest. In addition, similar businesses had historically used the area, so the zoning proposal did not constitute illegal spot zoning. Citizen Advocates for a Livable Missoula, Inc. v. City Council, 2006 MT 47, 331 M 269, 130 P3d 1259 (2006), following Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981).

76-1-107. Role of planning board in relation to subdivisions and plats.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 582 at beginning of (1) inserted exception clause and after "adopted" substituted "a growth policy pursuant to this chapter" for "a comprehensive plan"; inserted (2) authorizing planning board to delegate to staff responsibility to advise governing body on proposed minor subdivisions; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 582, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Transition: Section 36, Ch. 582, L. 1999, provided: "A governing body that adopts a master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 1999, may adopt zoning regulations that are consistent with the master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 2, part 2 or 3, until October 1, 2001."

Attorney General's Opinions

Growth Policy Required Prior to Annexation of New Territory but Not for Continued Subdivision Review: Under 7-2-4734, a growth policy covering an area proposed for municipal annexation is required before a municipality may extend corporate limits under Title 7, ch. 2, part 47, but the requirement does not apply to annexations conducted under 7-2-4201, 7-2-4301, 7-2-4401, 7-2-4501, or 7-2-4601. A growth policy is also required before certain subdivision review procedures and city powers of annexation are authorized. However, a growth policy is not required to continue subdivision review unless the city or county wishes to qualify for streamlined review processes. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

76-1-110. Cooperation with planning board by state and local governments.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 582 in (1) substituted "growth policy" for "master plan"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 582, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Transition: Section 36, Ch. 582, L. 1999, provided: "A governing body that adopts a master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 1999, may adopt zoning regulations that are consistent with the master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 2, part 2 or 3, until October 1, 2001."

76-1-111. Representation of county or additional cities or towns on existing boards.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 574 in (3) near beginning of second sentence after "county" inserted "or town" and deleted former last sentence that read: "The tax may not exceed the maximum levy authorized in 76-1-402 through 76-1-407"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 584 in (3) inserted reference to 15-10-420; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 10, 1999.

Severability: Section 172, Ch. 584, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 175, Ch. 584, L. 1999, provided that this section applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

76-1-112. Joint or consolidated planning boards.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 274 in (3)(c), near middle after "may", inserted "subject to subsection (6)"; inserted (6) requiring consistent representation on a city-county board; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 274, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all joint or consolidated city-county planning boards created after July 1, 1985, which are still in existence. [This act] does not affect any action taken by a joint or consolidated planning board prior to the effective date of [this act]." Effective July 1, 1997.

Attorney General's Opinions

Number and Terms of Board Members — Determination: The number of members and length of their terms on a consolidated planning board may be determined by the interlocal agreement creating the board. (See 1997 amendment.) 39 A.G. Op. 75 (1982).

76-1-113. Effect of chapter on natural resources.

Compiler's Comments

1991 Amendment: At beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; inserted (2) making use, development, or recovery of a mineral by a sand and gravel operation and a concrete mixing or asphalt batching operation subject to local zoning regulations; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 1991.

Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 408, L. 1991, provided: "(1) [This act] [76-1-113, 76-2-209, 82-4-431, and 82-4-432] does not apply to:

(a) an area for which a contract was issued prior to [the effective date of this act] [effective April 9, 1991] or for which an application for contract or contract amendment was filed with the department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] prior to February 23, 1991; or

(b) an area:

(i) that is contiguous to an area described in subsection (1)(a);

(ii) for which the holder of the contract has the legal right to mine on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 9, 1991]; and

(iii) for which the contract holder files with the department on or before January 1, 1992, on a form provided by the department, a legal description of the area, evidence of the legal right to mine, and certification that the contract holder holds the property for the purpose of future sand or gravel mining.

(2) Before June 1, 1991, the department shall mail notice of the provisions and passage of [this act] [76-1-113, 76-2-209, 82-4-431, and 82-4-432] and the form described in subsection (1)(b)(iii) to each person who holds a current contract on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 9, 1991] or who had, prior to February 23, 1991, submitted an application for contract or contract amendment that the department had not approved or denied as of February 23, 1991.

(3) The department shall maintain a list of areas for which certifications have been filed pursuant to subsection (1)(b) and shall provide a copy of the list to any person who requests the list."

Case Notes

Board of County Commissioners Compelled to Follow Clear Statutory Language and Allow Gravel Pit in Nonresidential Area: Plaintiff owned agricultural property adjacent to a school and sought to develop a gravel pit on the property. Plaintiff applied for the appropriate special review with the Board of County Commissioners. The Board determined that a gravel pit would interfere with surrounding property uses and would violate the rights of people who lived and attended school nearby to a clean and healthful environment, citing 82-4-431 and 82-4-432 as authority for the Board's right to deny the special review. Plaintiff argued that under 76-2-209 and this section, local planning boards may not prevent the operation of a gravel pit in a nonresidential area. The District Court concluded that plaintiff accurately construed the statutes and that the Board could not deny a gravel pit in a nonresidential area. The Supreme Court affirmed. The Board ruled as if either 76-2-209 did not exist or the statute unconstitutionally deprived residents of a clean and healthful environment, but as an Executive Branch agency, the Board violated the separation of powers doctrine by ruling on the constitutionality of the statute. The statutory language was clear and unambiguous, and the Board was compelled to follow the legal mandate and allow the gravel pit. Further, because the statutes were clear, the District Court was not required to reach the constitutional question and did not err in failing to address the constitutionality of the statute. Merlin Myers Revocable Trust v. Yellowstone County, 2002 MT 201, 311 M 194, 53 P3d 1268 (2002). See also St. v. Still, 273 M 261, 902 P2d 546 (1995), and Goldman Sachs v. District Court, 2002 MT 83, 309 M 289, 46 P3d 606 (2002).

Excavation and Processing of Gravel — County Zoning and Planning Inapplicable: Part of the legislative purpose of this section is clear and unambiguous. It demonstrates the Legislature's awareness that a range of activities must occur on-site in order for the owner of mineral, timber, or agricultural resources to benefit, and that the Legislature did not intend counties to have the power to prevent the owner from having that benefit. However, the range of activities that cannot be prevented is by no means clear and unambiguous. There is ambiguity in the interpretation and construction of the phrase "complete use, development, or recovery of any mineral . . . resources" and in its application to defendant's gravel extraction and processing. A reasonable construction depends, to some extent, on the circumstances to which this section is applied. Therefore, the court must look to industry practices to discern the extent to which the Legislature intended the owner of the resource to benefit. A county must at least allow the activities necessary to develop the resource to a point at which it can be effectively utilized. In the case at bar, the District Court found that processing occurs at the site of gravel extraction because the cost of transporting the material elsewhere for processing would render the mining economically unfeasible. The District Court also found that gravel processing on-site included washing, crushing, screening, and concrete and asphalt batching and that these activities were part of the recovery of gravel resources. The record supported the District Court's findings. The District Court properly held that 76-1-113 and 76-2-209 exempt the defendant from county zoning and planning. The record concerned gravel mining in a particular geographic location. The Supreme Court declined to announce a broad, sweeping interpretation on such a narrow record and restricted the holding of this opinion accordingly. (See 1991 amendment.) Missoula County v. Am. Asphalt, Inc., 216 M 423, 701 P2d 990, 42 St. Rep. 920 (1985).

Attorney General's Opinions

Prohibition of Sand and Gravel Operations and Certain Concrete and Asphalt Operations in Residential Areas: The effect of the 1991 amendment to this section, through enactment of subsection (2), was to allow a municipal zoning authority to prohibit sand and gravel operations and operations that mix concrete and batch asphalt in areas zoned as residential, within the applicability provisions of sec. 5, Ch. 408, L. 1991, as long as the zoning authority is exercised in accordance with constitutional principles. 44 A.G. Op. 47 (1992).

Zoning of Patented Mining Claims: County Commissioners have the authority to zone land areas which include patented mining claims subject to the mandate that natural resources thereon be allowed to be used, developed, or recovered. 36 A.G. Op. 33 (1975).

Part 2
Membership

Part Case Notes

Consolidated City-County Government — Holdover Plan — No New Planning Board: A zoning ordinance enacted after city-county consolidation based upon a comprehensive plan (now growth policy) adopted by the old City-County Planning Board prior to consolidation was proper in that the new consolidated government had not by that time formed a Planning Board having the same jurisdictional area as the consolidated local government. Martz v. Butte-Silver Bow, 196 M 348, 641 P2d 426, 39 St. Rep. 149 (1982).

1985 Amendment: At beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; in (1)(e) after "hereinabove provided for" substituted "from the members of the board of supervisors of a conservation district provided for in 76-15-311" for "with the consent and approval of the board of county commissioners and the city council"; and inserted (2) establishing procedure for selection of ninth member of city-county planning board when no member of board of supervisors of conservation district is available.

WHEREAS, most subdivisions are close to the major metropolitan areas or within the 4.5-mile limits; and

WHEREAS, conservation districts are charged with stopping erosion caused by either runoff or wind erosion; and

WHEREAS, many states require a sign-off of subdivision plats by the conservation district boards.

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, that section 76-1-201, MCA, be amended to require membership of a conservation district board member on each city-county planning board."

Planning Board Appointees — Residency — Law Not Retroactive: Members of a City-County Planning Board appointed prior to July 1, 1979, remain qualified to serve out their appointed terms although new residence requirements were enacted after they began their terms. A statute must be expressly declared retroactive to be retroactive. The amended residence requirements statute had no such declaration and so has only prospective application. 38 A.G. Op. 28 (1979).

County Planning Board Not to Serve as County Zoning Commission: Because of differences in membership requirements and jurisdictional areas, a County Planning Board may not be designated to serve as the County Zoning Commission. However, members of one board may serve as members of the other if they meet the requirements for membership of each board. 43 A.G. Op. 18 (1989).

Power of and Control Over Subcommittee of Board: Harmonizing this section and 76-1-305 and 76-1-306(2) to avoid ambiguity, it appears that: (1) a subcommittee of the planning board may handle administrative functions of the board; (2) the board should exercise general supervision over the subcommittee and write regulations governing the subcommittee's actions; and (3) any official action of the subcommittee carrying the board's recommendation must be approved by a majority of the board at a properly called meeting. Requirement to Develop Factual Record of Consideration of Public Comments Prior to Amendment of County Growth Policy: A Board of County Commissioners adopted an amendment to a county growth plan, expanding a proposed development area. However, the Board relied on a county planning office report that was prepared before more than 4,400 citizens voiced their concern on the amendment. Although the Board was justified in relying on the report to an extent, the Board was obligated to consider the public comments, incorporate those comments into its decision making process, and flesh out the pertinent facts relied upon in approving the amendment. The Supreme Court reversed and required the District Court to evaluate whether the Board considered the public comments. If the District Court determined that the Board failed to satisfy its obligation or if the record was insufficient to determine whether the Board complied, the court was to send the case to the Board for development of the factual record by the Board. N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006).

Expansion of Anchor Institutions Part of Neighborhood Plan — Approval of Zoning Proposal Affirmed: Plaintiffs contended that allowing expansion of a grocery store and a hospital did not comport with the goal of a neighborhood plan to maintain a sense of history and protect key landmarks, that the expansion would increase traffic congestion and create a pedestrian unfriendly environment, and that the scale of the big box style store was inconsistent with the character of the neighborhood, which the neighborhood plan sought to preserve. Defendants argued that the expansion stabilized two of the neighborhood's most important anchor institutions, thereby fulfilling a goal of the neighborhood plan to expand and enhance existing businesses. The City Council approved the expansion, and plaintiffs sued. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, and plaintiffs appealed, also contending that the zoning proposal constituted illegal spot zoning. The Supreme Court affirmed. Not every zoning proposal will be consistent with every goal and objective expressed in a city's growth plan documents. However, the modified zoning proposal in this case complied with the growth plan by improving existing businesses and enhancing the growth of the anchor institutions, which was considered to be in the public interest. In addition, similar businesses had historically used the area, so the zoning proposal did not constitute illegal spot zoning. Citizen Advocates for a Livable Missoula, Inc. v. City Council, 2006 MT 47, 331 M 269, 130 P3d 1259 (2006), following Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981).

Zoning Amendment Considered Illegal Spot Zoning — Little Test: Duck Creek Properties (Duck Creek), a Florida general partnership, owned 323 acres of undeveloped land in the Hebgen Lake Zoning District. In order to increase development options and the value of the property, Duck Creek sought a zoning change from R-10, which allowed one single-family unit for each 10 acres, to planned unit development (PUD), which permitted more diverse uses at much higher density. The resolution approving the zoning amendment was ultimately approved by the Gallatin County Board of County Commissioners, but was then challenged by two nonprofit corporations. The District Court voided the resolution as illegal spot zoning, and the Board and Duck Creek appealed to the Supreme Court. All parties agreed that Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981), correctly stated the applicable law, and the Supreme Court examined all three prongs of the Little test, including whether: (1) the requested use is significantly different from the prevailing use in the area; (2) the area in which the requested use is to apply is small, although not solely in physical size, including how many separate landowners will benefit from the zone classifications; and (3) the requested change is more in the nature of special legislation designed to benefit one or a few landowners at the expense of the surrounding landowners or the general public. Under the first prong, prevailing use need not exclude existing use, and the District Court determined that higher density uses under the proposed PUD would have conflicted with the predominately rural and residential character of the surrounding properties. Under the second prong, the size of the area, it was shown that the Duck Creek parcel was owned by a single entity and that the rezoning would benefit only one landowner. Under the third prong, the District Court found that the Duck Creek parcel was extremely sensitive in its importance to wildlife and wildlife habitat, and the court gave that fact significant weight in evaluating the public welfare, convenience, and necessity. State and national wildlife agencies testified regarding the deleterious effects that a rezone would have on public lands and resources, including the negative impact on habitat for elk, moose, bison, and trout, as well as on grizzly bear habitat and migration. Thus, the District Court properly concluded that the PUD zoning request represented special legislation designed to benefit one landowner at the expense of surrounding landowners and the general public. The court did not err in holding, pursuant to Little, that the proposed Duck Creek parcel was illegal spot zoning. Greater Yellowstone Coalition, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Gallatin County, 2001 MT 99, 305 M 232, 25 P3d 168 (2001). The Little test for spot zoning was applied in N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006), Lake County First v. Polson City Council, 2009 MT 322, 352 M 489, 218 P3d 816 (2009), and Plains Grains L.P. v. Consolidated City-County Government — Holdover Plan — No New Planning Board: A zoning ordinance enacted after city-county consolidation based upon a comprehensive plan (now growth policy) adopted by the old City-County Planning Board prior to consolidation was proper in that the new consolidated government had not by that time formed a Planning Board having the same jurisdictional area as the consolidated local government. Martz v. Butte-Silver Bow, 196 M 348, 641 P2d 426, 39 St. Rep. 149 (1982).

Adherence to Master Plan (now Growth Policy): Local government units, when making zoning decisions, must at least substantially comply with the master plan (now growth policy). Little v. County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282, 38 St. Rep. 1124 (1981).

Master Plan (now Growth Policy) Required to Exercise Zoning Authority: Without a master plan (now growth policy) in effect and without a jurisdictional area defined pursuant to the adoption of a master plan (now growth policy), a county may exercise no zoning authority other than on a temporary interim emergency basis as provided in 76-2-206. Little v. County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282, 38 St. Rep. 1124 (1981).

Extraterritorial Extension of City Zoning Regulations: In the absence of applicable county zoning regulations, 76-2-310 authorizes a city of the first class that has adopted a master plan (now growth policy) to extend its zoning regulations extraterritorially within a 3-mile radius of its corporate limits without reference to county boundary lines. 43 A.G. Op. 22 (1989).

Authority of Self-Governing Local Government to Enforce Master Plan (now Growth Policy): A local government unit with self-governing powers may not refuse to file a certificate of survey because the involved parcel encompasses less than 40, but equal to or more than 20, acres even if its master plan (now growth policy) prohibits divisions of land of such size. A local government that has adopted a master plan (now growth policy) to regulate future land-use planning and zoning may condition issuance of permits for the construction, alteration, or enlargement of structures upon compliance with such plan. 42 A.G. Case Notes

Proper Application of Statutory and Regulatory Procedure in Adoption of Zoning Amendment: A citizens' group challenged the approval of a zoning change in Polson, asserting that the city council failed to properly consider the criteria in Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974), and failed to issue sufficient findings of fact. The District Court found no error and the Supreme Court agreed. The zoning amendment application addressed each Lowe criterion in detail, and the city council properly considered each element, including a report by the city planning department and public comments. Further, there is no requirement that a governing body explain in detail why it has determined whether each criterion has or has not been met. Rather, the proper standard of review is whether the information upon which the decision was based was so lacking in fact and foundation that it was clearly unreasonable and constituted an abuse of discretion. In this case, the city council had sufficient evidence to make an informed decision and followed the proper statutory and regulatory procedure in adopting the zoning amendment. The council's decision that the Lowe criteria were satisfied was not random, unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious. The District Court was affirmed. Lake County First v. Polson City Council, 2009 MT 322, 352 M 489, 218 P3d 816 (2009). See also N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006).

Stand-Alone Local Vicinity Plan Violative of Master Plan (now Growth Policy) — Local Vicinity Plan as Amendment to or Partial Repeal of Master Plan (now Growth Policy) Improper: It was improper for a county to adopt a local vicinity plan (LVP) that regulated development in a specific area of the county when the LVP violated the mandate of the county master plan (now growth policy) authorizing an LVP only to the extent that it was consistent with the master plan (now growth policy). An LVP may not stand alone as the preeminent plan for a particular area when the LVP is inconsistent with the county master plan (now growth policy), nor may an LVP be adopted as an amendment to or revision or repeal of the master plan (now growth policy) in a manner that subordinates the goals and objectives of the master plan (now growth policy) as the preeminent county planning device. Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997).

Consistency Between Comprehensive Plan (now Growth Policy), Zoning Ordinances, and Other Planning Documents — Validity of Development Approvals: Zoning ordinances and other planning documents adopted after adoption of a comprehensive (master) plan (now growth policy) must be consistent with the comprehensive plan (now growth policy) and with each other, and when all three were inconsistent with each other, the zoning commission exceeded its jurisdiction and authority when it approved a planned unit development. It was unsatisfactory to base the decision to approve the development on planning documents that were inherently inconsistent and unreliable. Bridger Canyon Property Owners' Ass'n, Inc. v. Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 270 M 160, 890 P2d 1268, 52 St. Rep. 125 (1995), followed in Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Attorney General's Opinions

Growth Policy Required for Entire Jurisdictional Area: Under 76-2-201 and this section, adoption of a growth policy is required for the entire jurisdictional area. In the case of a city-county planning board with joint countywide jurisdiction under 76-1-504, a growth policy must be adopted for the entire county before zoning may proceed. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

Growth Policy Required Prior to Annexation of New Territory but Not for Continued Subdivision Review: Under 7-2-4734, a growth policy covering an area proposed for municipal annexation is required before a municipality may extend corporate limits under Title 7, ch. 2, part 47, but the requirement does not apply to annexations conducted under 7-2-4201, 7-2-4301, 7-2-4401, 7-2-4501, or 7-2-4601. A growth policy is also required before certain subdivision review procedures and city powers of annexation are authorized. However, a growth policy is not required to continue subdivision review unless the city or county wishes to qualify for streamlined review processes. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

No Legal Effect of Comprehensive Plan Adopted Before October 1, 1999, as Basis for New Zoning Regulations: Pursuant to the transition and applicability language in Senate Bill No. 97 (1999) (Ch. 582, L. 1999), a comprehensive plan adopted prior to October 1, 1999, has no legal effect as the basis for new local zoning or subdivision regulations unless it meets the requirements of a growth policy under this section. Zoning regulations that were adopted pursuant to master plans, comprehensive plans, and comprehensive development plans prior to October 1, 2001, are enforceable, but county and municipal zoning regulations may not be adopted or substantively revised after October 1, 2001, unless a growth policy is adopted for the entire area of the planning board having jurisdiction. Application of previously adopted zoning regulations does not constitute the adoption of zoning regulations, so rezoning is not precluded, and routine minor revisions that do not have any impact on growth policy may be made. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

Plan Mandatory — Adherence to Plan: This section's provision that "the planning board shall prepare and propose a master plan [now growth policy]" is mandatory. The governmental unit need not strictly adhere to the plan but must substantially adhere to it, amending the plan when the governing unit wishes to change it. 39 A.G. Op. 75 (1982).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 582 in two places in (1) substituted "growth policy" for "master plan" or "plan". Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Transition: Section 36, Ch. 582, L. 1999, provided: "A governing body that adopts a master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 1999, may adopt zoning regulations that are consistent with the master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 2, part 2 or 3, until October 1, 2001."

Constitutionality: The former provision in this section "that additional powers be granted legislative bodies of cities and counties" was invalid, insofar as it applied to counties, as an unconstitutional attempt to delegate legislative powers to counties in violation of Art. IV, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. III, sec. 1, Mont. Const.). Plath v. Hi-Ball Contractors, Inc., 139 M 263, 362 P2d 1021 (1961).

Case Notes

Requirement to Develop Factual Record of Consideration of Public Comments Prior to Amendment of County Growth Policy: A Board of County Commissioners adopted an amendment to a county growth plan, expanding a proposed development area. However, the Board relied on a county planning office report that was prepared before more than 4,400 citizens voiced their concern on the amendment. Although the Board was justified in relying on the report to an extent, the Board was obligated to consider the public comments, incorporate those comments into its decision making process, and flesh out the pertinent facts relied upon in approving the amendment. The Supreme Court reversed and required the District Court to evaluate whether the Board considered the public comments. If the District Court determined that the Board failed to satisfy its obligation or if the record was insufficient to determine whether the Board complied, the court was to send the case to the Board for development of the factual record by the Board. Chapter 599 in (1) near middle substituted "adopt with revisions" for "revise" and at end deleted "or any of its parts"; in (2) in first sentence after "adopt" substituted "a growth policy" for "the proposed growth policy or any of its parts" and after "of the" substituted "area covered by the growth policy proposed by the governing body" for "jurisdictional area covered by the proposed growth policy" and deleted former third sentence that read: "Except as provided in this section, the provisions of Title 7, chapter 5, part 1, apply to the referendum election"; substituted (3) concerning revision or repeal of a growth policy for "The governing bodies may adopt, revise, or repeal a growth policy under this section"; in (4) in first sentence near beginning substituted "area covered by the growth policy" for "jurisdictional area included within the growth policy" and after "referendum" deleted "as provided in 7-5-131 through 7-5-137" and inserted second sentence concerning petition signature requirements; inserted (7) concerning application of initiative and referendum laws; and made minor changes in style. 1981 Amendment: Substituted "The governing bodies shall adopt a resolution of intention to adopt" for "The governing bodies shall adopt" at the beginning of (1); and added (2) through (4) granting governing bodies authority to adopt, revise, or repeal plan and discretion to submit plan to qualified electorate for adoption at primary, general, or special election or for adoption, revision, or repeal by initiative or referendum.

Case Notes

Equitable Tolling and Estoppel Inapplicable to Stay Statutory Deadlines for Collecting Petition Signatures: The Flathead County Board of County Commissioners adopted a resolution approving a developer's amendment to the county master plan that would allow the building of a regional shopping mall. Plaintiff organization was then formed to put the resolution to a vote of the qualified county electors through the initiative and referendum process, but plaintiff failed to gather enough valid signatures within the statutory deadlines. During the signature-gathering period, the Flathead County Attorney determined that only qualified electors in the area covered by the master plan, rather than all qualified county electors, could sign the petition and vote on any resulting referendum. Plaintiff filed suit, seeking a writ of mandamus requiring the County Commissioners to proceed with the process or an alternative writ seeking relief through a declaratory judgment. The alternative writ was issued and then quashed and dismissed. Plaintiff contended that equitable tolling should have tolled the statute of limitations on gathering signatures because the County Commissioners were urged to file suit to determine which voters were eligible to sign the petition and vote on the resulting referendum. However, the County Commissioners declined to file suit, so the period to collect signatures was not tolled, and plaintiff's equitable tolling argument failed. Plaintiff also argued that the County Commissioners should be equitably estopped from using the statutory deadlines to defeat the qualified electors' exercise of their petition rights. The estoppel argument also failed because plaintiff failed to prove the first element of estoppel—that the County Commissioners misrepresented a material fact. The elements of neither equitable tolling nor estoppel having been proved, the District Court's quashing of plaintiff's writ of mandamus was affirmed. Let the People Vote v. Agreement Donating Money to Rural Special Improvement District Held Not to Supersede City Obligation to Follow Growth Policy Adopted Pursuant to Statute: Defendant developer's predecessor in interest, Sunlight, donated $335,000 to a rural special improvement district and the developer's property was allocated a certain number of "sewer loading units". Many years later, Sunlight's successor argued that this donation and agreement with the city granted the developer certain "vested density rights" to locate more homes on the subject property than the city's growth policy allowed. The Supreme Court held that the city was statutorily required to be guided by and give consideration to the general policy and pattern of development set out in the city's growth policy and that the agreement with Sunlight could not be read as superseding that statutory duty. Heffernan v. Missoula City Council, 2011 MT 91, 360 Mont. 207, 255 P.3d 80.

"Substantial Compliance" With Growth Policy Standard Not Abrogated by 2003 Amendment — Purpose of Statutory Requirements: In a dispute over the necessity for the city to substantially comply with its growth policy, the Supreme Court held that the 2003 amendments to this section did not abrogate the "substantial compliance" standard adopted by the Supreme Court in Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 Mont. 334, 631 P.2d 1282 (1981), and affirmed in N. 93 Neighbors,

Inc. v. Bd. Of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 Mont. 327, 137 P.3d 557. The Supreme Court held that the 2003 amendments simply clarify that strict compliance with the growth policy is not necessary. The court also pointed out that the substantial work that goes into a growth policy pursuant to Title 76, chapters 1 and 2, would be undercut if the courts were not to require that a governing body substantially comply with its own growth policy. Heffernan v. Missoula City Council, 2011 MT 91, 360 Mont. 207, 255 P.3d 80.

Applicability of Current Growth Policy During Zoning Application Process: Wal-Mart sought a zoning change from low-density residential to highway commercial in order to construct a large store in Polson. The city council approved the request, but a citizens' group sued the council, contending that the council erroneously failed to apply a new growth policy that was adopted about 10 days prior to approval of the zoning change. The District Court held that it was not necessary to apply the new growth policy, and the citizens' group appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. A predecessor master plan was in effect during virtually the entire zoning review process and governed consideration of the review at each stage. The new growth policy was not retroactive, so the council did not err in adopting the zoning change using the master plan criteria. Lake County First v. Polson City Council, 2009 MT 322, 352 M 489, 218 P3d 816 (2009).

Proper Application of Statutory and Regulatory Procedure in Adoption of Zoning Amendment: A citizens' group challenged the approval of a zoning change in Polson, asserting that the city council failed to properly consider the criteria in Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974), and failed to issue sufficient findings of fact. The District Court found no error and the Supreme Court agreed. The zoning amendment application addressed each Lowe criterion in detail, and the city council properly considered each element, including a report by the city planning department and public comments. Further, there is no requirement that a governing body explain in detail why it has determined whether each criterion has or has not been met. Rather, the proper standard of review is whether the information upon which the decision was based was so lacking in fact and foundation that it was clearly unreasonable and constituted an abuse of discretion. In this case, the city council had sufficient evidence to make an informed decision and followed the proper statutory and regulatory procedure in adopting the zoning amendment. The council's decision that the Lowe criteria were satisfied was not random, unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious. The District Court was affirmed. Lake County First v. Polson City Council, 2009 MT 322, 352 M 489, 218 P3d 816 (2009). See also N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006), and Heffernan v. Missoula City Council, 2011 MT 91, 360 Mont. 207, 255 P.3d 80.

Zoning Arguments Based on Expired County Growth Policy Dismissed as Moot: Plaintiffs raised issues concerning a 2005 zoning amendment that were dependent upon a 1987 Flathead County growth policy. While the case was pending, the policy was subsequently replaced by a new growth policy in 2007, which provided that land use zoning in existence at the time the 2007 policy was adopted would remain in place. Because the issues were dependent on an expired growth policy, any decision by the Supreme Court on appeal would not grant effective relief or return plaintiffs to their original position, so the appeal was considered moot and was dismissed. Country Highlands Homeowners Ass'n, Inc., v. Flathead Bd. of County Commr's, 2008 MT 286, 345 M 379, 191 P3d 424 (2008), explained in Plains Grains L.P. v. Bd. of County Commr's, 2010 MT 155, 357 Mont. 61, 238 P.3d 332.

Abuse of Discretion in Issuance of Conditional Use Permit for Gravel Crushing Operation — Remand for Additional Board of Adjustment Findings: A county board of adjustment granted a conditional use permit for a gravel extracting and crushing operation in a residential area, and some citizens complained, after which the gravel operation owner complained. The board defended its decision based on definitions in the development plan, which disallowed establishment of extractive industries but allowed certain gravel operations associated with agricultural operations. The District Court granted summary judgment for the board, and both the citizens and the gravel operation owner appealed. The Supreme Court reversed. Although the board did not exceed its authority in prohibiting asphalt and concrete batch plants as a condition under the conditional use permit, the board abused its discretion by granting the conditional use permit without issuing findings of fact and conclusions to support its decision. The case was remanded for additional board findings regarding whether: (1) zoning regulations and the development plan permit a gravel extraction operation that was not an accessory to normal farming operations; (2) onsite crushing operations are part of a gravel extraction as that term is used in the regulations or whether onsite crushing operations constitute a prohibited extractive industry pursuant to the regulations; and (3) conditions could be imposed to mitigate traffic impacts from the proposed operation. Flathead Citizens for Quality Growth, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of Adjustment, 2008 MT 1, 341 M 1, 175 P3d 282 (2008).

Requirement to Develop Factual Record of Consideration of Public Comments Prior to Amendment of County Growth Policy: A Board of County Commissioners adopted an amendment to a county growth plan, expanding a proposed development area. However, the Board relied on a county planning office report that was prepared before more than 4,400 citizens voiced their concern on the amendment. Although the Board was justified in relying on the report to an extent, the Board was obligated to consider the public comments, incorporate those comments into its decision making process, and flesh out the pertinent facts relied upon in approving the amendment. The Supreme Court reversed and required the District Court to evaluate whether the Board considered the public comments. If the District Court determined that the Board failed to satisfy its obligation or if the record was insufficient to determine whether the Board complied, the court was to send the case to the Board for development of the factual record by the Board. N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006).

Expansion of Anchor Institutions Part of Neighborhood Plan — Approval of Zoning Proposal Affirmed: Plaintiffs contended that allowing expansion of a grocery store and a hospital did not comport with the goal of a neighborhood plan to maintain a sense of history and protect key landmarks, that the expansion would increase traffic congestion and create a pedestrian unfriendly environment, and that the scale of the big box style store was inconsistent with the character of the neighborhood, which the neighborhood plan sought to preserve. Defendants argued that the expansion stabilized two of the neighborhood's most important anchor institutions, thereby fulfilling a goal of the neighborhood plan to expand and enhance existing businesses. The City Council approved the expansion, and plaintiffs sued. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, and plaintiffs appealed, also contending that the zoning proposal constituted illegal spot zoning. The Supreme Court affirmed. Not every zoning proposal will be consistent with every goal and objective expressed in a city's growth plan documents. However, the modified zoning proposal in this case complied with the growth plan by improving existing businesses and enhancing the growth of the anchor institutions, which was considered to be in the public interest. In addition, similar businesses had historically used the area, so the zoning proposal did not constitute illegal spot zoning. Citizen Advocates for a Livable Missoula, Inc. v. City Council, 2006 MT 47, 331 M 269, 130 P3d 1259 (2006), following Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981).

An LVP may not stand alone as the preeminent plan for a particular area when the LVP is inconsistent with the county master plan (now growth policy), nor may an LVP be adopted as an amendment to or revision or repeal of the master plan (now growth policy) in a manner that subordinates the goals and objectives of the master plan (now growth policy) as the preeminent county planning device. Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997).

Consistency Between Comprehensive Plan (now Growth Policy), Zoning Ordinances, and Other Planning Documents — Validity of Development Approvals: Zoning ordinances and other planning documents adopted after adoption of a comprehensive (master) plan (now growth policy) must be consistent with the comprehensive plan (now growth policy) and with each other, and when all three were inconsistent with each other, the zoning commission exceeded its jurisdiction and authority when it approved a planned unit development. It was unsatisfactory to base the decision to approve the development on planning documents that were inherently inconsistent and unreliable. Bridger Canyon Property Owners' Ass'n, Inc. v. Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 270 M 160, 890 P2d 1268, 52 St. Rep. 125 (1995), followed in Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997), and N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006).

Denial of Building Permit When Use Conflicts With Master Plan (now Growth Policy): City officials may refuse to process a building permit application when the proposed use is in conflict with the master plan (now growth poicy). Little v. County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282, 38 St. Rep. 1124 (1981).

Size Parcel Prohibited by Master Plan (now Growth Policy) — Certificate Filing Required — Conditional Issuance of Permit: A local government unit with self-governing powers may not refuse to file a certificate of survey simply because the parcel encompasses less than 40 but equal to or greater than 20 acres, even if its master plan (now growth policy) prohibits divisions of land of such size. However, the local government may condition issuance of permits for construction, alteration, or enlargement of structures upon compliance with the master plan (now growth policy). 42 A.G. Severability Clause: Section 21, Ch. 273, L. 1971, was a severability clause.

Chapter Case Notes

"Substantial Compliance" With Growth Policy Standard Not Abrogated by 2003 Amendment — Purpose of Statutory Requirements: In a dispute over the necessity for the city to substantially comply with its growth policy, the Supreme Court held that the 2003 amendments to this section did not abrogate the "substantial compliance" standard adopted by the Supreme Court in Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 Mont. 334, 631 P.2d 1282 (1981), and affirmed in N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Bd. Of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 Mont. 327, 137 P.3d 557. The Supreme Court held that the 2003 amendments simply clarify that strict compliance with the growth policy is not necessary. The court also pointed out that the substantial work that goes into a growth policy pursuant to Title 76, chapters 1 and 2, would be undercut if the courts were not to require that a governing body substantially comply with its own growth policy. Heffernan v. Missoula City Council, 2011 MT 91, 360 Mont. 207, 255 P.3d 80.

Impermissible Spot Zoning — Little Test Applied: The Supreme Court found illegal spot zoning by applying three prongs of the Little test and determined: (1) a proposed power plant constituted a heavy industrial use and differed significantly from agricultural uses that dominated the surrounding area; (2) the area to be rezoned was relatively small both in absolute size and in terms of landowners affected; and (3) the proposed rezone smacked of special legislation that would accrue to a single landowner to the detriment of surrounding farmers and ranchers. Moreover, the fact that the power plant could have pursued a special use permit from the board of adjustment did not undermine the spot zoning claim. Plains Grains L.P. v. Bd. of County Commr's, 2010 MT 155, 357 Mont. 61, 238 P.3d 332, following Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981).

Expansion of Anchor Institutions Part of Neighborhood Plan — Approval of Zoning Proposal Affirmed: Plaintiffs contended that allowing expansion of a grocery store and a hospital did not comport with the goal of a neighborhood plan to maintain a sense of history and protect key landmarks, that the expansion would increase traffic congestion and create a pedestrian unfriendly environment, and that the scale of the big box style store was inconsistent with the character of the neighborhood, which the neighborhood plan sought to preserve. Defendants argued that the expansion stabilized two of the neighborhood's most important anchor institutions, thereby fulfilling a goal of the neighborhood plan to expand and enhance existing businesses. The City Council approved the expansion, and plaintiffs sued. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, and plaintiffs appealed, also contending that the zoning proposal constituted illegal spot zoning. The Supreme Court affirmed. Not every zoning proposal will be consistent with every goal and objective expressed in a city's growth plan documents. However, the modified zoning proposal in this case complied with the growth plan by improving existing businesses and enhancing the growth of the anchor institutions, which was considered to be in the public interest. In addition, similar businesses had historically used the area, so the zoning proposal did not constitute illegal spot zoning. Citizen Advocates for a Livable Missoula, Inc. v. City Council, 2006 MT 47, 331 M 269, 130 P3d 1259 (2006), following Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981).

Onsite Construction Zoning Regulation Violative of Substantive Due Process: The Yellowstone Board of County Commissioners created a zoning district wherein dwellings had to be single-family units with not less than 1,500 square feet of floor area, with a requirement for onsite construction with new materials and for completion within 1 year. Plaintiffs moved a new modular home onto their lot, and although the home conformed to required building standards, plaintiffs were informed that the modular home did not meet the onsite construction provision. The District Court held that plaintiffs' substantive due process rights were violated because the onsite construction provision did not have a substantial bearing on the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare and was not based on a legitimate government objective. The county appealed on grounds that the regulation did have a bearing on community welfare by preserving property values. The Supreme Court disagreed. Neither the city-county planner nor a County Commissioner was able to identify any health and only minimal safety concerns. Although a resident's ability to control the environment and the preservation of property values may implicate legitimate government concerns in some zoning situations, nothing in the record indicated that those concerns actually drove the formulation of these regulations. Absent a rational relationship to a legitimate governmental interest, the onsite construction requirement violated plaintiffs' substantive due process rights. Yurczyk v. Yellowstone County, 2004 MT 3, 319 M 169, 83 P3d 266 (2004), following Boland v. Great Falls, 275 M 128, 910 P2d 890 (1996).

Onsite Construction Zoning Regulation Void for Vagueness: A county zoning regulation required that residences be built onsite. Plaintiffs who wished to place a modular home on a lot contended that the regulation was void for vagueness because the term "onsite construction" was not defined in the regulation, there was no indication of what percentage of the structure had to be built onsite, and members of the Board of County Commissioners and the zoning commission were unable to determine whether a modular home satisfied the restriction. The Supreme Court agreed that the regulation was vague, finding it difficult to imagine how the general public could be any more informed as to what the term meant when the very officials who adopted the regulation and who were to enforce it could not agree on the term's meaning. Yurczyk v. Yellowstone County, 2004 MT 3, 319 M 169, 83 P3d 266 (2004), following St. v. Martel, 273 M 143, 902 P2d 14 (1995).

Existing Telecommunications Tower Not Inclusive of Tower Not Yet Built: Mesa Communications Group (Mesa) sought a permit from Yellowstone County to construct a telecommunications tower within the county's zoning jurisdiction. County regulations required that all commercial telecommunications towers over 50 feet high be located at least 1 mile from any other communications tower. Mesa's application was denied because a 100-foot tower had been built and a 300-foot tower had been approved but not yet built within 1 mile of the tower proposed by Mesa. The regulations provided for waiver of the 1-mile restriction by the Board of County Commissioners upon special review if an applicant established that an existing tower could not accommodate the applicant's proposed antenna. Mesa requested special review and presented evidence that the proposed antenna could not be accommodated on the existing 100-foot tower, but the application was nevertheless denied because Mesa's proposed tower was still within 1 mile of the approved but as yet unconstructed 300-foot tower. Mesa sought relief from application of the 1-mile restriction in District Court. The court granted summary judgment for Mesa, concluding that the restriction applied only to towers that had been constructed, but not to unconstructed towers approved for construction. The county appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The term "existing tower" as used in the regulation was neither ambiguous nor imprecise and did not include a tower that was not yet built or even begun. Mesa Communications Group, LLC v. Yellowstone County, 2002 MT 73, 309 M 233, 45 P3d 37 (2002).

Zoning Amendment Considered Illegal Spot Zoning — Little Test: Duck Creek Properties (Duck Creek), a Florida general partnership, owned 323 acres of undeveloped land in the Hebgen Lake Zoning District. In order to increase development options and the value of the property, Duck Creek sought a zoning change from R-10, which allowed one single-family unit for each 10 acres, to planned unit development (PUD), which permitted more diverse uses at much higher density. The resolution approving the zoning amendment was ultimately approved by the Gallatin County Board of County Commissioners, but was then challenged by two nonprofit corporations. The District Court voided the resolution as illegal spot zoning, and the Board and Duck Creek appealed to the Supreme Court. All parties agreed that Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981), correctly stated the applicable law, and the Supreme Court examined all three prongs of the Little test, including whether: (1) the requested use is significantly different from the prevailing use in the area; (2) the area in which the requested use is to apply is small, although not solely in physical size, including how many separate landowners will benefit from the zone classifications; and (3) the requested change is more in the nature of special legislation designed to benefit one or a few landowners at the expense of the surrounding landowners or the general public. Under the first prong, prevailing use need not exclude existing use, and the District Court determined that higher density uses under the proposed PUD would have conflicted with the predominately rural and residential character of the surrounding properties. Under the second prong, the size of the area, it was shown that the Duck Creek parcel was owned by a single entity and that the rezoning would benefit only one landowner. Under the third prong, the District Court found that the Duck Creek parcel was extremely sensitive in its importance to wildlife and wildlife habitat, and the court gave that fact significant weight in evaluating the public welfare, convenience, and necessity. State and national wildlife agencies testified regarding the deleterious effects that a rezone would have on public lands and resources, including the negative impact on habitat for elk, moose, bison, and trout, as well as on grizzly bear habitat and migration. Thus, the District Court properly concluded that the PUD zoning request represented special legislation designed to benefit one landowner at the expense of surrounding landowners and the general public. The court did not err in holding, pursuant to Little, that the proposed Duck Creek parcel was illegal spot zoning. Greater Yellowstone Coalition, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Gallatin County, 2001 MT 99, 305 M 232, 25 P3d 168 (2001). The Little test for spot zoning was applied in N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006), Lake County First v. Polson City Council, 2009 MT 322, 352 M 489, 218 P3d 816 (2009), and Plains Grains L.P. v. Bd. of County Commr's, 2010 MT 155, 357 Mont. 61, 238 P.3d 332.

Fuel Storage Tank as Part of Pipeline — Construction in Agricultural-Open Zone Permitted: After careful and conscientious review by the zoning coordinator and planning department, a building permit for a 35,000-barrel diesel fuel tank on property zoned agricultural-open space was properly granted. The tank could be considered part of a pipeline, which is a permitted use within such a zone. The Supreme Court found that contentions of error in interpreting the county zoning plan, which disallowed liquid fuel storage in a tank no matter how temporary or in what context in any agricultural-open zone, to be too narrow and rigid. The court held that since zoning laws and ordinances are in derogation of the common-law right to free use of private property, such ordinances must be strictly construed and must be given a fair and reasonable interpretation, by the officials assigned to interpret and apply the zoning laws, with some regard to the proposed use. Whistler v. Burlington N. RR Co., 228 M 150, 741 P2d 422, 44 St. Rep. 1415 (1987). The presumption of reasonableness of adopted regulations was applied in McElwain v. Flathead County, 248 M 231, 811 P2d 1267, 48 St. Rep. 410 (1991).

Spot Zoning Defined: There is no single, comprehensive definition of spot zoning applicable to all fact situations. Generally, however, three factors enter into determining whether spot zoning exists in any given instance: (1) the requested use is significantly different from the prevailing use in the area; (2) the area in which the requested use is to apply is rather small; and (3) the requested change is more in the nature of special legislation. Little v. County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282, 38 St. Rep. 1124 (1981), followed in Boland v. Great Falls, 275 M 128, 910 P2d 890, 53 St. Rep. 69 (1996), and Greater Yellowstone Coalition, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Gallatin County, 2001 MT 99, 305 M 232, 25 P3d 168 (2001).

Constitutionality: Zoning ordinances and statutes authorizing them are constitutional under both the Due Process Clause and the Equal Protection Clause, in that they constitute a valid exercise of the police power; i.e., they have a substantial bearing upon the public health, safety, morals, and general welfare of a community. Freeman v. Bd. of Adjustment, 97 M 342, 34 P2d 534 (1934).

Revenue Department Not Zoning Authority — Designation of Property for Assessment Purposes Only: The Department of Revenue is not a bona fide zoning authority that may designate an area as commercial for outdoor advertising purposes. A property designation made by the Department applies to tax assessment classifications only and may not be extended to zoning restrictions. 42 A.G. Op. 43 (1987).

ARM 36.15.204 Local flood plain regulations — requirements.

Part Case Notes

County Adoption of Local Vicinity Plan Not Creation of Zoning District: The Jefferson County Board of Commissioners adopted a comprehensive master plan (now growth policy) regarding development in the county, and over a period of years following the adoption, a group of residents developed a local vicinity plan (LVP) that included proposed zoning regulations for a specific area of the county. The LVP also set goals for air and water quality, location standards for the placement of facilities dealing with hazardous waste, and guides for future development in the local vicinity consistent with the master plan (now growth policy). Although the County Commissioners stated that they adopted the LVP as an amendment to the master plan (now growth policy), the LVP was given precedence over the master plan (now growth policy) in cases of conflict between provisions in the plans. When a cement company in the local vicinity challenged the validity of the LVP, the District Court granted summary judgment for the county. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, holding that the LVP did not meet the statutory criteria for a zoning district and thus could not form the foundation for adoption of zoning regulations. Because the LVP related to planning, not to zoning, the county did not unlawfully establish the boundaries of a zoning district through adoption of the LVP. Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997).

Substantial Compliance as Standard of Whether Procedural Requirements Met: The proper issue facing a District Court's interpretation of zoning district statutes is whether a Board of County Commissioners substantially complied with the procedural steps for creating zoning districts. Petty v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 231 M 428, 754 P2d 496, 45 St. Rep. 737 (1988).

Constitutionality of Planning and Zoning Districts — Interrelationship of Provisions: In 1978, a group of landowners in the Gallatin Valley initiated meetings to propose a general planning and zoning district for the approval of the County Commissioners. They hired a planner to create a master plan (now growth policy) and a lawyer to do the preliminary legal work. In the meantime, owners of two parcels of land, one of 120 acres and one of 80 acres, located within the area proposed for general planning, filed petitions for creation of separate planning and zoning districts for their own land. The petitions were filed with the express purpose of escaping the application of the proposed large zoning district. A comprehensive plan (now growth policy) was never prepared for either parcel, and the County Commissioners adopted the planning and zoning districts over the objections of the county subdivision staff. Appellants challenged the creation and implementation of the two zoning districts on the ground that they were inconsistent with governing statutory standards. Appellants further claimed that the districts were defective on constitutional grounds because the zoning decisions had not been based on rational criteria and were arbitrary and unreasonable, having no substantial relation to the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare. The Supreme Court held the statutes constitutional, ruling that when the provisions of 76-2-101 and 76-2-104 are read together, as they must be, the law provides sufficient substantive and procedural guidelines. Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Planning and Zoning Districts Not Spot Zoning: Plaintiffs contended the county engaged in spot zoning when it established planning and zoning districts under this part. The Supreme Court said that in accepting the legality of procedures under this part, they were bound to accept the reasonable consequences of that decision. One consequence is that parcels of 40 acres or more are entitled to be designated as planning and zoning districts under 76-2-101 without being considered spot zoning. Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

When Comprehensive Plan (now Growth Policy) Not Necessary: A countywide comprehensive plan (now growth policy) is not necessary prior to adoption of a county planning and zoning district, and further, in making and adopting a development district it is not necessary that there be created a countywide development pattern. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963), explained in Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Constitutionality: This part does not contravene Art. IV, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. III, sec. 1, Mont. Const.), as an unlawful delegation of power, since sufficient guidelines are set out. Missoula v. Missoula County, 139 M 256, 362 P2d 539 (1961), explained in Plath v. Hi-Ball Contractors, Inc., 139 M 263, 362 P2d 1021 (1961), followed in Doull v. Wohlschlager, 139 M 274, 363 P2d 542 (1961), followed in Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Addition or Withdrawal of Freeholder's Name Following Certification of Petition to Board of County Commissioners for Review: In determining how long a freeholder may add or withdraw the freeholder's name from a zoning petition under this part, "final action" occurs when the County Clerk certifies the petition to the Board of County Commissioners for review. The practice of extending until a date certain the time in which signatures may be added or withdrawn, although not to be encouraged, is harmless as long as the date certain is public knowledge and precedes the Commission's decision to create the district, assuming that the boundaries remain the same and that, as of the date certain, the signatures of 60% of freeholders within the proposed district remain on the petition. 48 A.G. Op. 5 (1999).

Advisory Role of County Planning Board in Development Process: When a planning and zoning district is created in a county that has adopted a comprehensive master plan (now growth policy), the district's development pattern, which must substantially adhere to the master plan

(now growth policy), is determined by the planning and zoning commission, subject to approval by the Board of County Commissioners. A county planning board has no statutory authority over a planning and zoning district created within the planning board's jurisdictional area. However, nothing precludes the planning and zoning commission or the Board of County Commissioners from requesting input from the county planning board during the process of determining and approving the development pattern. 48 A.G. Op. 5 (1999).

Law Applicable to County Adoption of Planning and Zoning District: A county that has adopted a comprehensive master plan (now growth policy) is not limited to zoning pursuant to Title 76, ch. 2, part 2, but may also create planning and zoning districts under this part. The planning and zoning vehicles in part 2 and this part are separate and distinct; however, this part constitutes the mechanism by which freeholders may initiate zoning changes and is a process that is available to freeholders whether or not their county has adopted a comprehensive master plan (now growth policy). 48 A.G. Op. 5 (1999).

No Power of Planning and Zoning Commission to Alter District Boundaries: A planning and zoning commission is empowered to create a development pattern for a planning and zoning district. However, a planning and zoning commission may not unilaterally alter planning and zoning district boundaries to include land not referenced in the petition. The boundaries are proposed by the petitioners and set by the Board of County Commissioners when it accepts the petition creating the district. 48 A.G. Op. 5 (1999).

Function of Planning and Zoning Commission: A petition for a county planning and zoning district need not include zoning regulations that the petitioners desire for the district. The county planning and zoning commission has the exclusive duty to make and adopt a development pattern for the district. 28 A.G. Op. 1 (1959).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 446 in (1) after "affected" substituted "real property owners in the proposed district" for "freeholders"; in (4) reduced time for bringing challenge from 5 years to 6 months; and in (5) near beginning substituted "real property owners" for "freeholders". Amendment effective May 5, 2009.

Case Notes

Countywide Zoning Statutes Inapplicable to Rural Zoning District Statutes: Appellant contended that 76-2-201 required establishment of an actual jurisdictional area prior to adoption of a zoning district pursuant to this section. The Supreme Court held that procedural requirements for zoning jurisdictional areas under the countywide zoning statutes had no application to the requirements for the creation of zoning districts under the rural zoning laws. Petty v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 231 M 428, 754 P2d 496, 45 St. Rep. 737 (1988).

Motion to Create District Sufficient to Satisfy Requirement That Zoning Commission Be Appointed: A motion by the Board of County Commissioners creating a zoning district and stating that a "meeting of the Zoning Commission will be called to determine a development pattern for this area" was sufficient to satisfy the requirement that the Board appoint a zoning commission at the time the district is created. Petty v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 231 M 428, 754 P2d 496, 45 St. Rep. 737 (1988).

Constitutionality of Planning and Zoning Districts — Interrelationship of Provisions: In 1978, a group of landowners in the Gallatin Valley initiated meetings to propose a general planning and zoning district for the approval of the County Commissioners. They hired a planner to create a master plan (now growth policy) and a lawyer to do the preliminary legal work. In the meantime, owners of two parcels of land, one of 120 acres and one of 80 acres, located within the area proposed for general planning, filed petitions for creation of separate planning and zoning districts for their own land. The petitions were filed with the express purpose of escaping the application of the proposed large zoning district. A comprehensive plan (now growth policy) was never prepared for either parcel, and the County Commissioners adopted the planning and zoning districts over the objections of the county subdivision staff. Appellants challenged the creation and implementation of the two zoning districts on the ground that they were inconsistent with governing statutory standards. Appellants further claimed that the districts were defective on constitutional grounds because the zoning decisions had not been based on rational criteria and were arbitrary and unreasonable, having no substantial relation to the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare. The Supreme Court held the statutes constitutional, ruling that when the provisions of 76-2-101 and 76-2-104 are read together, as they must be, the law provides sufficient substantive and procedural guidelines. Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Planning and Zoning Districts Not Spot Zoning: Plaintiffs contended the county engaged in spot zoning when it established planning and zoning districts under this part. The Supreme Court said that in accepting the legality of procedures under this part, they were bound to accept the reasonable consequences of that decision. One consequence is that parcels of 40 acres or more are entitled to be designated as planning and zoning districts under this section without being considered spot zoning. Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Adoption of Comprehensive Development Plan (now Growth Policy) as Prerequisite to Zoning Authority: The clear and unambiguous language of 76-2-201 requires that a county adopt a comprehensive development plan (now growth policy) for an entire jurisdictional area. Only after the adoption of such a plan may a county adopt zoning regulations. Allen v. Flathead County, 184 M 58, 601 P2d 399, 36 St. Rep. 1839 (1979).

Petition for Establishment: A Board of County Commissioners does not have the power to create a planning and zoning district and to make a survey in portions of the county in the absence of a petition by 60% of the freeholders (now real property owners). Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).)

Size of District:

A district under this section need not comprise an area of 40 acres, none of which are used for grazing, horticulture, agriculture, or the growing of timber. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).)

This section contemplated districts which would be less than an entire county. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).)

Survey: A countywide survey is unnecessary for the establishment of a planning and zoning district unless authorized by the requisite petition under this section. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).) See also Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Constitutionality: Title 76, ch. 2, part 1 does not contravene Art. IV, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. III, sec. 1, 1972 Mont. Const.), as an unlawful delegation of power, since sufficient guidelines are set out. Missoula v. Missoula County, 139 M 256, 362 P2d 539 (1961), explained in Plath v. Hi-Ball Contractors, Inc., 139 M 263, 362 P2d 1021 (1961), followed in Doull v. Wohlschlager, 139 M 274, 362 P2d 542 (1961), followed in Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Attorney General's Opinions

Addition or Withdrawal of Freeholder's Name Following Certification of Petition to Board of County Commissioners for Review: In determining how long a freeholder may add or withdraw the freeholder's name from a zoning petition under Title 76, ch. 2, part 1, "final action" occurs when the County Clerk certifies the petition to the Board of County Commissioners for review. The practice of extending until a date certain the time in which signatures may be added or withdrawn, although not to be encouraged, is harmless as long as the date certain is public knowledge and precedes the Commission's decision to create the district, assuming that the boundaries remain the same and that, as of the date certain, the signatures of 60% of freeholders within the proposed district remain on the petition. 48 A.G. Op. 5 (1999).

Acreage Requirements: This section requires that acreage in a zoning district be one contiguous 40-acre parcel. 42 A.G. Op. 43 (1987).

Zoning Study Proper Function of Planning and Zoning Commission: Studies necessary to the establishment of zoning districts may be undertaken by a planning and zoning commission established under 76-2-101, but not by the Board of County Commissioners. 26 A.G. Op. 65 (1956).

76-2-102. Organization and operation of commission.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 446 in (1) in first sentence substituted "either the county surveyor or the county clerk and recorder" for "the county surveyor" and after "zoning district" inserted "or, if only one district exists in a county or is proposed, both from that district"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2009.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 288 in (1) near middle of first sentence after "surveyor" inserted "two citizen members, each of whom resides in a different planning and zoning district" and inserted second sentence regarding appointment and terms of citizen members; in (3) near middle after "expenses of the" substituted "commission's members" for "members of the board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Chapter 574 in (3) near end after "levy" substituted "on the taxable value of all taxable property" for "of not to exceed 1 mill on the taxable valuation of the real property". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Transition: Section 5, Ch. 288, L. 2001, provided: "On or before October 1, 2002, the county board of commissioners shall appoint new members to the planning and zoning commission, as provided in [sections 1 and 2] [76-2-101 and 76-2-102], for each planning and zoning district that exists as of [the effective date of this act]." Effective October 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 584 at beginning of (3) inserted reference to 15-10-420; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 10, 1999.

Severability: Section 172, Ch. 584, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 175, Ch. 584, L. 1999, provided that this section applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

1993 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 27 in (1), in first sentence, substituted "a county official appointed by the county commissioners" for "the county assessor"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1994.

Applicability: Section 171(2), Ch. 27, Sp. L. November 1993, provided that the amendments to this section apply to tax years after December 31, 1993.

Proper Use of One-Mill Levy: A city-county zoning district may not receive funding from the 1-mill levy provision of subsection (3) of this section. 33 A.G. Op. 34 (1970).

Attorney General's Opinions

Zoning Rules Not Enforceable by Criminal Proceeding: The county planning and zoning commission does not have the authority to enforce its rules and regulations by criminal proceedings. 30 A.G. Op. 19 (1963).

76-2-104. Development pattern.

Case Notes

Members of County Commission Also Members of Zoning Commission — Zoning Regulations Properly Adopted: Plaintiffs contended that: (1) zoning regulations were not properly adopted because the Yellowstone Board of County Commissioners did not create a development pattern and the regulations themselves did not create a development pattern; (2) it was inappropriate for a development pattern and regulations to be promulgated together; (3) the zoning commission did not submit draft regulations to the Board; and (4) the Board itself did not vote to adopt the regulations. The District Court held that the Board substantially complied with statute in adopting the regulations, and the Supreme Court concurred. The zoning commission, not the Board, is charged with creating and adopting a development pattern, and nothing in law proscribes the creation of a development plan and zoning regulations simultaneously. The proposed regulations were properly submitted to the Board for consideration and public hearing.

In this case, the County Commissioners were also members of the zoning commission, and although the members did not clearly state in what capacity they were voting when they adopted the regulations, the court found it difficult to imagine that the members would not have voted similarly in either capacity. To avoid confusion, the court recommended that members in similar positions make clear in what capacity they are voting and sign appropriately. Yurczyk v. Yellowstone County, 2004 MT 3, 319 M 169, 83 P3d 266 (2004).

Stand-Alone Local Vicinity Plan Violative of Master Plan (now Growth Policy) — Local Vicinity Plan as Amendment to or Partial Repeal of Master Plan (now Growth Policy) Improper: It was improper for a county to adopt a local vicinity plan (LVP) that regulated development in a specific area of the county when the LVP violated the mandate of the county master plan (now growth policy) authorizing an LVP only to the extent that it was consistent with the master plan (now growth policy). An LVP may not stand alone as the preeminent plan for a particular area when the LVP is inconsistent with the county master plan (now growth policy), nor may an LVP be adopted as an amendment to or revision or repeal of the master plan (now growth policy) in a manner that subordinates the goals and objectives of the master plan (now growth policy) as the preeminent county planning device. Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997).

Consistency Between Comprehensive Plan (now Growth Policy), Zoning Ordinances, and Other Planning Documents — Validity of Development Approvals: Zoning ordinances and other planning documents adopted after adoption of a comprehensive (master) plan (now growth policy) must be consistent with the comprehensive plan (now growth policy) and with each other, and when all three were inconsistent with each other, the zoning commission exceeded its jurisdiction and authority when it approved a planned unit development. It was unsatisfactory to base the decision to approve the development on planning documents that were inherently inconsistent and unreliable. Bridger Canyon Property Owners' Ass'n, Inc. v. Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 270 M 160, 890 P2d 1268, 52 St. Rep. 125 (1995), followed in Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997), and N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006).

Multiple Uses Not Required: The reference in the plural to a development pattern for "districts" in subsection (2) of this section does not mandate that each district, which may be as small as 40 acres, be fractionalized into several smaller districts with different regulations for each fraction. Petty v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 231 M 428, 754 P2d 496, 45 St. Rep. 737 (1988).

Single Land Use Classification and Notice of Legal Description — Statutory Requirement for Descriptive Matter Substantially Met: A development pattern recommended a single land use classification, and the notice of the public hearing held prior to the zoning commission's recommendation on the development pattern contained a legal description of the district. Under these circumstances, the statutory requirement for reference to maps, charts, and descriptive matters was substantially met. Petty v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 231 M 428, 754 P2d 496, 45 St. Rep. 737 (1988).

Constitutionality of Planning and Zoning Districts — Interrelationship of Provisions: In 1978, a group of landowners in the Gallatin Valley initiated meetings to propose a general planning and zoning district for the approval of the County Commissioners. They hired a planner to create a master plan (now growth policy) and a lawyer to do the preliminary legal work. In the meantime, owners of two parcels of land, one of 120 acres and one of 80 acres, located within the area proposed for general planning, filed petitions for creation of separate planning and zoning districts for their own land. The petitions were filed with the express purpose of escaping the application of the proposed large zoning district. A comprehensive plan (now growth policy) was never prepared for either parcel, and the County Commissioners adopted the planning and zoning districts over the objections of the county subdivision staff. Appellants challenged the creation and implementation of the two zoning districts on the ground that they had not been based on rational criteria and were defective on constitutional grounds because the zoning decisions were either inconsistent with governing statutory standards or were clearly arbitrary and unreasonable, having no substantial relation to the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare. The Supreme Court held the statutes constitutional, ruling that when the provisions of 76-2-101 and 76-2-104 are read together, as they must be, the law provides sufficient substantive and procedural guidelines. Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Unreasonable and Discriminatory: Zoning of plaintiff's vacant lot and commercial building as part of a residential zone was unreasonable and discriminatory since the residential zone was contiguous with a commercial zone, contained only one residence surrounded by commercial properties, and the Board of County Commissioners gave no reason for failing to include the property in the commercial zone. Alden v. Bd. of Zoning Comm'rs, 165 M 364, 528 P2d 1320 (1974).

Construction: Since the Legislature used the word "district" in the plural in the second sentence of this section and in the singular in the first sentence, it must be assumed that the Legislature knew the difference and intended the use of the singular when so used. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). See also 1-2-105.)

Countywide Survey: It is unnecessary to make a countywide survey unless so authorized by the requisite petition under 76-2-101. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).)

Maps and Plats: The need for maps and plats under this section would only seem to exist when the Planning and Zoning Commission has divided the district into separate areas within which it is permissible and other areas within which it is not permissible to erect and maintain certain types of "industries, trades, or callings". Such a provision is intended to provide notice where the regulations may vary from block to block and lot to lot. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).)

Residential Units: The Planning and Zoning Commission has complied with the provisions of this section requiring it "to make and adopt a development pattern for the physical and economic development of the planning and zoning district" when it provides for residential expansion and the protection of economic values by restricting the development to residential units. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).)

Attorney General's Opinions

No Power of Planning and Zoning Commission to Alter District Boundaries: A planning and zoning commission is empowered to create a development pattern for a planning and zoning district. However, a planning and zoning commission may not unilaterally alter planning and zoning district boundaries to include land not referenced in the petition. The boundaries are proposed by the petitioners and set by the Board of County Commissioners when it accepts the petition creating the district. 48 A.G. Op. 5 (1999).

Function of Planning and Zoning Commission: A petition for a county planning and zoning district need not include zoning regulations that the petitioners desire for the district. The county planning and zoning commission has the exclusive duty to make and adopt a development pattern for the district. 28 A.G. Op. 1 (1959).

76-2-105. Continuation of prior nonconforming uses.

Case Notes

Unreasonable and Discriminatory Zoning: Zoning of plaintiff's vacant lot and commercial building as part of a residential zone was unreasonable and discriminatory under zoning plan that did not permit the continuance of nonconforming uses. Alden v. Bd. of Zoning Comm'rs, 165 M 364, 528 P2d 1320 (1974).

76-2-106. Adoption of development district.

Case Notes

Application of Other Statutes: Section 76-2-203, requiring adherence to a comprehensive development plan (now growth policy) in adopting zoning regulations, does not apply to action taken by Planning and Zoning Commission under this section. Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Variance and Nonconforming Use Distinguished: District Court decision limiting nonconforming use for mobile homes to six trailers and court order to remove trailers exceeding that number did not make the question of a variance res judicata, and landowners were entitled to a hearing on the merits on their petition for variance. Wheeler v. Armstrong, 159 M 392, 498 P2d 300 (1972).

Attorney General's Opinions

No Power of Planning and Zoning Commission to Alter District Boundaries: A planning and zoning commission is empowered to create a development pattern for a planning and zoning district. However, a planning and zoning commission may not unilaterally alter planning and zoning district boundaries to include land not referenced in the petition. The boundaries are proposed by the petitioners and set by the Board of County Commissioners when it accepts the petition creating the district. 48 A.G. Op. 5 (1999).

When Map or Narrative Legal Description Defines District Boundaries: When presented with the question of whether a narrative legal description contained in a zoning petition or an accompanying map that is inconsistent with the legal description defines the boundaries of a proposed planning and zoning district, the Attorney General applied 70-20-201, which contains the rules for construing the description of real property being conveyed when construction is doubtful and no other sufficient method exists by which to determine the description. In this case, if signatures were obtained on the petition as a result of reference to the map, the map defines the district boundaries; however, if the map was created from the narrative legal description contained in the zoning petition, the narrative controls. The planning and zoning commission shall ascertain the exact facts through the public hearing process provided for in 76-2-101. 48 A.G. Op. 5 (1999).

Case Notes

Vested Interest Not Gained by Mere Submission of Beer and Wine Application — Retroactive Application of General Rule on Denial of Building Permit: Town Pump, Inc. (Town Pump), was required to obtain subdivision approval in order to complete a property conveyance for the building of a convenience store, gas station, and casino wherein beer and wine would be sold. After Town Pump had submitted an application for a beer and wine license, the property was rezoned as a commercial highway, and the city subsequently adopted a development code requiring a conditional use permit for the property in order for beer and wine to be sold on premises. Town Pump's application was denied based on the provisions of the new development code. Applying the rationale in Femling v. Mont. St. Univ., 220 M 133, 713 P2d 996 (1986), and Wallace v. Dept. of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, 269 M 364, 889 P2d 817 (1995), the Supreme Court held that Town Pump did not gain a vested interest in the beer and wine application merely because the application was submitted before the adoption of the development plan. The general rule is that the denial of an application for a building permit may be based on a zoning regulation enacted or becoming effective after the application was made; therefore, a zoning regulation may be retroactively applied to deny an application for a building permit, even though the permit could have been lawfully issued at the time of application. The court concluded that the development code was neither arbitrary nor unreasonable in its effects, that it did not impair or burden any vested interest or passed transaction held by Town Pump, and that retroactive application of the development code did not deny Town Pump's constitutional right to due process. Town Pump, Inc. v. Bd. of Adjustment of Red Lodge, 1998 MT 294, 292 M 6, 971 P2d 349, 55 St. Rep. 1205 (1998).

Fuel Storage Tank as Part of Pipeline — Construction in Agricultural-Open Zone Permitted: After careful and conscientious review by the zoning coordinator and planning department, a building permit for a 35,000-barrel diesel fuel tank on property zoned agricultural-open space was properly granted. The tank could be considered part of a pipeline, which is a permitted use within such a zone. The Supreme Court found that contentions of error in interpreting the county zoning plan, which disallowed liquid fuel storage in a tank no matter how temporary or in what context in any agricultural-open zone, to be too narrow and rigid. The court held that since zoning laws and ordinances are in derogation of the common-law right to free use of private property, such ordinances must be strictly construed and must be given a fair and reasonable interpretation, by the officials assigned to interpret and apply the zoning laws, with some regard to the proposed use. Whistler v. Burlington N. RR Co., 228 M 150, 741 P2d 422, 44 St. Rep. 1415 (1987). The presumption of reasonableness of adopted regulations was applied in McElwain v. Flathead County, 248 M 231, 811 P2d 1267, 48 St. Rep. 410 (1991).

76-2-109. Effect on natural resources.

Composition of District:

District Court was in error in holding that a planning and zoning district must comprise an area of 40 acres, none of which are used for grazing, horticulture, agriculture, or the growing of timber, since 76-2-101, defining a district, makes no such distinction. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).)

The word "used" in this section is a verb used in a noun phrase as a participial adjective rather than in the past tense of the verb form. When a verb is so used it indicates a present rather than a past meaning. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).)

Farmlands:

Lands used for grazing, horticulture, agriculture, or the growing of timber at the time of survey are not thereafter exempt from regulation. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).)

The Legislature intended under this section to preserve the identity of farmlands from the encroachment of expanding towns and cities but only so long as such lands are so employed. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963). (Dissenting opinion, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).)

Attorney General's Opinions

Zoning of Patented Mining Claims: County Commissioners have the authority to zone land areas which include patented mining claims subject to the mandate that natural resources thereon be allowed to be used, developed, or recovered. 36 A.G. Op. 33 (1975).

76-2-110. Appeal procedure.

Case Notes

Planned Unit Development — Certiorari Inappropriate: Writ of certiorari was an inappropriate remedy for review of a zoning commission's approval of planned unit development because petitioner had an adequate appeal remedy under this section. Bridger Canyon Property Owners' Ass'n, Inc. v. Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 270 M 160, 890 P2d 1268, 52 St. Rep. 125 (1995).

Approval of Preliminary Plat Not Appealable: Kalispell argued that the issuing of a preliminary plat approval by the city-county planning board was illegal because it did not conform with the master zoning plan adopted by the city and county. The Supreme Court followed the precedent of its decision in Sourdough v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 253 M 325, 833 P2d 207 (1992), holding that there is no statutory appeal process from the approval of a preliminary plat. Kalispell v. Flathead County, 260 M 258, 859 P2d 458, 50 St. Rep. 1033 (1993).

Dismissal of Appeal of Preliminary Subdivision Plat Approval Upheld: The Sourdough Protective Association petitioned the District Court for a writ of mandamus and moved to stay the Board of County Commissioners from further proceedings concerning a subdivision project for which it had granted preliminary approval. The Supreme Court held that the association had no basis to support its petition because the Board was not subject to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act and the Legislature had not created an appeal process for cases involving conditional approval of preliminary plats. Sourdough Protective Ass'n, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Gallatin County, 253 M 325, 833 P2d 207, 49 St. Rep. 563 (1992).

Timeliness of Appeal of Planning and Zoning District — When Properly Raised: County Commissioners adopted a planning and zoning district, and a complaint was filed in response seeking declaratory judgment, but filing was not made within the 30-day time limit of this section. This section was not raised as an affirmative defense by the landowner, intervenors, or the county officers. Some time later, at the "total hearing", the defendants filed a motion to dismiss the appeal based on the 30-day time limitations in this section. The District Court denied this motion and was upheld on appeal. The Supreme Court said the proper method of raising the question of a timely appeal is by an affirmative defense pleaded in an answer to a complaint. Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

County Zoning

Part Case Notes

Mootness Not Established When Plaintiff Alleging Spot Zoning Could Be Restored to Original Position: The transfer of property to a third party for the purpose of constructing a power plant did not render moot a plaintiff's spot zoning claim because the original parcel remained intact and the completion and operation of the power plant had not materialized. Mootness revolves around a court's ability to restore the parties to their original position. Plains Grains L.P. v. Bd. of County Commr's, 2010 MT 155, 357 Mont. 61, 238 P.3d 332.

County Adoption of Local Vicinity Plan Not Creation of Zoning District: The Jefferson County Board of Commissioners adopted a comprehensive master plan (now growth policy) regarding development in the county, and over a period of years following the adoption, a group of residents developed a local vicinity plan (LVP) that included proposed zoning regulations for a specific area of the county. The LVP also set goals for air and water quality, location standards for the placement of facilities dealing with hazardous waste, and guides for future development in the local vicinity consistent with the master plan (now growth policy). Although the County Commissioners stated that they adopted the LVP as an amendment to the master plan (now growth policy), the LVP was given precedence over the master plan (now growth policy) in cases of conflict between provisions in the plans. When a cement company in the local vicinity challenged the validity of the LVP, the District Court granted summary judgment for the county. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, holding that the LVP did not meet the statutory criteria for a zoning district and thus could not form the foundation for adoption of zoning regulations. Because the LVP related to planning, not to zoning, the county did not unlawfully establish the boundaries of a zoning district through adoption of the LVP. Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997).

Constitutionality of Planning and Zoning Districts — Interrelationship of Provisions: In 1978, a group of landowners in the Gallatin Valley initiated meetings to propose a general planning and zoning district for the approval of the County Commissioners. They hired a planner to create a master plan (now growth policy) and a lawyer to do the preliminary legal work. In the meantime, owners of two parcels of land, one of 120 acres and one of 80 acres, located within the area proposed for general planning, filed petitions for creation of separate planning and zoning districts for their own land. The petitions were filed with the express purpose of escaping the application of the proposed large zoning district. A comprehensive plan (now growth policy) was never prepared for either parcel, and the County Commissioners adopted the planning and zoning districts over the objections of the county subdivision staff. Appellants challenged the creation and implementation of the two zoning districts on the ground that they were inconsistent with governing statutory standards. Appellants further claimed that the districts were defective on constitutional grounds because the zoning decisions had not been based on rational criteria and were arbitrary and unreasonable, having no substantial relation to the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare. The Supreme Court held the statutes constitutional, ruling that when the provisions of 76-2-101 and 76-2-104 are read together, as they must be, the law provides sufficient substantive and procedural guidelines. Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Law Applicable to County Adoption of Planning and Zoning District: A county that has adopted a comprehensive master plan (now growth policy) is not limited to zoning pursuant to this part, but may also create planning and zoning districts under Title 76, ch. 2, part 1. The planning and zoning vehicles in part 1 and this part are separate and distinct; however, part 1 constitutes the mechanism by which freeholders may initiate zoning changes and is a process that is available to freeholders whether or not their county has adopted a comprehensive master plan (now growth policy). 48 A.G. Op. 5 (1999).

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 87 inserted (2) authorizing governing body, until October 1, 2006, to adopt or revise zoning regulations consistent with a master plan adopted before October 1, 1999; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2003.

Chapter 599 in (1) near middle after "growth policy" deleted "for the entire jurisdictional area". Amendment effective May 9, 2003.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 582 near beginning after "welfare" deleted "of the people in cities and towns and counties whose governing bodies have adopted a comprehensive development plan for jurisdictional areas pursuant to chapter 1" and after "commissioners" substituted "that has adopted a growth policy for the entire jurisdictional area pursuant to chapter 1" for "in such counties"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 582, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Transition: Section 36, Ch. 582, L. 1999, provided: "A governing body that adopts a master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 1999, may adopt zoning regulations that are consistent with the master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 2, part 2 or 3, until October 1, 2001."

Case Notes

Impermissible Spot Zoning — Little Test Applied: The Supreme Court found illegal spot zoning by applying three prongs of the Little test and determined: (1) a proposed power plant constituted a heavy industrial use and differed significantly from agricultural uses that dominated the surrounding area; (2) the area to be rezoned was relatively small both in absolute size and in terms of landowners affected; and (3) the proposed rezone smacked of special legislation that would accrue to a single landowner to the detriment of surrounding farmers and ranchers. Moreover, the fact that the power plant could have pursued a special use permit from the board of adjustment did not undermine the spot zoning claim. Plains Grains L.P. v. Bd. of County Commr's, 2010 MT 155, 357 Mont. 61, 238 P.3d 332, following Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981).

County Planning Board Jurisdiction of Conditional Use Permit — Restraining Order Regarding Artificial Lighted Palm Trees Properly Granted: Defendant applied for a conditional use permit in 2007 to allow four logo signs, including an LCD display sign, and 50 lighted artificial palm trees to be installed at defendant's casino near Deer Lodge. The Powell County planning board approved the casino and three logo signs but denied approval for the LCD sign and the palm trees. Defendant believed that the planning board did not have jurisdiction over the geographical area where the casino was located, and he installed 25 palm trees in violation of the planning board's decision. The county then sought and was granted an injunction prohibiting any more palm trees and requiring removal of the 25 trees previously installed. The District Court granted the injunction and denied a motion to amend the judgment, and defendant appealed. Although the area outside the Deer Lodge city limits was located in a planning area donut jointly administered by the city and the county, that interlocal agreement was terminated in September 2006 and the area was thereafter administered by the county planning board, so the planning board did in fact have jurisdiction over defendant's conditional use permit. The District Court correctly determined that the permit was based on the change in use from primarily a convenience store to a casino, not on the erection of lighted palm trees. Zoning regulations allowed the planning board to review signage for conformity with surrounding property use when a change in use was contemplated. The county growth policy focused on maintenance of open spaces and historic heritage that reasonably promoted the general welfare of the community. The defendant had no vested right to erect artificial palm trees without county approval, and defendant's private property rights were not infringed by denial of portions of the conditional use permit. Powell County v. Country Village, LLC, 2009 MT 294, 352 M 291, 217 P3d 508 (2009).

Zoning Decision Not Arbitrary or Capricious in Light of Legitimate Governmental Objective: Plaintiffs petitioned the Board of County Commissioners for a zoning change from residential to commercial. The request was denied, and plaintiffs filed an action in District Court alleging that the Board's action was arbitrary and capricious and constituted a taking by inverse condemnation. The District Court summarily dismissed the claim, and the Supreme Court affirmed as to the takings claim, but remanded on the due process claim because the Board had not issued specific findings in support of the denial of the zone change request. The Board subsequently provided the findings, and the District Court dismissed the due process claim. Plaintiffs appealed again. The Supreme Court noted its holding in Mack T. Anderson Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Belgrade, 246 M 112, 803 P2d 648 (1990), that the purpose of zoning is not to provide for the highest and best use of each lot or parcel within the zone, but rather to benefit the community generally by the sensible planning of land uses, taking into consideration the peculiar suitabilities and most appropriate use of land throughout the community. The court also pointed out that it will not sit as a super-Legislature or superzoning board. After reviewing the record, the court concluded that substantial evidence supported the finding that the zoning change would not be compatible with the majority of surrounding land uses or be in accord with the county comprehensive plan. The Board adequately considered and based its decision on the statutory factors. The decision was reasonably related to the legitimate governmental objective of promoting the public health, safety, and welfare. Thus, denial of the zoning change was not arbitrary or capricious. Further, the District Court did not err in declining to consider evidence of a subsequent 2000 zone change application because it was not relevant to the 1997 application in question. Englin v. Yellowstone County Bd. of County Comm'rs., 2002 MT 115, 310 M 1, 48 P3d 39 (2002).

Zoning Amendment Considered Illegal Spot Zoning — Little Test: Duck Creek Properties (Duck Creek), a Florida general partnership, owned 323 acres of undeveloped land in the Hebgen Lake Zoning District. In order to increase development options and the value of the property, Duck Creek sought a zoning change from R-10, which allowed one single-family unit for each 10 acres, to planned unit development (PUD), which permitted more diverse uses at much higher density. The resolution approving the zoning amendment was ultimately approved by the Gallatin County Board of County Commissioners, but was then challenged by two nonprofit corporations. The District Court voided the resolution as illegal spot zoning, and the Board and Duck Creek appealed to the Supreme Court. All parties agreed that Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981), correctly stated the applicable law, and the Supreme Court examined all three prongs of the Little test, including whether: (1) the requested use is significantly different from the prevailing use in the area; (2) the area in which the requested use is to apply is small, although not solely in physical size, including how many separate landowners will benefit from the zone classifications; and (3) the requested change is more in the nature of special legislation designed to benefit one or a few landowners at the expense of the surrounding landowners or the general public. Under the first prong, prevailing use need not exclude existing use, and the District Court determined that higher density uses under the proposed PUD would have conflicted with the predominately rural and residential character of the surrounding properties. Under the second prong, the size of the area, it was shown that the Duck Creek parcel was owned by a single entity and that the rezoning would benefit only one landowner. Under the third prong, the District Court found that the Duck Creek parcel was extremely sensitive in its importance to wildlife and wildlife habitat, and the court gave that fact significant weight in evaluating the public welfare, convenience, and necessity. State and national wildlife agencies testified regarding the deleterious effects that a rezone would have on public lands and resources, including the negative impact on habitat for elk, moose, bison, and trout, as well as on grizzly bear habitat and migration. Thus, the District Court properly concluded that the PUD zoning request represented special legislation designed to benefit one landowner at the expense of surrounding landowners and the general public. The court did not err in holding, pursuant to Little, that the proposed Duck Creek parcel was illegal spot zoning. Greater Yellowstone Coalition, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Gallatin County, 2001 MT 99, 305 M 232, 25 P3d 168 (2001). The Little test for spot zoning was applied in N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Stand-Alone Local Vicinity Plan Violative of Master Plan (now Growth Policy) — Local Vicinity Plan as Amendment to or Partial Repeal of Master Plan (now Growth Policy) Improper: It was improper for a county to adopt a local vicinity plan (LVP) that regulated development in a specific area of the county when the LVP violated the mandate of the county master plan (now growth policy) authorizing an LVP only to the extent that it was consistent with the master plan (now growth policy). An LVP may not stand alone as the preeminent plan for a particular area when the LVP is inconsistent with the county master plan (now growth policy), nor may an LVP be adopted as an amendment to or revision or repeal of the master plan (now growth policy) in a manner that subordinates the goals and objectives of the master plan (now growth policy) as the preeminent county planning device. Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997).

Consistency Between Comprehensive Plan (now Growth Policy), Zoning Ordinances and Other Planning Documents — Validity of Development Approvals: Zoning ordinances and other planning documents adopted after adoption of a comprehensive (master) plan (now growth policy) must be consistent with the comprehensive plan (now growth policy) and with each other, and when all three were inconsistent with each other, the zoning commission exceeded its jurisdiction and authority when it approved a planned unit development. It was unsatisfactory to base the decision to approve the development on planning documents that were inherently inconsistent and unreliable. Bridger Canyon Property Owners' Ass'n, Inc. v. Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 270 M 160, 890 P2d 1268, 52 St. Rep. 125 (1995), followed in Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997), and N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006).

Countywide Zoning Statutes Inapplicable to Rural Zoning District Statutes: Appellant contended that this section required establishment of an actual jurisdictional area prior to adoption of a zoning district pursuant to 76-2-101. The Supreme Court held that procedural requirements for zoning jurisdictional areas under the countywide zoning statutes had no application to the requirements for the creation of zoning districts under the rural zoning laws. Petty v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 231 M 428, 754 P2d 496, 45 St. Rep. 737 (1988).

Jurisdictional Area: The jurisdictional area referred to in the introductory sentence of this section is the jurisdictional area of the planning board, not of the local government. Martz v. Butte-Silver Bow, 196 M 348, 641 P2d 426, 39 St. Rep. 149 (1982).

"Comprehensive Development Plan" (now Growth Policy) as Master Plan (now Growth Policy): The term "comprehensive development plan [now growth policy]" contained in this section refers to the planning and organizational statutes (76-1-101 through 76-2-112) by which a master plan (now growth policy) is derived. Little v. County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282, 38 St. Rep. 1124 (1981).

Master Plan (now Growth Policy) Required to Exercise Zoning Authority:

Without a master plan (now growth policy) in effect and without a jurisdictional area defined pursuant to the adoption of a master plan (now growth policy), a county may exercise no zoning authority other than on a temporary interim emergency basis as provided in 76-2-206. Little v. County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282, 38 St. Rep. 1124 (1981).

The clear and unambiguous language of this section requires that a county adopt a comprehensive development plan (now growth policy) for an entire jurisdictional area. Only after the adoption of such a plan may a county adopt zoning regulations. Allen v. Flathead County, 184 M 58, 601 P2d 399, 36 St. Rep. 1839 (1979).

Attorney General's Opinions

Growth Policy Required for Entire Jurisdictional Area: Under 76-1-601 and this section, adoption of a growth policy is required for the entire jurisdictional area. In the case of a city-county planning board with joint countywide jurisdiction under 76-1-504, a growth policy must be adopted for the entire county before zoning may proceed. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

Municipality's Duty in Absence of Board or Commission: Neither the creation of a planning board nor creation of a zoning commission is mandated; and if neither is created, the local governing unit must resolve zoning issues under the general authority granted by this section, subject to the requirement that a comprehensive plan (now growth policy) has been adopted. 39 A.G. Op. 75 (1982).

Zoning of Patented Mining Claims: County Commissioners have the authority to zone land areas which include patented mining claims subject to the mandate that natural resources thereon be allowed to be used, developed, or recovered. 36 A.G. Op. 33 (1975).

76-2-202. Establishment of zoning districts — regulations.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 446 in (1)(a) in first sentence inserted reference to 76-2-201 and at end substituted "establish zoning regulations for a part or all of the jurisdictional area or divide the county into zoning districts with zoning regulations that are considered best suited to carry out the purposes of this part" for "establish zoning districts and zoning regulations for all or part of the jurisdictional area", and inserted second sentence allowing board to regulate buildings or structures or use of land through zoning regulations; in (1)(b) in two places inserted reference to adoption of zoning regulations, and reduced time for bringing challenge from 5 years to 6 months; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) Within some zoning districts, it is lawful and within others it is unlawful to erect, construct, alter, or maintain certain buildings or to carry on certain trades, industries, or callings"; deleted former (4) that read: "(4) Within each district the height and bulk of future buildings and the area of the yards, courts, and other open spaces and the future uses of the land or buildings must be limited and future building setback lines must be established"; in (3) at beginning deleted "All regulations must be uniform for each class or kind of buildings throughout a district, but"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2009.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section — Code Commissioner Correction: Chapter 542 in (6) at end of second sentence substituted "61-1-101" for "61-1-501". Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

Chapter 596 in (6) at end substituted "15-1-101" for "61-1-501". Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

The code commissioner codified the Ch. 596 amendment to provide consistency in style in the definitions in 61-1-101.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (1)(b), near middle after "commenced", deleted "by October 1, 1994, or" and at end deleted "if the district was created after October 1, 1989"; in (6), near end, substituted "mobile home or housetrailer, as defined in 61-1-501" for "mobile home, as defined in 61-4-309, or a housetrailer, as defined in 61-1-501"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 505 inserted (3) relating to rebuttable presumption concerning manufactured housing within residential zoning district; inserted (6) defining manufactured housing; inserted (7) prohibiting section being construed to limit conditions imposed in historic districts, local design review standards, existing covenants, or ability to enter into covenants; and made minor changes in style.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 505, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, certain zoning codes in Montana prohibit the placement of manufactured housing within districts where the construction of comparable site-built housing is permitted; and

WHEREAS, the reasons for treating manufactured housing differently from site-built housing have, because of significant improvements in the quality and regulation of manufactured housing, lost whatever historical justification they may once have had.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds it desirable and appropriate to discourage discrimination within zoning districts between manufactured and site-built housing."

Case Notes

Amendment to County Zoning Regulations Not Subject to Statute of Limitations Defense: The 6-month statute of limitations under this section to challenge the creation of a zoning district or adoption of zoning regulations was not applicable to an amendment of county zoning regulations that did not relate to the parcel rezone that was challenged. Plains Grains L.P. v. Bd. of County Commr's, 2010 MT 155, 357 Mont. 61, 238 P.3d 332.

Manufactured Home Not Violative of Covenant That Prohibited Mobile Homes Unless Considered Prebuilt Home on Permanent Foundation: Gagnon purchased a manufactured home and placed it on a permanent foundation in plaintiff's subdivision. One part of a subdivision covenant defined a mobile home in a manner that included a manufactured home, while a second part of the covenant generally prohibited placement of mobile homes in the subdivision but did not prevent prebuilt homes on permanent foundations if the structure met federal housing specifications as nonmobile, permanent, residential homes. Gagnon conceded that the manufactured home was a mobile home pursuant to Fox Farm Estates Landowners Ass'n v. Kreisch, 285 M 264, 947 P2d 79 (1997). However, in this case, it was not the type of home that was at issue but rather the language of the covenant. To prohibit Gagnon's home by applying only the first part of the covenant would have rendered the second part meaningless. The Supreme Court interpreted the covenant in its entirety and held that Gagnon's manufactured home was allowed in the subdivision. Grassy Mtn. Ranch Owners' Ass'n v. Gagnon, 2004 MT 245, 323 M 19, 98 P3d 307 (2004).

Use of Property Substantially Different From Preexisting Nonconforming Use — Conditions Placed on Use of Property Not Erroneous: When the property at issue was zoned in 1991, it was a dairy farm with a shop that was used to repair farm equipment that was classified as suburban agricultural. Russell later purchased part of the property and used it to operate an equipment repair business, which included the general storage of heavy equipment. The county zoning administrator received complaints of Russell's use of the property for industrial purposes and issued a determination that Russell's use was nonconforming under the zoning regulations. The District Court limited Russell's use with respect to the type of equipment repaired, the number of pieces of equipment stored on the property, and the number of hours operated each week to the manner and extent of the prior use and also imposed a screening requirement to shield vehicles from public view. Russell appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The court initially noted that Russell's complaint was time-barred because it was filed more than 5 years after creation of the zoning district. (See 2009 amendment.) The court then went on to find that the property was included in the district when it was created and that by Russell's own admission, use of the property was substantially different in both manner and extent from the preexisting nonconforming use, so a continuation of a nonconforming use was not warranted pursuant to 76-2-208. In imposing conditions on the use of the property, the District Court was not legislating limitations on the property, but rather enforcing the zoning ordinance's requirement that nonconforming uses be continued in the same manner as at the time that the zoning occurred. Russell v. Flathead County, 2003 MT 8, 314 M 26, 67 P3d 183 (2003), distinguishing Kensmoe v. Missoula, 156 M 401, 480 P2d 835 (1971).

Existing Telecommunications Tower Not Inclusive of Tower Not Yet Built: Mesa Communications Group (Mesa) sought a permit from Yellowstone County to construct a telecommunications tower within the county's zoning jurisdiction. County regulations required that all commercial telecommunications towers over 50 feet high be located at least 1 mile from any other communications tower. Mesa's application was denied because a 100-foot tower had been built and a 300-foot tower had been approved but not yet built within 1 mile of the tower proposed by Mesa. The regulations provided for waiver of the 1-mile restriction by the Board of County Commissioners upon special review if an applicant established that an existing tower could not accommodate the applicant's proposed antenna. Mesa requested special review and presented evidence that the proposed antenna could not be accommodated on the existing 100-foot tower, but the application was nevertheless denied because Mesa's proposed tower was still within 1 mile of the approved but as yet unconstructed 300-foot tower. Mesa sought relief from application of the 1-mile restriction in District Court. The court granted summary judgment for Mesa, concluding that the restriction applied only to towers that had been constructed, but not to unconstructed towers approved for construction. The county appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The term "existing tower" as used in the regulation was neither ambiguous nor imprecise and did not include a tower that was not yet built or even begun. Mesa Communications Group, LLC v. Yellowstone County, 2002 MT 73, 309 M 233, 45 P3d 37 (2002).

Mobile Homes Prohibited by Restrictive Covenant — Manufactured Home Towed to Site Construed to Be "Mobile Home": The Kreisches purchased a manufactured home and had it towed to the Fox Farm subdivision outside Great Falls. Restrictive covenants of the subdivision provided that "no structure of a temporary character, mobile home, [or] trailer" could be used on the property in the subdivision. The Supreme Court, citing Newman v. Wittmer, 277 M 1, 917 P2d 926 (1996), and Toavs v. Sayre, 281 M 243, 934 P2d 165 (1997), held that the Kreisches' home was a "mobile home", as that term is used in its ordinary sense, because the home: (1) was manufactured away from the lot that it was intended to be placed on; (2) was built with features allowing it to be towed; and (3) would be issued a certificate of ownership by the Department of Justice. The Supreme Court noted that the District Court relied on this section, which had not been cited in either Newman or Toavs, and that, considering this section and the fact that the home would be placed on a permanent foundation, the District Court determined that the home had been changed in character and was therefore not a "mobile home". This section was not determinative of the issue, the Supreme Court held, and should be just one of the statutes considered in determining whether the Kreisches' home was a "mobile home". The Supreme Court relied upon the reasoning in Timmerman v. Gabriel, 155 M 294, 470 P2d 528 (1970), and held that it is the nature of the construction of a movable home and not its subsequent mobility after placement on its site that is determinative. Because the home was designed and built offsite, to be transported to and installed on a different site, the Supreme Court determined the home to be a "mobile home" within the meaning of the restrictive covenant. Fox Farm Estates Landowners Ass'n v. Kreisch, 285 M 264, 947 P2d 79, 54 St. Rep. 1142 (1997).

Attorney General's Opinions

What Electors Considered Qualified Voters for County Zoning Initiatives: A zoning regulation is subject to citizen initiative, and nothing in county zoning law limits qualified electors to only voters living in the area affected by the zoning regulations. Thus, in the case of county zoning regulation initiatives effective in all unincorporated areas of a county, all county residents are considered qualified voters, including those residing within incorporated areas of the county. 52 A.G. Op. 6 (2008).

Funding for City-County Zoning Districts: A city-county zoning district may not receive funding from the 1-mill levy provision of 76-2-102(3), nor may it receive money from other county funds. 33 A.G. Op. 34 (1970).

Case Notes

Proper Consideration of Statutory Criteria in Adopting Zoning Amendments: A Board of County Commissioners must make zoning amendments in accordance with the criteria in this section and follow statutory procedures, including allowing a protest period, consideration of public comments, and holding a public hearing. In reviewing a zoning amendment, the Supreme Court decides whether the information upon which a Board based its decision is so lacking in fact and foundation that it is clearly unreasonable and constitutes an abuse of discretion. In this case, the Board followed the proper statutory and regulatory procedure for adopting zoning amendments and had sufficient evidence before it to make an informed decision. Absent an abuse of discretion, the zoning amendment was affirmed. N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006), following Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974), and Schanz v. Billings, 182 M 328, 597 P2d 67 (1979).

Zoning Decision Not Arbitrary or Capricious in Light of Legitimate Governmental Objective: Plaintiffs petitioned the Board of County Commissioners for a zoning change from residential to commercial. The request was denied, and plaintiffs filed an action in District Court alleging that the Board's action was arbitrary and capricious and constituted a taking by inverse condemnation. The District Court summarily dismissed the claim, and the Supreme Court affirmed as to the takings claim, but remanded on the due process claim because the Board had not issued specific findings in support of the denial of the zone change request. The Board subsequently provided the findings, and the District Court dismissed the due process claim.

Plaintiffs appealed again. The Supreme Court noted its holding in Mack T. Anderson Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Belgrade, 246 M 112, 803 P2d 648 (1990), that the purpose of zoning is not to provide for the highest and best use of each lot or parcel within the zone, but rather to benefit the community generally by the sensible planning of land uses, taking into consideration the peculiar suitabilities and most appropriate use of land throughout the community. The court also pointed out that it will not sit as a super-Legislature or superzoning board. After reviewing the record, the court concluded that substantial evidence supported the finding that the zoning change would not be compatible with the majority of surrounding land uses or be in accord with the county comprehensive plan. The Board adequately considered and based its decision on the statutory factors. The decision was reasonably related to the legitimate governmental objective of promoting the public health, safety, and welfare. Thus, denial of the zoning change was not arbitrary or capricious. Further, the District Court did not err in declining to consider evidence of a subsequent 2000 zone change application because it was not relevant to the 1997 application in question. Englin v. Yellowstone County Bd. of County Comm'rs., 2002 MT 115, 310 M 1, 48 P3d 39 (2002).

Stand-Alone Local Vicinity Plan Violative of Master Plan (now Growth Policy) — Local Vicinity Plan as Amendment to or Partial Repeal of Master Plan (now Growth Policy) Improper: It was improper for a county to adopt a local vicinity plan (LVP) that regulated development in a specific area of the county when the LVP violated the mandate of the county master plan (now growth policy) authorizing an LVP only to the extent that it was consistent with the master plan (now growth policy). An LVP may not stand alone as the preeminent plan for a particular area when the LVP is inconsistent with the county master plan (now growth policy), nor may an LVP be adopted as an amendment to or revision or repeal of the master plan (now growth policy) in a manner that subordinates the goals and objectives of the master plan (now growth policy) as the preeminent county planning device. Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997).

Consistency Between Comprehensive Plan (now Growth Policy), Zoning Ordinances, and Other Planning Documents — Validity of Development Approvals: Zoning ordinances and other planning documents adopted after adoption of a comprehensive (master) plan (now growth policy) must be consistent with the comprehensive plan (now growth policy) and with each other, and when all three were inconsistent with each other, the zoning commission exceeded its jurisdiction and authority when it approved a planned unit development. It was unsatisfactory to base the decision to approve the development on planning documents that were inherently inconsistent and unreliable. Bridger Canyon Property Owners' Ass'n, Inc. v. Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 270 M 160, 890 P2d 1268, 52 St. Rep. 125 (1995), followed in Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997), and N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006).

Application: This section, requiring adherence to a comprehensive development plan (now growth policy) in adopting zoning regulations, does not apply to action taken by Planning and Zoning Commission under Title 76, ch. 2, part 1, in adopting development pattern for the planning and zoning district. Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

When Comprehensive Plan (now Growth Policy) Not Necessary: A countywide comprehensive plan (now growth policy) is not necessary prior to adoption of a county planning and zoning district, and, further, in making and adopting a development district it is not necessary that there be created a countywide development pattern. Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963), explained in Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

Attorney General's Opinions

No Legal Effect of Comprehensive Plan Adopted Before October 1, 1999, as Basis for New Zoning Regulations: Pursuant to the transition and applicability language in Senate Bill No. 97 (1999) (Ch. 582, L. 1999), a comprehensive plan adopted prior to October 1, 1999, has no legal effect as the basis for new local zoning or subdivision regulations unless it meets the requirements of a growth policy under 76-1-601. Zoning regulations that were adopted pursuant to master plans, comprehensive plans, and comprehensive development plans prior to October 1, 2001, are enforceable, but county and municipal zoning regulations may not be adopted or substantively revised after October 1, 2001, unless a growth policy is adopted for the entire area of the planning board having jurisdiction. Application of previously adopted zoning regulations does not constitute the adoption of zoning regulations, so rezoning is not precluded, and routine minor revisions that do not have any impact on growth policy may be made. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

76-2-204. Role of planning boards.

Case Notes

Zoning Decision Not Arbitrary or Capricious in Light of Legitimate Governmental Objective: Plaintiffs petitioned the Board of County Commissioners for a zoning change from residential to commercial. The request was denied, and plaintiffs filed an action in District Court alleging that the Board's action was arbitrary and capricious and constituted a taking by inverse condemnation. The District Court summarily dismissed the claim, and the Supreme Court affirmed as to the takings claim, but remanded on the due process claim because the Board had not issued specific findings in support of the denial of the zone change request. The Board subsequently provided the findings, and the District Court dismissed the due process claim. Plaintiffs appealed again. The Supreme Court noted its holding in Mack T. Anderson Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Belgrade, 246 M 112, 803 P2d 648 (1990), that the purpose of zoning is not to provide for the highest and best use of each lot or parcel within the zone, but rather to benefit the community generally by the sensible planning of land uses, taking into consideration the peculiar suitabilities and most appropriate use of land throughout the community. The court also pointed out that it will not sit as a super-Legislature or superzoning board. After reviewing the record, the court concluded that substantial evidence supported the finding that the zoning change would not be compatible with the majority of surrounding land uses or be in accord with the county comprehensive plan. The Board adequately considered and based its decision on the statutory factors. The decision was reasonably related to the legitimate governmental objective of promoting the public health, safety, and welfare. Thus, denial of the zoning change was not arbitrary or capricious. Further, the District Court did not err in declining to consider evidence of a subsequent 2000 zone change application because it was not relevant to the 1997 application in question. Englin v. Yellowstone County Bd. of County Comm'rs., 2002 MT 115, 310 M 1, 48 P3d 39 (2002).

Failure to Involve Planning Board — Action Invalid: The Flathead County Commissioners adopted a resolution of intent to zone a tract of land as commercial without demanding, requesting, or reviewing written recommendations from the City-County Planning Board. Even though the statute provides that the recommendations are "advisory only", the statute clearly mandates that the Planning Board's recommendation be considered. Failure of the Commissioners to involve the Planning Board renders the Commissioners' action invalid. Little v. County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282, 38 St. Rep. 1124 (1981).

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 446 in (1) in introductory clause after "district" deleted "must be published once a week for 2 weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the county. The notice"; inserted (1)(b) requiring posting of notice for 45 days; inserted (1)(c) requiring publication for 2 weeks; in (6) in two places substituted "real property owners" for "freeholders"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2009.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 591 in (6), in second sentence after "roll", inserted "or if the freeholders representing 50% of the titled property ownership whose property is taxed for agricultural purposes under 15-7-202 or whose property is taxed as forest land under Title 15, chapter 44, part 1"; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Challenge to Protest Provision Mooted by County Inaction: Individuals residing within the boundary of a proposed zoning district sought an injunction against Gallatin County, claiming the protest provision of 76-2-205 was unconstitutional. While the parties awaited the injunction hearing, the 30-day postprotest deadline passed without the county taking action. An intervening party moved for summary judgment, which the District Court granted on the basis of mootness because the county had not acted within the statutory deadlines. The Supreme Court affirmed and declined to consider the constitutional challenge under the "capable of repetition" exception. The challenge never ripened because the zoning district did not fail due to the protest provision, but failed because of county inaction. Gateway Opencut Min. Action Group v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2011 MT 198, 361 Mont. 398, 260 P.3d 133.

Sufficient Notice of Interim Zoning Hearing: Plaintiff contended that because the public notice requirements applicable to standard zoning were not applied to a hearing on interim zoning, the interim zoning measures were void. The Supreme Court noted that the hearing was widely publicized and that plaintiff in fact attended the meeting and offered comments. Because plaintiff received actual notice and had the opportunity to be heard, constitutional public notice requirements were essentially satisfied. The court also noted that the law has long recognized that actual attendance and participation may constitute a waiver of alleged deficiencies of notice. Therefore, any error in the public notice of the interim zoning hearing was harmless. Liberty Cove, Inc. v. Missoula County, 2009 MT 377, 353 M 286, 220 P3d 617 (2009). See also Knode v. Williamson, 84 US 586 (1873).

Failure to Substantially Comply With Notice Requirements — Permanent Zoning Regulations Properly Voided: Plaintiff asserted that a Board of County Commissioners substantially complied with statutory notice requirements by publishing only one notice of intent to adopt permanent zoning regulations. The District Court disagreed and voided the regulations, which were subsequently adopted as interim zoning regulations. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Section 76-2-205 requires published notice not once but twice during 2 consecutive weeks. Newspaper articles and opinion pieces published during the period in question pertained to the proposed regulations but did not meet the statutory requirements for publication of notice by the Board. Fasbender v. Lewis & Clark Bd. of County Commr's, 2009 MT 323, 352 M 505, 218 P3d 69 (2009).

Statutory Notice and Hearing Procedures Satisfied — Interim Zoning Regulations Properly Adopted: A Board of County Commissioners twice published separate notices of proposed interim zoning regulations and then held a public hearing on the regulations. Due process required nothing more. Therefore, the Board complied with affected landowners' fundamental right to notice and the opportunity to be heard in adopting interim zoning regulations. Fasbender v. Lewis & Clark Bd. of County Commr's, 2009 MT 323, 352 M 505, 218 P3d 69 (2009), distinguishing Bryant Dev. Ass'n v. Dagel, 166 M 252, 531 P2d 1320 (1975), and State ex rel. Christian, Spring, Sielbach & Assoc. v. Miller, 169 M 242, 545 P2d 660 (1976).

Proper Consideration of Statutory Criteria in Adopting Zoning Amendments: A Board of County Commissioners must make zoning amendments in accordance with the criteria in 76-2-203 and follow statutory procedures, including allowing a protest period, consideration of public comments, and holding a public hearing. In reviewing a zoning amendment, the Supreme Court decides whether the information upon which a Board based its decision is so lacking in fact and foundation that it is clearly unreasonable and constitutes an abuse of discretion. In this case, the Board followed the proper statutory and regulatory procedure for adopting zoning amendments and had sufficient evidence before it to make an informed decision. Absent an abuse of discretion, the zoning amendment was affirmed. N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006), following Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974), and Schanz v. Billings, 182 M 328, 597 P2d 67 (1979).

Failure to Involve Planning Board — Action Invalid: The Flathead County Commissioners adopted a resolution of intent to zone a tract of land as commercial without demanding, requesting, or reviewing written recommendations from the City-County Planning Board. Even though the statute provides that the recommendations are "advisory only", the statute clearly mandates that the Planning Board's recommendation be considered. Failure of the Commissioners to involve the Planning Board renders the Commissioners' action invalid. Little v. County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282, 38 St. Rep. 1124 (1981).

Amendments to Zoning Regulations: Subsection (4) applies not only to applications to create zoning districts but also to amendments of zoning regulations. Dover Ranch v. Yellowstone County, 187 M 276, 609 P2d 711, 37 St. Rep. 727 (1980).

"May" Construed: The District Court set aside an amended resolution of the Board of Yellowstone County Commissioners which granted an application for a zoning change on the grounds that the county did not comply with subsections (4), (5), and (6) of this section. The county argues that the use of the word "may" in subsection (4) makes the requirements of subsections (4), (5), and (6) discretionary. The Supreme Court found that "may" as used in subsection (4) means that the Commissioners may deny the application or they may pass a resolution if they intend to grant the application. The Commissioners cannot grant the application and ignore the statutory procedures of this section. Dover Ranch v. Yellowstone County, 187 M 276, 609 P2d 711, 37 St. Rep. 727 (1980).

Interim Zoning Notice and Hearing Requirements: The provision of this section for notice and hearing is applicable to 76-2-206 authorizing interim emergency zoning, and a zoning ordinance adopted without such notice and hearing is void. State ex rel. Christian, Spring, Sielbach & Assoc. v. Miller, 169 M 242, 545 P2d 660 (1976).

Attorney General's Opinions

Enlargement of Protest Rights for Agricultural and Forest Land Freeholders — Proportionate Share of Freehold Interest to Be Included in Calculation of Protest Area: Resolving an ambiguous interpretation of subsection (6) of this section, the Attorney General opined that the 1995 amendment to that subsection enlarged protest rights for freeholders (now real property owners) whose property is classified for real property tax purposes as agricultural or forest land when their combined title ownership represents 50% of the total property ownership within the proposed or revised zoning district. Those protest rights supplement the protest rights provided to 40% of the freeholders within the district whose names appear on the last-completed assessment roll. The phrase "freeholders representing 50% of the titled property ownership" requires all owners of property held in joint or common ownership to join in the protest for the area of the parcel to be included in the calculation of the protest area. Condominium owners or purchasers may have their proportionate share of the freehold interest in the land area of the particular development included in the calculation of the protest area. 46 A.G. Op. 22 (1996).

Protests to Creation of Zoning Districts: For purposes of counting protests pursuant to this section, all freeholders within a zoning district whose names appear on the last completed assessment roll of the county are entitled to one vote without regard to the number of parcels they own within the district. 37 A.G. Op. 47 (1977).

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 446 in (1) in introductory clause at beginning inserted "Subject to subsection (3)", and substituted "may establish an interim zoning district or interim regulation" for "may adopt an interim zoning map or regulation"; in (1)(a) substituted "interim zoning district or interim regulation" for "interim zoning map or regulation"; in (2) in first sentence at beginning substituted "A resolution for an interim zoning district or interim regulation" for "An interim resolution", and in second sentence at beginning inserted "Subject to subsection (3)" and before "resolution" deleted "interim"; inserted (3) requiring certain procedures for establishment of interim zoning district or interim regulation; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2009.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 87 at beginning of (1)(b)(ii)(C) substituted "a revision" for "an amendment, extension, or addition" and after "policy" inserted "to a master plan, as provided for in 76-1-604(6) and 76-2-201(2)". Amendment effective March 20, 2003.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 582 inserted (1) and (1)(a) authorizing county commissioners to adopt interim zoning map or regulation as emergency measure to classify and regulate uses that constitute emergency; in (1)(b)(ii)(A) substituted "growth policy" for "master plan"; in (1)(b)(ii)(C) after "part" deleted "the board of county commissioners in order to promote the public health, safety, morals, and general welfare may adopt as an emergency measure a temporary interim zoning map or temporary interim zoning regulation, the purpose of which shall be to classify and regulate uses and related matters as constitutes the emergency"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 582, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Transition: Section 36, Ch. 582, L. 1999, provided: "A governing body that adopts a master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 1999, may adopt zoning regulations that are consistent with the master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 2, part 2 or 3, until October 1, 2001."

Case Notes

Interim Zoning Based on Reasonable Emergency — Limited Applicability — Spot Zoning Test Inapplicable: The Missoula County Board of County Commissioners enacted an interim zoning provision for an area that was previously unzoned, prohibiting plaintiff from digging a gravel pit for 1 year. The interim zoning provision placed various residential designations on the area where plaintiff's property was located. Plaintiff challenged the interim zoning, but the District Court affirmed the Board's decision, so plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's holding that a reasonable emergency existed that justified interim zoning based on issues of public health, safety, and welfare because of regulatory deficiencies. Interim zoning allows a local government to enact temporary zoning to avoid suffering serious detriment while pursuing the necessary planning efforts to adopt a growth policy as a condition precedent to enacting standard zoning. Therefore, the Board acted within its discretion in finding that an emergency existed justifying interim zoning. Plaintiff also contended that interim zoning constituted illegal reverse spot zoning. Applying the test in Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981), the Supreme Court held that the spot zoning test did not apply because the interim zoning was effective for only 1 or 2 years and could be implemented without a growth policy in place, so spot zoning challenges are not applicable to interim zoning measures adopted under 76-2-206. Liberty Cove, Inc. v. Missoula County, 2009 MT 377, 353 M 286, 220 P3d 617 (2009).

Sufficient Notice of Interim Zoning Hearing: Plaintiff contended that because the public notice requirements applicable to standard zoning were not applied to a hearing on interim zoning, the interim zoning measures were void. The Supreme Court noted that the hearing was widely publicized and that plaintiff in fact attended the meeting and offered comments. Because plaintiff received actual notice and had the opportunity to be heard, constitutional public notice requirements were essentially satisfied. The court also noted that the law has long recognized that actual attendance and participation may constitute a waiver of alleged deficiencies of notice. Therefore, any error in the public notice of the interim zoning hearing was harmless. Liberty Cove, Inc. v. Missoula County, 2009 MT 377, 353 M 286, 220 P3d 617 (2009). See also Knode v. Williamson, 84 US 586 (1873).

Master Plan (now Growth Policy) Required to Exercise Zoning Authority: Without a master plan (now growth policy) in effect and without a jurisdictional area defined pursuant to the adoption of a master plan (now growth policy), a county may exercise no zoning authority other than on a temporary interim emergency basis as provided in this section. Little v. County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282, 38 St. Rep. 1124 (1981).

Interim Zoning Regulations Suggested: The Supreme Court suggested that the defendants take note of this section for interim zoning regulations in emergency situations to alleviate the potentially serious consequences of the decision in the instant case. Allen v. Flathead County, 184 M 58, 601 P2d 399, 36 St. Rep. 1839 (1979).

Attorney General's Opinions

What Electors Considered Qualified Voters for County Zoning Initiatives: A zoning regulation is subject to citizen initiative, and nothing in county zoning law limits qualified electors to only voters living in the area affected by the zoning regulations. Thus, in the case of county zoning regulation initiatives effective in all unincorporated areas of a county, all county residents are considered qualified voters, including those residing within incorporated areas of the county. 52 A.G. Op. 6 (2008).

When Interim Zoning May Be Implemented — Failure to Adopt Growth Policy Not Considered Exigency That Permits Emergency Interim Zoning: In the case of both counties and municipalities, interim zoning measures may be adopted: (1) when proper zoning procedures have not been satisfied; (2) when some matter of urgency requires zoning to protect public health, safety, and welfare; (3) if the interim measure addresses the urgent matter; and (4) as long as more formal planning processes have been initiated or will be initiated within a reasonable time. The absence of a growth policy satisfies the first provision, but interim zoning cannot be implemented unless all four requirements are satisfied. Failure to adopt a growth policy does not in itself constitute an exigency that allows implementation of emergency zoning. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

76-2-208. Continuation of nonconforming uses.

Case Notes

Use of Property Substantially Different From Preexisting Nonconforming Use — Conditions Placed on Use of Property Not Erroneous: When the property at issue was zoned in 1991, it was a dairy farm with a shop that was used to repair farm equipment that was classified as suburban agricultural. Russell later purchased part of the property and used it to operate an equipment repair business, which included the general storage of heavy equipment. The county zoning administrator received complaints of Russell's use of the property for industrial purposes and issued a determination that Russell's use was nonconforming under the zoning regulations. The District Court limited Russell's use with respect to the type of equipment repaired, the number of pieces of equipment stored on the property, and the number of hours operated each week to the manner and extent of the prior use and also imposed a screening requirement to shield vehicles from public view. Russell appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The court initially noted that Russell's complaint was time-barred because it was filed more than 5 years after creation of the zoning district. The court then went on to find that the property was included in the district when it was created and that by Russell's own admission, use of the property was substantially different in both manner and extent from the preexisting nonconforming use, so a continuation of a nonconforming use was not warranted pursuant to this section. In imposing conditions on the use of the property, the District Court was not legislating limitations on the property, but rather enforcing the zoning ordinance's requirement that nonconforming uses be continued in the same manner as at the time that the zoning occurred. Russell v. Flathead County, 2003 MT 8, 314 M 26, 67 P3d 183 (2003), distinguishing Kensmoe v. Missoula, 156 M 401, 480 P2d 835 (1971).

Unreasonable and Discriminatory: Zoning of plaintiff's vacant lot and commercial building as part of a residential zone was unreasonable and discriminatory under zoning plan that did not permit the continuance of nonconforming uses. Alden v. Bd. of Zoning Comm'rs, 165 M 364, 528 P2d 1320 (1974).

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 340 near beginning of (1) in exception clause inserted reference to subsection (2); in (2) after "asphalt" substituted language allowing use, development, or recovery of mineral in residential zone as defined by county commissioners for "on a site that is located within a geographic area zoned as residential are subject to the zoning regulations adopted under this chapter"; inserted (3) relating to zoning regulations in all zones other than residential; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 2005.

1991 Amendment: At beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; inserted (2) making use, development, or recovery of a mineral by a sand and gravel operation and a concrete mixing or asphalt batching operation subject to local zoning regulations; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 1991.

Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 408, L. 1991, provided: "(1) [This act] [76-1-113, 76-2-209, 82-4-431, and 82-4-432] does not apply to:

(a) an area for which a contract was issued prior to [the effective date of this act] [effective April 9, 1991] or for which an application for contract or contract amendment was filed with the department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] prior to February 23, 1991; or

(b) an area:

(i) that is contiguous to an area described in subsection (1)(a);

(ii) for which the holder of the contract has the legal right to mine on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 9, 1991]; and

(iii) for which the contract holder files with the department on or before January 1, 1992, on a form provided by the department, a legal description of the area, evidence of the legal right to mine, and certification that the contract holder holds the property for the purpose of future sand or gravel mining.

(2) Before June 1, 1991, the department shall mail notice of the provisions and passage of [this act] [76-1-113, 76-2-209, 82-4-431, and 82-4-432] and the form described in subsection (1)(b)(iii) to each person who holds a current contract on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 9, 1991] or who had, prior to February 23, 1991, submitted an application for contract or contract amendment that the department had not approved or denied as of February 23, 1991.

(3) The department shall maintain a list of areas for which certifications have been filed pursuant to subsection (1)(b) and shall provide a copy of the list to any person who requests the list."

Case Notes

Abuse of Discretion in Issuance of Conditional Use Permit for Gravel Crushing Operation — Remand for Additional Board of Adjustment Findings: A county board of adjustment granted a conditional use permit for a gravel extracting and crushing operation in a residential area, and some citizens complained, after which the gravel operation owner complained. The board defended its decision based on definitions in the development plan, which disallowed establishment of extractive industries but allowed certain gravel operations associated with agricultural operations. The District Court granted summary judgment for the board, and both the citizens and the gravel operation owner appealed. The Supreme Court reversed. Although the board did not exceed its authority in prohibiting asphalt and concrete batch plants as a condition under the conditional use permit, the board abused its discretion by granting the conditional use permit without issuing findings of fact and conclusions to support its decision. The case was remanded for additional board findings regarding whether: (1) zoning regulations and the development plan permit a gravel extraction operation that was not an accessory to normal farming operations; (2) onsite crushing operations are part of a gravel extraction as that term is used in the regulations or whether onsite crushing operations constitute a prohibited extractive industry pursuant to the regulations; and (3) conditions could be imposed to mitigate traffic impacts from the proposed operation. Flathead Citizens for Quality Growth, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of Adjustment, 2008 MT 1, 341 M 1, 175 P3d 282 (2008).

Determination of Residential Use in Multiuse Geographical Zoning Districts: In cases when nontraditional, uniquely zoned, multiuse geographical districts are considered, a determination of whether the geographical area is zoned as residential for purposes of this section must be based on facts and circumstances. In this case, zoning regulations and the development plan demonstrated that the district was specifically zoned to promote and regulate residential use, even though other uses were recognized and permitted, so the district was considered residential for purposes of this section. Flathead Citizens for Quality Growth, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of Adjustment, 2008 MT 1, 341 M 1, 175 P3d 282 (2008).

Board of County Commissioners Compelled to Follow Clear Statutory Language and Allow Gravel Pit in Nonresidential Area: Plaintiff owned agricultural property adjacent to a school and sought to develop a gravel pit on the property. Plaintiff applied for the appropriate special review with the Board of County Commissioners. The Board determined that a gravel pit would interfere with surrounding property uses and would violate the rights of people who lived and attended school nearby to a clean and healthful environment, citing 82-4-431 and 82-4-432 as authority for the Board's right to deny the special review. Plaintiff argued that under 76-1-113 and this section, local planning boards may not prevent the operation of a gravel pit in a nonresidential area. The District Court concluded that plaintiff accurately construed the statutes and that the Board could not deny a gravel pit in a nonresidential area. The Supreme Court affirmed. The Board ruled as if either this section did not exist or the statute unconstitutionally deprived residents of a clean and healthful environment, but as an Executive Branch agency, the Board violated the separation of powers doctrine by ruling on the constitutionality of the statute. The statutory language was clear and unambiguous, and the Board was compelled to follow the legal mandate and allow the gravel pit. Further, because the statutes were clear, the District Court was not required to reach the constitutional question and did not err in failing to address the constitutionality of the statute. Merlin Myers Revocable Trust v. Yellowstone County, 2002 MT 201, 311 M 194, 53 P3d 1268 (2002). See also St. v. Still, 273 M 261, 902 P2d 546 (1995), and Goldman Sachs v. District Court, 2002 MT 83, 309 M 289, 46 P3d 606 (2002).

Excavation and Processing of Gravel — County Zoning and Planning Inapplicable: Part of the legislative purpose of this section is clear and unambiguous. It demonstrates the Legislature's awareness that a range of activities must occur on-site in order for the owner of mineral, timber, or agricultural resources to benefit, and that the Legislature did not intend counties to have the power to prevent the owner from having that benefit. However, the range of activities that cannot be prevented is by no means clear and unambiguous. There is ambiguity in the interpretation and construction of the phrase "complete use, development, or recovery of any mineral . . . resources" and in its application to defendant's gravel extraction and processing. A reasonable construction depends, to some extent, on the circumstances to which this section is applied. Therefore, the court must look to industry practices to discern the extent to which the Legislature intended the owner of the resource to benefit. A county must at least allow the activities necessary to develop the resource to a point at which it can be effectively utilized. In the case at bar, the District Court found that processing occurs at the site of gravel extraction because the cost of transporting the material elsewhere for processing would render the mining economically unfeasible. The District Court also found that gravel processing on-site included washing, crushing, screening, and concrete and asphalt batching and that these activities were part of the recovery of gravel resources. The record supported the District Court's findings. The District Court properly held that 76-1-113 and 76-2-209 exempt the defendant from county zoning and planning. The record concerned gravel mining in a particular geographic location. The Supreme Court declined to announce a broad, sweeping interpretation on such a narrow record and restricted the holding of this opinion accordingly. (See 1991 amendment.) Missoula County v. Am. Asphalt, Inc., 216 M 423, 701 P2d 990, 42 St. Rep. 920 (1985).

Existing Telecommunications Tower Not Inclusive of Tower Not Yet Built: Mesa Communications Group (Mesa) sought a permit from Yellowstone County to construct a telecommunications tower within the county's zoning jurisdiction. County regulations required that all commercial telecommunications towers over 50 feet high be located at least 1 mile from any other communications tower. Mesa's application was denied because a 100-foot tower had been built and a 300-foot tower had been approved but not yet built within 1 mile of the tower proposed by Mesa. The regulations provided for waiver of the 1-mile restriction by the Board of County Commissioners upon special review if an applicant established that an existing tower could not accommodate the applicant's proposed antenna. Mesa requested special review and presented evidence that the proposed antenna could not be accommodated on the existing 100-foot tower, but the application was nevertheless denied because Mesa's proposed tower was still within 1 mile of the approved but as yet unconstructed 300-foot tower. Mesa sought relief from application of the 1-mile restriction in District Court. The court granted summary judgment for Mesa, concluding that the restriction applied only to towers that had been constructed, but not to unconstructed towers approved for construction. The county appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The term "existing tower" as used in the regulation was neither ambiguous nor imprecise and did not include a tower that was not yet built or even begun. Mesa Communications Group, LLC v. Impermissible Spot Zoning — Little Test Applied: The Supreme Court found illegal spot zoning by applying three prongs of the Little test and determined: (1) a proposed power plant constituted a heavy industrial use and differed significantly from agricultural uses that dominated the surrounding area; (2) the area to be rezoned was relatively small both in absolute size and in terms of landowners affected; and (3) the proposed rezone smacked of special legislation that would accrue to a single landowner to the detriment of surrounding farmers and ranchers. Moreover, the fact that the power plant could have pursued a special use permit from the board of adjustment did not undermine the spot zoning claim. Plains Grains L.P. v. Abuse of Discretion in Issuance of Conditional Use Permit for Gravel Crushing Operation — Remand for Additional Board of Adjustment Findings: A county board of adjustment granted a conditional use permit for a gravel extracting and crushing operation in a residential area, and some citizens complained, after which the gravel operation owner complained. The board defended its decision based on definitions in the development plan, which disallowed establishment of extractive industries but allowed certain gravel operations associated with agricultural operations. The District Court granted summary judgment for the board, and both the citizens and the gravel operation owner appealed. The Supreme Court reversed. Although the board did not exceed its authority in prohibiting asphalt and concrete batch plants as a condition under the conditional use permit, the board abused its discretion by granting the conditional use permit without issuing findings of fact and conclusions to support its decision. The case was remanded for additional board findings regarding whether: (1) zoning regulations and the development plan permit a gravel extraction operation that was not an accessory to normal farming operations; (2) onsite crushing operations are part of a gravel extraction as that term is used in the regulations or whether onsite crushing operations constitute a prohibited extractive industry pursuant to the regulations; and (3) conditions could be imposed to mitigate traffic impacts from the proposed operation. Conditions Met for Residential Zoning Variance: After plaintiffs built an addition on their house, they applied for a zoning variance because the addition violated the subdivision setback requirement. The variance was denied by the defendant board of adjustment, and plaintiffs appealed to District Court for a writ of certiorari. The court appointed a referee, who concluded that the variance should have been granted because: (1) the addition was not injurious to the public health or dangerous to the traveling public; (2) the addition did not impair the intent of the zoning regulation because it did not significantly alter the density of the property and actually improved the look of the property; (3) the house had suffered extensive fire damage prior to the building of the addition; (4) the configuration of the house was unusual because the main living area was on the second floor; (5) the only direction to expand the house was toward the street; and (6) plaintiffs' claim that the need to add the addition to avoid hardship was legitimate in order to accommodate plaintiffs' relative who lived in the house but was unable to negotiate the stairs to the second floor because of postpolio syndrome. The District Court adopted the referee's findings and granted the variance, and the board of adjustment appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. Evidence was substantial and sufficient to support the referee's findings. Expansion in any direction but toward the street was not a reasonable option, and without the variance, plaintiffs would have suffered a unique and unnecessary hardship. Thus, the District Court did not abuse its discretion by overturning the board's denial and granting the variance. Arkell v. County Planning Board Jurisdiction of Conditional Use Permit — Restraining Order Regarding Artificial Lighted Palm Trees Properly Granted: Defendant applied for a conditional use permit in 2007 to allow four logo signs, including an LCD display sign, and 50 lighted artificial palm trees to be installed at defendant's casino near Deer Lodge. The Powell County planning board approved the casino and three logo signs but denied approval for the LCD sign and the palm trees. Defendant believed that the planning board did not have jurisdiction over the geographical area where the casino was located, and he installed 25 palm trees in violation of the planning board's decision. The county then sought and was granted an injunction prohibiting any more palm trees and requiring removal of the 25 trees previously installed. The District Court granted the injunction and denied a motion to amend the judgment, and defendant appealed. Although the area outside the Deer Lodge city limits was located in a planning area donut jointly administered by the city and the county, that interlocal agreement was terminated in September 2006 and the area was thereafter administered by the county planning board, so the planning board did in fact have jurisdiction over defendant's conditional use permit. The District Court correctly determined that the permit was based on the change in use from primarily a convenience store to a casino, not on the erection of lighted palm trees. Zoning regulations allowed the planning board to review signage for conformity with surrounding property use when a change in use was contemplated. The county growth policy focused on maintenance of open spaces and historic heritage that reasonably promoted the general welfare of the community. The defendant had no vested right to erect artificial palm trees without county approval, and defendant's private property rights were not infringed by denial of portions of the conditional use permit. Date of Rendition of Judgment Controlling, Not Date of Filing Complaint — Res Judicata — Effect of Voluntary Dismissal: The plaintiffs filed two complaints within a week of each other that both challenged the county's denial of their request for a zoning change. The complaints named the same parties and addressed the same issues. Ultimately, the plaintiffs voluntarily dismissed the later-filed action with prejudice and the defendants amended their answer to the other complaint to include res judicata as an affirmative defense. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's grant of summary judgment in favor of the defendants, concluding that the plaintiffs' claims were barred under res judicata. The court held that the voluntary dismissal of the later-filed case constituted a final judgment that barred the claims set forth in the earlier-filed complaint. Touris v. County Planning Board Jurisdiction of Conditional Use Permit — Restraining Order Regarding Artificial Lighted Palm Trees Properly Granted: Defendant applied for a conditional use permit in 2007 to allow four logo signs, including an LCD display sign, and 50 lighted artificial palm trees to be installed at defendant's casino near Deer Lodge. The Powell County planning board approved the casino and three logo signs but denied approval for the LCD sign and the palm trees. Powell County v. Country Village, LLC, 2009 MT 294, 352 M 291, 217 P3d 508 (2009).

Res Judicata Applicable to Action Regarding County's Failure to Transfer Conditional Use Permit: Plaintiff filed an 18-count complaint for damages contending that Flathead County did not follow zoning regulations and violated plaintiff's due process and property rights when the County Board of Adjustment failed to transfer a conditional use permit to plaintiff to allow a gravel pit on property plaintiff purchased. However, plaintiff's petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the Board to transfer the conditional use permit was properly dismissed (see Beasley v. Flathead County Bd. of Adjustment, 2009 MT 120, 350 M 171, 205 P3d 812 (2009)), so the County argued that the damage complaint was res judicata. Plaintiff had appealed the Board's decision pursuant to 76-2-227 but moved to dismiss the appeal with prejudice after a local citizens' group intervened to defend the Board's decision. The District Court held that the damage complaint involved the same issues as the appeal of the decision to deny transfer of the conditional use permit, so the damage complaint was dismissed as res judicata. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Plaintiff failed to establish a protected property interest in obtaining the transfer of the permit, so the constitutional claims were properly dismissed. Likewise, plaintiff's purported tort claims involved the same subject matter and issues as the prior appeal, so res judicata applied. Plaintiff's opportunity to challenge the legality of the Board's decision to deny transfer of the permit ended when plaintiff elected to dismiss the appeal under 76-2-227 with prejudice. Section 76-2-227 remained an available remedy if plaintiff chose to apply for a conditional use permit in his own right and the application was denied, but that remedy was no longer available for the current challenges. Beasley v. Flathead County, 2009 MT 121, 350 M 177, 206 P3d 915 (2009).

Issuance of Writ of Mandamus Based on Existence of Clear Legal Duty Involving Discretionary Act Properly Denied: Plaintiff sought a writ of mandamus as the appropriate mechanism to compel a County Board of Adjustments to transfer a conditional use permit to plaintiff to allow a gravel pit on property plaintiff purchased. Plaintiff contended that all available administrative remedies had been exhausted and that no remedy existed in the course of law other than the remedies sought by the writ. The Board argued that plaintiff incorrectly used the writ for relief and that a mandamus petition did not lie to correct a previously made Board decision or to control Board discretion. The District Court agreed with the Board and pointed out that plaintiff had a remedy under 76-2-227 to have the court review an alleged previous illegal board decision, rendering a writ of mandamus inapplicable. The writ was therefore dismissed, and plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. A writ of mandamus must be granted if a clear legal duty exists and no speedy and adequate legal remedy is available, but the clear legal duty must involve a ministerial act. Here, the Board's decision to deny transfer of the conditional use permit constituted a discretionary, not ministerial, act. Thus, the Board's decision constituted a completed act that was not reviewable under a writ of mandamus. Plaintiff had an adequate remedy under 76-2-227, despite the fact that the Board failed to issue findings of fact or a written decision. Beasley v. Flathead County Bd. of Adjustment, 2009 MT 120, 350 M 171, 205 P3d 812 (2009), followed in Bostwick Properties, Inc. v. The variance was denied by the defendant board of adjustment, and plaintiffs appealed to District Court for a writ of certiorari. The District Court adopted the referee's findings and granted the variance, and the board of adjustment appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. Evidence was substantial and sufficient to support the referee's findings. Expansion in any direction but toward the street was not a reasonable option, and without the variance, plaintiffs would have suffered a unique and unnecessary hardship. Thus, the District Court did not abuse its discretion by overturning the board's denial and granting the variance. Arkell v. District Court Standard of Review of Decision of County Board of Adjustment: This section authorizes a District Court to hold a hearing and reverse, affirm, or modify a decision made by a county board of adjustment. Thus, a District Court must review a decision of a county board of adjustment for abuse of discretion, but the court is not limited to being a court of review. The court also has authority under this section to take additional evidence and issue findings and conclusions. Arkell v. Middle Cottonwood Bd. of Zoning Adjustment, 2007 MT 160, 338 M 77, 162 P3d 856 (2007). See also In re Petition of Sutey Oil Co., Inc. v. Standing of Board of Adjustment to Appeal District Court Review of Board Decision: After plaintiffs built an addition on their house, they applied for a zoning variance because the addition violated the subdivision setback requirement. The variance was denied by the defendant board of adjustment, and plaintiffs appealed to District Court for a writ of certiorari. The court granted the variance, and the board appealed. Plaintiffs contended that the board lacked standing because the board was a quasi-judicial body, not an aggrieved party, and because under 7-1-201, an administrative board may not sue or be sued independently of the local government unless authorized by state law. The Supreme Court disagreed. The writ of certiorari was directed to the board, and plaintiffs' petition named the board as the opposing party, so the board was a party to the litigation and had standing to appeal. Arkell v. Middle Cottonwood Bd. of Zoning Adjustment, 2007 MT 160, 338 M 77, 162 P3d 856 (2007).

Scope of Review: Although scope of review on Writ of Certiorari is ordinarily limited to whether the inferior tribunal has exceeded its jurisdiction, further inquiry is permitted under provisions of this statute which grant the District Courts a broader scope of review than the general Montana statutes pertaining to certiorari. Mobile Homes — Restrictive Zoning Based on Health and Safety Reasons: Summary judgment striking down a zoning ordinance restricting mobile homes to certain areas that comprised a very small percentage of the municipal area was improperly granted because factual controversies existed. The first issue to be resolved was whether the ordinance required overly restrictive placement of all mobile homes, thus unconstitutionally excluding them, or whether restrictions applied for health or safety reasons only to those mobile homes not in compliance with Uniform Building Code (UBC) standards (which had been adopted by the local government), thus allowing all UBC complying mobile homes to be located with other complying residences. If the ordinance was to be construed as excluding only non-UBC complying structures, it should then be determined whether mobile homes complied or could reasonably be altered to comply with UBC standards before determining they were unconstitutionally excluded. Martz v. Butte-Silver Bow, 196 M 348, 641 P2d 426, 39 St. Rep. 149 (1982).

Constitutionality of Planning and Zoning Districts — Interrelationship of Provisions: In 1978, a group of landowners in the Gallatin Valley initiated meetings to propose a general planning and zoning district for the approval of the County Commissioners. They hired a planner to create a master plan (now growth policy) and a lawyer to do the preliminary legal work. In the meantime, owners of two parcels of land, one of 120 acres and one of 80 acres, located within the area proposed for general planning, filed petitions for creation of separate planning and zoning districts for their own land. The petitions were filed with the express purpose of escaping the application of the proposed large zoning district. A comprehensive plan (now growth policy) was never prepared for either parcel, and the County Commissioners adopted the planning and zoning districts over the objections of the county subdivision staff. Appellants challenged the creation and implementation of the two zoning districts on the ground that they were inconsistent with governing statutory standards. Appellants further claimed that the districts were defective on constitutional grounds because the zoning decisions had not been based on rational criteria and were arbitrary and unreasonable, having no substantial relation to the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare. The Supreme Court held the statutes constitutional, ruling that when the provisions of 76-2-101 and 76-2-104 are read together, as they must be, the law provides sufficient substantive and procedural guidelines. Mont. Wildlife Fed'n v. Sager, 190 M 247, 620 P2d 1189, 37 St. Rep. 1897 (1980).

No City Commission Duty to Keep Formal Record: It was inappropriate for the District Court to issue a Writ of Mandamus, in essence directing the City Commission to undertake certain procedures that it had no duty to perform. There was no requirement under law that the City Commission, in support of a decision granting or denying a rezoning request, enter written findings of fact, keep a verbatim record of the proceedings, or conduct its proceedings in an adjudicative manner so as to give an applicant full procedural due process rights. Foster v. City Comm'n, 189 M 64, 614 P2d 1072, 37 St. Rep. 1362 (1980).

Void Building Permit: Building permit that was issued in violation of city zoning ordinance is void ab initio and creates no legal rights. State ex rel. Russell Center v. Missoula, 166 M 385, 533 P2d 1087 (1975).

Constitutionality: This part, authorizing the creation of zoning ordinances in cities and towns and the appointment of a Board of Adjustment, as well as such an ordinance involved in the case at bar, is free from constitutional objections. Freeman v. Bd. of Adjustment, 97 M 342, 34 P2d 534 (1934).

State Delegation of Police Power to Municipality: The state, in which the police power is lodged, may by act of the Legislature delegate such power to a municipality for the purpose of enacting zoning ordinances, as it did in this state by enacting Ch. 136, L. 1929 (this part). Freeman v. Bd. of Adjustment, 97 M 342, 34 P2d 534 (1934).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Municipal Planning Board Not to Be Vested With Municipal Zoning Commission Powers: Authorization does not exist for designation of a city planning board as a zoning commission, and 7-1-114 prohibits establishment of an alternative zoning system by local ordinance. City Commission Denial of Application for Site Plan Not Violative of Due Process or Equal Protection — Summary Judgment Proper: Plaintiff sought to build several mini-stores in a Bozeman area that was zoned as a neighborhood business district, but the City Commission denied the building application. Plaintiff sued the city on grounds that the Commission violated plaintiff's constitutional right to due process by arbitrarily and capriciously deciding to consider the application rather than allowing the decision to be made by the planning director, and by denying the application. The District Court concluded that the zoning ordinance gave the Commission broad discretion in granting applications for site plan approval and that because plaintiff had no protected interest in the application, plaintiff was prevented from establishing a substantive due process or equal protection claim. The Commission was held to have followed proper procedures, and because no material facts were in dispute, summary judgment was granted to the city. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. A constitutional substantive due process analysis was inapplicable in this case because plaintiff did not allege that the zoning ordinance was unconstitutional. Likewise plaintiff did not allege that the Commission treated plaintiff's application differently from applications of others owning property in the zoning district, so any equal protection claim failed as well. The City Commission considered the relevant criteria and stated its reason why plaintiff's site plan did not conform to the zoning regulations, and it was within the discretion of the Commission to reclaim and pass on plaintiff's application. Town & Country Foods, Inc. v. Bozeman, 2009 MT 72, 349 M 453, 203 P3d 1283 (2009). See also Raisler v. Burlington N. RR Co., 219 M 254, 717 P2d 535 (1985).

Onsite Construction Zoning Regulation Violative of Substantive Due Process: The Yellowstone Board of County Commissioners created a zoning district wherein dwellings had to be single-family units with not less than 1,500 square feet of floor area, with a requirement for onsite construction with new materials and for completion within 1 year. Plaintiffs moved a new modular home onto their lot, and although the home conformed to required building standards, plaintiffs were informed that the modular home did not meet the onsite construction provision. The District Court held that plaintiffs' substantive due process rights were violated because the onsite construction provision did not have a substantial bearing on the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare and was not based on a legitimate government objective. The county appealed on grounds that the regulation did have a bearing on community welfare by preserving property values. The Supreme Court disagreed. Neither the city-county planner nor a County Commissioner was able to identify any health and only minimal safety concerns. Although a resident's ability to control the environment and the preservation of property values may implicate legitimate government concerns in some zoning situations, nothing in the record indicated that those concerns actually drove the formulation of these regulations. Absent a rational relationship to a legitimate governmental interest, the onsite construction requirement violated plaintiffs' substantive due process rights. Yurczyk v. Yellowstone County, 2004 MT 3, 319 M 169, 83 P3d 266 (2004), following Boland v. Great Falls, 275 M 128, 910 P2d 890 (1996).

Onsite Construction Zoning Regulation Void for Vagueness: A county zoning regulation required that residences be built onsite. Plaintiffs who wished to place a modular home on a lot contended that the regulation was void for vagueness because the term "onsite construction" was not defined in the regulation, there was no indication of what percentage of the structure had to be built onsite, and members of the Board of County Commissioners and the zoning commission were unable to determine whether a modular home satisfied the restriction. The Supreme Court agreed that the regulation was vague, finding it difficult to imagine how the general public could be any more informed as to what the term meant when the very officials who adopted the regulation and who were to enforce it could not agree on the term's meaning. Yurczyk v. Yellowstone County, 2004 MT 3, 319 M 169, 83 P3d 266 (2004), following St. v. Martel, 273 M 143, 902 P2d 14 (1995).

Salvation Army Goods Not Junk: A citizens group sought to have a building permit for a Salvation Army warehouse revoked, arguing that it violated a local building code prohibiting the storing of junk. The Supreme Court affirmed the lower court's decision that used items intended for resale were not junk. Westside Neighborhood Betterment Comm. v. Great Falls, 242 M 58, 788 P2d 335, 47 St. Rep. 542 (1990).

Annexation Agreement — Issue of Intent One of Fact — Summary Judgment Improper: The term "residential purposes" in a "Waiver of Right to Protest Annexation and Agreement on Non-Conforming Use" was not so clear on its face as to preclude multifamily residential purposes. Supreme Court held that District Court erred in granting summary judgment for city based on the District Court's determination of the intention of the parties and remanded the case for trial on the issue of intent. Issue of intent is one of fact and cannot be decided on summary judgment. Derrenger v. Billings, 213 M 469, 691 P2d 1379, 41 St. Rep. 2276 (1984).

No Abuse of Zoning Authority: Based upon the record, Anaconda-Deer Lodge County acted within the authority delegated under this section by formulating its zoning ordinances with sensitivity to the peculiar suitabilities and most appropriate use of the land throughout the municipality. Were the Supreme Court to hold that a zoning ordinance must ensure each property owner the highest and best use of his property, an intolerable burden would be placed on local governments and the entire purpose of local planning legislation would be defeated. Cutone v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, 187 M 515, 610 P2d 691, 37 St. Rep. 693 (1980).

Elemental Fairness: Where plaintiff's building permit was denied after he had moved a house onto his lot in reliance upon Mayor's representation that the building permit had been approved, the conduct of the Town Council and the Mayor was so fundamentally unfair as to require reversal. State ex rel. Barker v. Stevensville, 164 M 375, 523 P2d 1388 (1974).

Constitutionality: Zoning ordinances and statutes authorizing them are conditional under both the Due Process Clause and the Equal Protection Clause, in that they constitute a valid exercise of the police power; i.e., they have a substantial bearing upon the public health, safety, morals, and general welfare of a community. 2005 Amendment: Chapter 542 in (4) at end of second sentence substituted "61-1-101" for "61-1-501". Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

The amendment to this section made by sec. 124, Ch. 596, L. 2005, was rendered void by sec. 167, Ch. 596, L. 2005, a coordination section.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (4), near end, substituted "mobile home or housetrailer, as defined in 61-1-501" for "mobile home, as defined in 61-4-309, or a housetrailer, as defined in 61-1-501"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 505 inserted (3) relating to rebuttable presumption concerning manufactured housing within residential zoning district; inserted (4) defining manufactured housing; inserted (5) prohibiting section being construed to limit conditions imposed in historic districts, local design review standards, existing covenants, or ability to enter into covenants; and made minor changes in style.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 505, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, certain zoning codes in Montana prohibit the placement of manufactured housing within districts where the construction of comparable site-built housing is permitted; and

WHEREAS, the reasons for treating manufactured housing differently from site-built housing have, because of significant improvements in the quality and regulation of manufactured housing, lost whatever historical justification they may once have had.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds it desirable and appropriate to discourage discrimination within zoning districts between manufactured and site-built housing."

Case Notes

Proper Application of Statutory and Regulatory Procedure in Adoption of Zoning Amendment: A citizens' group challenged the approval of a zoning change in Polson, asserting that the city council failed to properly consider the criteria in Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974), and failed to issue sufficient findings of fact. The District Court found no error and the Supreme Court agreed. The zoning amendment application addressed each Lowe criterion in detail, and the city council properly considered each element, including a report by the city planning department and public comments. Further, there is no requirement that a governing body explain in detail why it has determined whether each criterion has or has not been met. Rather, the proper standard of review is whether the information upon which the decision was based was so lacking in fact and foundation that it was clearly unreasonable and constituted an abuse of discretion. In this case, the city council had sufficient evidence to make an informed decision and followed the proper statutory and regulatory procedure in adopting the zoning amendment. The council's decision that the Lowe criteria were satisfied was not random, unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious. The District Court was affirmed. Lake County First v. Polson City Council, 2009 MT 322, 352 M 489, 218 P3d 816 (2009). See also N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006).

When Written Record Not Required: Because there is no statutory requirement that a City Commission, in granting or denying a rezoning request, enter written findings of fact, keep a verbatim record of the proceedings, and conduct the proceedings in an adjudicative manner so as to preserve applicant's full procedural due process rights, it was improper for lower court to issue Writ of Mandamus ordering City Commission to hold rehearing, when applicant failed to raise these procedural questions during initial hearing. Foster v. City Comm'n, 189 M 64, 614 P2d 1072 (1980).

Board of Adjustment Discretionary Power for Variances: Variance order granted for the operation of a law office in a zoned residential area will not be set aside without a showing that the variance was contrary to public interest and thus an abuse of discretion. Case Notes

Agreement Donating Money to Rural Special Improvement District Held Not to Supersede City Obligation to Follow Growth Policy Adopted Pursuant to Statute: Defendant developer's predecessor in interest, Sunlight, donated $335,000 to a rural special improvement district and the developer's property was allocated a certain number of "sewer loading units". Many years later, Sunlight's successor argued that this donation and agreement with the city granted the developer certain "vested density rights" to locate more homes on the subject property than the city's growth policy allowed. The Supreme Court held that the city was statutorily required to be guided by and give consideration to the general policy and pattern of development set out in the city's growth policy and that the agreement with Sunlight could not be read as superseding that statutory duty. Heffernan v. Missoula City Council, 2011 MT 91, 360 Mont. 207, 255 P.3d 80.

Proper Application of Statutory and Regulatory Procedure in Adoption of Zoning Amendment: A citizens' group challenged the approval of a zoning change in Polson, asserting that the city council failed to properly consider the criteria in Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974), and failed to issue sufficient findings of fact. The District Court found no error and the Supreme Court agreed. Further, there is no requirement that a governing body explain in detail why it has determined whether each criterion has or has not been met. Rather, the proper standard of review is whether the information upon which the decision was based was so lacking in fact and foundation that it was clearly unreasonable and constituted an abuse of discretion. In this case, the city council had sufficient evidence to make an informed decision and followed the proper statutory and regulatory procedure in adopting the zoning amendment. The council's decision that the Lowe criteria were satisfied was not random, unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious. The District Court was affirmed. Lake County First v. Zoning Arguments Based on Expired County Growth Policy Dismissed as Moot: Plaintiffs raised issues concerning a 2005 zoning amendment that were dependent upon a 1987 Flathead County growth policy. While the case was pending, the policy was subsequently replaced by a new growth policy in 2007, which provided that land use zoning in existence at the time the 2007 policy was adopted would remain in place. Because the issues were dependent on an expired growth policy, any decision by the Supreme Court on appeal would not grant effective relief or return plaintiffs to their original position, so the appeal was considered moot and was dismissed. Country Highlands Homeowners Ass'n, Inc., v. Flathead Bd. of County Commr's, 2008 MT 286, 345 M 379, 191 P3d 424 (2008), explained in Plains Grains L.P. v. Bd. of County Commr's, 2010 MT 155, 357 Mont. 61, 238 P.3d 332.

Proper Consideration of Statutory Criteria in Adopting Zoning Amendments: A Board of County Commissioners must make zoning amendments in accordance with the criteria in 76-2-203 and follow statutory procedures, including allowing a protest period, consideration of public comments, and holding a public hearing. In reviewing a zoning amendment, the Supreme Court decides whether the information upon which a Board based its decision is so lacking in fact and foundation that it is clearly unreasonable and constitutes an abuse of discretion. In this case, the Board followed the proper statutory and regulatory procedure for adopting zoning amendments and had sufficient evidence before it to make an informed decision. Absent an abuse of discretion, the zoning amendment was affirmed. N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006), following Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974), and Schanz v. Billings, 182 M 328, 597 P2d 67 (1979).

Expansion of Anchor Institutions Part of Neighborhood Plan — Approval of Zoning Proposal Affirmed: Plaintiffs contended that allowing expansion of a grocery store and a hospital did not comport with the goal of a neighborhood plan to maintain a sense of history and protect key landmarks, that the expansion would increase traffic congestion and create a pedestrian unfriendly environment, and that the scale of the big box style store was inconsistent with the character of the neighborhood, which the neighborhood plan sought to preserve. Defendants argued that the expansion stabilized two of the neighborhood's most important anchor institutions, thereby fulfilling a goal of the neighborhood plan to expand and enhance existing businesses. The City Council approved the expansion, and plaintiffs sued. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, and plaintiffs appealed, also contending that the zoning proposal constituted illegal spot zoning. The Supreme Court affirmed. Not every zoning proposal will be consistent with every goal and objective expressed in a city's growth plan documents. However, the modified zoning proposal in this case complied with the growth plan by improving existing businesses and enhancing the growth of the anchor institutions, which was considered to be in the public interest. In addition, similar businesses had historically used the area, so the zoning proposal did not constitute illegal spot zoning. Citizen Advocates for a Livable Missoula, Inc. v. City Council, 2006 MT 47, 331 M 269, 130 P3d 1259 (2006), following Little v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 M 334, 631 P2d 1282 (1981).

Onsite Construction Zoning Regulation Violative of Substantive Due Process: The Yellowstone Board of County Commissioners created a zoning district wherein dwellings had to be single-family units with not less than 1,500 square feet of floor area, with a requirement for onsite construction with new materials and for completion within 1 year. Plaintiffs moved a new modular home onto their lot, and although the home conformed to required building standards, plaintiffs were informed that the modular home did not meet the onsite construction provision. The District Court held that plaintiffs' substantive due process rights were violated because the onsite construction provision did not have a substantial bearing on the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare and was not based on a legitimate government objective. The county appealed on grounds that the regulation did have a bearing on community welfare by preserving property values. The Supreme Court disagreed. Neither the city-county planner nor a County Commissioner was able to identify any health and only minimal safety concerns. Although a resident's ability to control the environment and the preservation of property values may implicate legitimate government concerns in some zoning situations, nothing in the record indicated that those concerns actually drove the formulation of these regulations. Absent a rational relationship to a legitimate governmental interest, the onsite construction requirement violated plaintiffs' substantive due process rights. Yurczyk v. Yellowstone County, 2004 MT 3, 319 M 169, 83 P3d 266 (2004), following Boland v. Great Falls, 275 M 128, 910 P2d 890 (1996).

Onsite Construction Zoning Regulation Void for Vagueness: A county zoning regulation required that residences be built onsite. Plaintiffs who wished to place a modular home on a lot contended that the regulation was void for vagueness because the term "onsite construction" was not defined in the regulation, there was no indication of what percentage of the structure had to be built onsite, and members of the Board of County Commissioners and the zoning commission were unable to determine whether a modular home satisfied the restriction. The Supreme Court agreed that the regulation was vague, finding it difficult to imagine how the general public could be any more informed as to what the term meant when the very officials who adopted the regulation and who were to enforce it could not agree on the term's meaning. Yurczyk v. Yellowstone County, 2004 MT 3, 319 M 169, 83 P3d 266 (2004), following St. v. Martel, 273 M 143, 902 P2d 14 (1995).

Equitable Estoppel Not Applicable Absent Misrepresentation or Concealment of Material Facts: When Sutey Oil Company (Sutey) requested an expansion of its convenience store business that would involve adding a room with gambling machines, Sutey was informed by the county permit official that a special permit would not be required because gambling would be considered an expansion of an existing retail and service use but that Sutey would have to adhere to all county and state requirements before construction could commence. Sutey contended that the official's statement that a special-use permit was not required equitably estopped the county from denying the request for gambling machines. The District Court properly found nothing in the record showing any conduct, act, language, or silence on the part of the county that would lend itself to equitable estoppel because, despite the official's statement, Sutey had failed to demonstrate misrepresentation or concealment of material fact, the first element of equitable estoppel. In re Petition of Sutey Oil Co., Inc. v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County Planning Bd., 1998 MT 127, 289 M 99, 959 P2d 496, 55 St. Rep. 499 (1998).

Impact of Special-Use On-Premises Gambling on Neighboring Land Uses — Sufficient Information as Basis for Denial of Permit Notwithstanding Statutory Criteria: Sutey Oil Company (Sutey) petitioned for a special-use permit for on-premises gambling at its convenience store in Anaconda. The permit was denied by the county planning board, and the denial was affirmed by the District Court. Sutey contended that failure by the planning board to consider and comply with the statutory criteria in this section was an abuse of discretion similar to Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974). Although each of the 12 statutory criteria was not specifically evaluated, the District Court did not err in rejecting Sutey's argument that each of the criteria had to be examined or in holding that the planning board had sufficient information on which to deny the permit, based on grounds of incompatibility with neighboring single-family residential land use. In re Petition of Sutey Oil Co., Inc. v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County Planning Bd., 1998 MT 127, 289 M 99, 959 P2d 496, 55 St. Rep. 499 (1998).

Arbitrary Failure to Issue Building Permit — Violation of Due Process Rights: A citizens group sought to have the building permit for a Salvation Army warehouse revoked on the grounds that the warehouse adversely impacted the character of the neighborhood. The Supreme Court upheld the city's issuance of the permit, stating that the proposed building was in compliance with all building codes and any denial of the permit would have violated the property owner's substantive due process rights. Westside Neighborhood Betterment Comm. v. Great Falls, 242 M 58, 788 P2d 335, 47 St. Rep. 542 (1990).

Mobile Homes — Restrictive Zoning Based on Health and Safety Reasons: Summary judgment striking down a zoning ordinance restricting mobile homes to certain areas that comprised a very small percentage of the municipal area (now jurisdictional area) was improperly granted because factual controversies existed. The first issue to be resolved was whether the ordinance required overly restrictive placement of all mobile homes, thus unconstitutionally excluding them, or whether restrictions applied for health or safety reasons only to those mobile homes not in compliance with Uniform Building Code (UBC) standards (which had been adopted by the local government), thus allowing all UBC complying mobile homes to be located with other complying residences. If the ordinance was to be construed as excluding only non-UBC complying structures, it should then be determined whether mobile homes complied or could reasonably be altered to comply with UBC standards before determining they were unconstitutionally excluded. Martz v. Butte-Silver Bow, 196 M 348, 641 P2d 426, 39 St. Rep. 149 (1982).

Consolidated City-County Government — Holdover Plan — No New Planning Board: A zoning ordinance enacted after city-county consolidation based upon a comprehensive plan (now growth policy) adopted by the old City-County Planning Board prior to consolidation was proper in that the new consolidated government had not by that time formed a Planning Board having the same jurisdictional area as the consolidated local government. Martz v. Butte-Silver Bow, 196 M 348, 641 P2d 426, 39 St. Rep. 149 (1982).

Highest and Best Use of Land Not Valid Consideration in Itself: This section does not require that zoning ordinances take into account highest and best use of each parcel of real estate within a zone but rather that peculiar suitabilities and most appropriate use of land throughout municipality (now jurisdictional area) be considered. Cutone v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, 187 M 515, 610 P2d 691 (1980), followed in Mack T. Anderson Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Belgrade, 246 M 112, 803 P2d 648, 47 St. Rep. 2287 (1990), and Boland v. Great Falls, 275 M 128, 910 P2d 890, 53 St. Rep. 69 (1996).

Formal Record Requirement: The record made by the City Council (and relied on by the District Court) in exercising its zoning authority was so lacking in factual information that it cannot be said that the requirements of this section have been followed. Schanz v. Billings, 182 M 328, 597 P2d 67 (1979); Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974).

Rezoning Ordinance: A rezoning ordinance, like a zoning ordinance, is a legislative enactment and is entitled to the presumption of validity and reasonableness. However, where the information upon which a City Council and District Court act is so lacking in fact and foundation as to make judicial review impossible, it is clearly unreasonable and constitutes an abuse of discretion. An ordinance for zoning or rezoning is invalid unless made in accordance with the provisions of this section. Schanz v. Billings, 182 M 328, 597 P2d 67, 36 St. Rep. 1163 (1979), followed in The Greens at Fort Missoula, LLC v. Missoula, 271 M 398, 897 P2d 1078, 52 St. Rep. 501 (1995).

Zoning as Legislative Action — Rezoning or Granting or Denying Variance as Administrative or Quasi-Judicial Action: There is sound distinction between "zoning" and "rezoning" or granting or denying a variance. The former constitutes a legislative act, while the latter is more of an administrative or quasi-judicial act in applying provisions of existing ordinance or law and requires the making of a record upon which judicial review can be had. Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974). Distinction overruled in Schanz v. Billings, 182 M 328, 597 P2d 67 (1979). The contradictory language in the opinion was overruled in The Greens at Fort Missoula, LLC v. Missoula, 271 M 398, 897 P2d 1078, 52 St. Rep. 501 (1995), which followed Schanz. See also Foster v. City Comm'n, 189 M 64, 614 P2d 1072 (1980).

Attorney General's Opinions

No Legal Effect of Comprehensive Plan Adopted Before October 1, 1999, as Basis for New Zoning Regulations: Pursuant to the transition and applicability language in Senate Bill No. 97 (1999) (Ch. 582, L. 1999), a comprehensive plan adopted prior to October 1, 1999, has no legal effect as the basis for new local zoning or subdivision regulations unless it meets the requirements of a growth policy under 76-1-601. Zoning regulations that were adopted pursuant to master plans, comprehensive plans, and comprehensive development plans prior to October 1, 2001, are enforceable, but county and municipal zoning regulations may not be adopted or substantively revised after October 1, 2001, unless a growth policy is adopted for the entire area of the planning board having jurisdiction. Application of previously adopted zoning regulations does not constitute the adoption of zoning regulations, so rezoning is not precluded, and routine minor revisions that do not have any impact on growth policy may be made. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

therefrom or of those adjacent on either side thereof within the same block or of those directly opposite thereof extending 150 feet from the street frontage of such opposite lots, such amendment shall not become effective except by the favorable vote of three-fourths of all the members of the city or town council or legislative body of such municipality"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 2, Ch. 492, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Case Notes

Proper Application of Statutory and Regulatory Procedure in Adoption of Zoning Amendment: A citizens' group challenged the approval of a zoning change in Polson, asserting that the city council failed to properly consider the criteria in Lowe v. Missoula, 165 M 38, 525 P2d 551 (1974), and failed to issue sufficient findings of fact. The District Court found no error and the Supreme Court agreed. The zoning amendment application addressed each Lowe criterion in detail, and the city council properly considered each element, including a report by the city planning department and public comments. Further, there is no requirement that a governing body explain in detail why it has determined whether each criterion has or has not been met. Rather, the proper standard of review is whether the information upon which the decision was based was so lacking in fact and foundation that it was clearly unreasonable and constituted an abuse of discretion. In this case, the city council had sufficient evidence to make an informed decision and followed the proper statutory and regulatory procedure in adopting the zoning amendment. The council's decision that the Lowe criteria were satisfied was not random, unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious. The District Court was affirmed. Lake County First v. Polson City Council, 2009 MT 322, 352 M 489, 218 P3d 816 (2009). See also N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006).

Administrative Remedies to Be Exhausted Before Seeking District Court Relief: The Supreme Court upheld the lower court's dismissal of a suit on the basis that state law and city ordinances provided procedures for protesting zoning changes and that the plaintiffs had not exhausted those remedies. Kunz v. Butte-Silver Bow, 244 M 271, 797 P2d 224, 47 St. Rep. 1615 (1990).

When Written Record Not Required: Because there is no statutory requirement that a City Commission, in granting or denying a rezoning request, enter written findings of fact, keep a verbatim record of the proceedings, and conduct the proceedings in an adjudicative manner so as to preserve applicant's full procedural due process rights, it was improper for lower court to issue Writ of Mandamus ordering City Commission to hold rehearing, when applicant failed to raise these procedural questions during initial hearing. Foster v. City Comm'n, 189 M 64, 614 P2d 1072 (1980).

Conditions for Granting Variance: In exercise of its authority the Board of Adjustment must determine that grant of a variance would not be contrary to the public interest, that literal enforcement of the zoning ordinance would create unnecessary hardship due to conditions unique to the property, and that the spirit of the ordinance is observed and substantial justice is done. Cutone v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, 187 M 515, 610 P2d 691 (1980); Rygg v. Kalispell Bd. of Adjustment, 169 M 93, 544 P2d 1228 (1976); Lambros v. Bd. of Adjustment, 153 M 20, 452 P2d 398 (1969).

Void Building Permit: Building permit which allowed owner to use land for a purpose for which it was not zoned had the effect of rezoning without compliance with this section and was therefore void. State ex rel. Russell Center v. Missoula, 166 M 385, 533 P2d 1087 (1975).

Zoning Modification: Where zoning ordinance amending preexisting zoning ordinances of city to reclassify lots was unanimously passed by City Commission, amendatory ordinance was valid irrespective of number of protests by landowners in area. Olson v. City Comm'n, 146 M 386, 407 P2d 374 (1965).

Attorney General's Opinions

Protest Provisions Applicable When Zoning Regulation Changed by Interim Zoning Authority: The protest provisions in subsection (2) of this section are available to affected landowners whenever an existing zoning regulation is changed within the scope of subsection (1) of this section through exercise by a city or town council of the zoning authority in 76-2-306. 46 A.G. Op. 5 (1995).

Applicability of Protest Provisions to Irregularly Shaped Parcels: The protest provisions of this section apply to proposed zoning amendments affecting nonrectangular or nonsquare parcels of land. Identification of the statutorily defined protest areas must be made with reference to the particular facts. 41 A.G. Op. 68 (1986).

Area for Computing Valid Protest: A single rezoning proposal which entails separable changes in two separate districts must be considered as two separate proposals for the purpose of mapping protest areas and determining the voting requirements. 37 A.G. Op. 58 (1977).

76-2-306. Interim zoning ordinances.

Case Notes

Moratorium on Conditional-Use Permits — Zoning — Mandamus — Prohibition — Declaratory Judgment: Appellant requested a conditional-use permit for a planned shopping center. In response, the city of Helena established a 1-year moratorium on the granting of all conditional-use permits. Appellant then filed his complaint and petition for a declaratory judgment, Writ of Mandate, and order to show cause. On appeal, the court found: (1) the city may adopt a reasonable general moratorium, but the procedure required by this section must be followed; (2) the discretion of the City Commission to approve, modify, or deny the recommendation of the zoning commission cannot be controlled by Writ of Mandate, prohibition, or by declaratory judgment; and (3) a Writ of Mandate requiring the city to act on appellant's application within a reasonable time is proper under the circumstances in this case. State ex rel. Diehl Co. v. Helena, 181 M 306, 593 P2d 458, 36 St. Rep. 735 (1979).

Attorney General's Opinions

When Interim Zoning May Be Implemented — Failure to Adopt Growth Policy Not Considered Exigency That Permits Emergency Interim Zoning: In the case of both counties and municipalities, interim zoning measures may be adopted: (1) when proper zoning procedures have not been satisfied; (2) when some matter of urgency requires zoning to protect public health, safety, and welfare; (3) if the interim measure addresses the urgent matter; and (4) as long as more formal planning processes have been initiated or will be initiated within a reasonable time. The absence of a growth policy satisfies the first provision, but interim zoning cannot be implemented unless all four requirements are satisfied. Failure to adopt a growth policy does not in itself constitute an exigency that allows implementation of emergency zoning. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

Protest Provisions Applicable When Zoning Regulation Changed by Interim Zoning Authority: The protest provisions in 76-2-305(2) are available to affected landowners whenever an existing zoning regulation is changed within the scope of 76-2-305(1) through exercise by a city or town council of the zoning authority in this section. 46 A.G. Op. 5 (1995).

76-2-307. Zoning commission.

Attorney General's Opinions

Municipal Planning Board Not to Be Vested With Municipal Zoning Commission Powers: Authorization does not exist for designation of a city planning board as a zoning commission, and 7-1-114 prohibits establishment of an alternative zoning system by local ordinance. Therefore, a city exercising self-government powers may not vest its municipal planning board with powers vested in municipal zoning commissions by this section. 47 A.G. Op. 4 (1997).

76-2-308. Enforcement of zoning regulations and ordinances.

Case Notes

Writ of Mandate Improper Where Other Adequate Remedy Lies: Where builders had invested approximately $114,000 and were one-third completed, city was estopped from revoking building permit, after builders relied on it to their detriment, to meet setback requirements of city zoning ordinance. Writ of Mandate brought by residents to command builders to conform to setback requirements could not lie, as 76-2-321 through 76-2-328 provide residents with a speedy and adequate remedy at law and a Writ of Mandate is an extraordinary remedy to be permitted only when no other adequate remedy lies. State ex rel. May v. Hartson, 167 M 441, 539 P2d 376 (1975).

2003 Amendment: Chapter 599 in (1) near end after "chapter 1" inserted "for the area to be affected by the regulations". Amendment effective May 9, 2003.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 582 at beginning of (1) inserted exception clause, after "adopted" substituted "growth policy" for "master plan", and after "direction" substituted "subject to the following limits" for "but not in a county which has adopted such regulations within the contemplated area"; at beginning of (1)(a) inserted "up to 3 miles beyond the limits of" and after "7-1-4111" deleted "may not extend the application of its zoning or subdivision regulations, or both, more than 3 miles beyond its limits"; at beginning of (1)(b) inserted "up to 2 miles beyond the limits of" and after "class" deleted "may not so extend more than 2 miles beyond its limits"; at beginning of (1)(c) inserted "up to 1 mile beyond the limits of" and after "class" deleted "may not so extend more than 1 mile beyond its limits"; and made minor changes in style. Transition: Section 36, Ch. 582, L. 1999, provided: "A governing body that adopts a master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 1999, may adopt zoning regulations that are consistent with the master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 2, part 2 or 3, until October 1, 2001."

Attorney General's Opinions

What Electors Considered Qualified Voters for County Zoning Initiatives: A zoning regulation is subject to citizen initiative, and nothing in county zoning law limits qualified electors to only voters living in the area affected by the zoning regulations. Thus, in the case of county zoning regulation initiatives effective in all unincorporated areas of a county, all county residents are considered qualified voters, including those residing within incorporated areas of the county. 52 A.G. Op. 6 (2008).

Extraterritorial Extension of City Zoning Regulations: In the absence of applicable county zoning regulations, this section authorizes a city of the first class that has adopted a master plan (now growth policy) to extend its zoning regulations extraterritorially within a 3-mile radius of its corporate limits without reference to county boundary lines. 43 A.G. Op. 22 (1989).

76-2-312. Exclusion for commission-manager plan municipalities.

Case Notes

Authority of Board of County Commissioners to Approve Subdivisions Within Three-Mile Area Outside Corporate Limits: The city of Bozeman sought a reversal of 43 A.G. Op. 26 (1989), in which the Attorney General held that the Board of County Commissioners has final authority to approve subdivisions that are within the 3-mile area immediately outside the corporate limits of the city when the city has a commission-manager form of government. Bozeman asserted that this section was not a limitation on the authority of commission-manager governments but rather an acknowledgement by the Legislature that such municipal governments already had extraterritorial subdivision authority under 7-3-4444 and that this section exempted cities with a commission-manager form of government from procedural requirements that other forms of municipal government have to follow in order to exercise their extraterritorial subdivision authority. However, 7-3-4444 does not refer to the city commission, but instead clearly provides that the authority granted is to the city director of public services to ensure that the involved plat complies with platting regulations. If the plat complies, the director must approve it. The District Court properly found that this section took away the extraterritorial subdivision authority over subdivisions that Bozeman, as a commission-manager form of government, would otherwise have had under 76-2-310 and 76-2-311. Bozeman v. Racicot, 253 M 204, 832 P2d 767, 49 St. Rep. 435 (1992).

Attorney General's Opinions

Local Government Subject to State Zoning Laws — Ordinance Creating Appeal Prohibited: Section 7-1-114 prohibits a local legislative body from providing for an option appeal of decisions from the local zoning Board of Adjustment to the legislative body since 76-2-327 provides that appeal may only be to a court of record. This section authorizes the local legislative body to act instead of the Board of Adjustment in certain cases, not in addition to the Board. 38 A.G. Op. 98 (1980).

76-2-323. Powers of board of adjustment.

Case Notes

Authority of Board of Adjustment Regarding Land Use Upheld: The Bozeman Board of Adjustment acted within its jurisdiction under this section in granting a zoning variance that imposed limits on the number of waterfowl landowners can raise on their land. Schendel v. Bd. of Adjustment, 237 M 278, 774 P2d 379, 46 St. Rep. 800 (1989).

Denial of Variance Request — No Abuse: Because the record reveals that granting of a variance request to use certain property as a tavern would increase fire hazards, traffic congestion, and interference with emergency vehicle access, the Anaconda-Deer Lodge County Board of Adjustment and the District Court did not abuse their discretion in denying the request. Cutone v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, 187 M 515, 610 P2d 691, 37 St. Rep. 693 (1980).

Conditions for Granting Variance: In exercise of its authority the Board of Adjustment must determine that grant of a variance would not be contrary to the public interest, that literal enforcement of the zoning ordinance would create unnecessary hardship due to conditions unique to the property, and that the spirit of the ordinance is observed and substantial justice is done. Cutone v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, 187 M 515, 610 P2d 691 (1980); Rygg v. Kalispell Bd. of Adjustment, 169 M 93, 544 P2d 1228 (1976); Lambros v. Bd. of Adjustment, 153 M 20, 452 P2d 398 (1969).

Writ of Mandate Improper Where Other Adequate Remedy Lies: Where builders had invested approximately $114,000 and were one-third completed, city was estopped from revoking building permit, after builders relied on it to their detriment, to meet setback requirements of city zoning ordinance. Writ of Mandate brought by residents to command builders to conform to setback requirements could not lie, as 76-2-321 through 76-2-328 provide residents with a speedy and adequate remedy at law and a Writ of Mandate is an extraordinary remedy to be permitted only when no other adequate remedy lies. State ex rel. May v. Hartson, 167 M 441, 539 P2d 376 (1975).

Refusal of Variance: Refusal of variance to expand trailer court was sufficiently supported by evidence that there were sanitation problems in the neighborhood and that the hardship conditions were self-imposed by the act of the owner in proceeding with expansion before receiving the variance. Wheeler v. Armstrong, 166 M 363, 533 P2d 964 (1975).

Powers of Board of Adjustment Broad, General, and Discretionary: Contention that the powers of the Board of Adjustment (or Appeal) created by this act, authorizing the enactment of zoning ordinances in cities and towns, are limited to slight variations, such as the height of a building, the distance it must be from the street, etc., held not meritorious, but that on the contrary the Board, an administrative body vested with general power to act as a factfinding body and determine whether in any specific case unusual hardship might result from an enforcement of the strict letter of the ordinance, possesses broad and general powers with a considerable latitude for the exercise of discretion, the conferring of which powers does not constitute an unlawful delegation of legislative authority. Freeman v. Bd. of Adjustment, 97 M 342, 34 P2d 534 (1934), distinguished in Doull v. Wohlschlager, 141 M 354, 377 P2d 758 (1963).

Case Notes

City Commission Denial of Application for Site Plan Not Violative of Due Process or Equal Protection — Summary Judgment Proper: Plaintiff sought to build several mini-stores in a Bozeman area that was zoned as a neighborhood business district, but the City Commission denied the building application. Plaintiff sued the city on grounds that the Commission violated plaintiff's constitutional right to due process by arbitrarily and capriciously deciding to consider the application rather than allowing the decision to be made by the planning director, and by denying the application. The District Court concluded that the zoning ordinance gave the Commission broad discretion in granting applications for site plan approval and that because plaintiff had no protected interest in the application, plaintiff was prevented from establishing a substantive due process or equal protection claim. The Commission was held to have followed proper procedures, and because no material facts were in dispute, summary judgment was granted to the city. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. A constitutional substantive due process analysis was inapplicable in this case because plaintiff did not allege that the zoning ordinance was unconstitutional. Likewise plaintiff did not allege that the Commission treated plaintiff's application differently from applications of others owning property in the zoning district, so any equal protection claim failed as well. The City Commission considered the relevant criteria and stated its reason why plaintiff's site plan did not conform to the zoning regulations, and it was within the discretion of the Commission to reclaim and pass on plaintiff's application. Town & Country Foods, Inc. v. Bozeman, 2009 MT 72, 349 M 453, 203 P3d 1283 (2009). See also Raisler v. Burlington N. RR Co., 219 M 254, 717 P2d 535 (1985).

District Court's Subject Matter Jurisdiction Not Affected by Party's Lack of Standing — Appeal of Board of Adjustment Decision: Defendants asserted that the District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over them because plaintiffs failed to establish standing to challenge a boundary line relocation. The Supreme Court disagreed. Defendants mistakenly linked the requirement that a court have subject matter jurisdiction with the requirement that a plaintiff have standing to sue. Both are required, but they are not interdependent. Subject matter jurisdiction refers to a court's power to hear a particular type of case, while standing refers to the threshold justiciability requirement that a plaintiff have a personal stake in a particular case. If a plaintiff lacks standing, a court can grant no relief because a justiciable controversy does not exist, but a party's lack of standing does not deprive a District Court of subject matter jurisdiction. A court lacks the power to resolve a case brought by a party without standing because that party can present no actual case or controversy, not because the court has been stripped of subject matter jurisdiction. Here, the District Court had statutory subject matter jurisdiction under this section to hear the boundary line appeal of the City Board of Adjustment decision and determined that plaintiffs had standing to challenge the boundary relocation. Even though defendants stylized the appeal as a subject matter jurisdiction issue, which may be appealed by interlocutory appeal prior to final judgment, the actual issue was the District Court's ruling on plaintiffs' standing, which the Supreme Court will not review prior to final judgment. Defendants' appeal was therefore premature, so the Supreme Court dismissed the appeal and remanded for further proceedings. Ballas v. Missoula City Bd. of Adjustment, 2007 MT 299, 340 M 56, 172 P3d 1232 (2007).

Taxpayer Standing to Petition for Review of Decision of Board of Adjustment — Dismissal of Petition Proper for Failure to State Claim: Plaintiffs lived two blocks away from a property where a landowner was granted a variance to build a home on an undersized plot. Plaintiffs alleged that the Board of Adjustment abused its discretion by granting the variance. The Board moved to dismiss the claim on grounds that plaintiffs failed to state a claim for which relief could be granted because plaintiffs were not neighboring landowners and were not involved in the variance decision and also argued that plaintiffs lacked standing to challenge the variance because they did not allege any injury other than their right to orderly development of residential property zones. The District Court held that plaintiffs lacked standing and alternately dismissed plaintiffs' appeal for failure to state a claim for which relief could be granted. Plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court. The court disagreed that plaintiffs lacked standing. Under this section, any taxpayer of a municipality may petition for review of a decision of a Board of Adjustment. However, even when taking all the allegations contained in the petition in a light most favorable to plaintiffs, including an unfounded allegation that the petition was granted before the hearing date, plaintiffs' petition failed to state a claim for which relief could be granted and was properly dismissed, so the District Court was affirmed. Druffel v. Bd. of Adjustment, 2007 MT 220, 339 M 57, 168 P3d 640 (2007).

Review of Board of Adjustment Decision — Scope Broader Than General: A District Court's scope of review upon a writ of certiorari ordinarily cannot be extended further than to determine whether an inferior tribunal, board, or officer has regularly acted within its authority. However, under this section, a District Court has a broader scope of review of an appeal from a decision by the Board of Adjustment. The court may hold a hearing and reverse, modify, or affirm a Board decision. In reviewing a District Court decision involving the exercise of the statutory option to take additional evidence, the standard applied by the Supreme Court is whether the District Court abused its discretion and whether the decision was supported by substantial evidence. In re Petition of Sutey Oil Co., Inc. v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County Planning Bd., 1998 MT 127, 289 M 99, 959 P2d 496, 55 St. Rep. 499 (1998), followed in Arkell v. Middle Cottonwood Bd. of Zoning Adjustment, 2007 MT 160, 338 M 77, 162 P3d 856 (2007). See also Lambros v. Bd. of Adjustment, 153 M 20, 452 P2d 398 (1969), Cutone v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, 187 M 515, 610 P2d 691 (1980), and Whistler v. Burlington N. RR Co., 228 M 150, 741 P2d 422 (1987).

Taking Additional Evidence Within Discretion of Trial Court: This section provides the District Court with authorization to take additional evidence on an appeal from a board of adjustment. The court may, in the exercise of its discretion, determine not to take additional evidence if it appears that additional evidence is not necessary to properly dispose of the matter. Mack T. Anderson Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Belgrade, 246 M 112, 803 P2d 648, 47 St. Rep. 2287 (1990).

Review of Board of Adjustment Decision: The District Court's review under 27-25-303 of a zoning decision of the Bozeman Board of Adjustment was proper because the court determined that the Board lawfully granted a zoning variance upon which it properly placed restrictions. Schendel v. Bd. of Adjustment, 237 M 278, 774 P2d 379, 46 St. Rep. 800 (1989).

Substantial and Competent Evidence: When the evidence showed that the refusal of the Zoning Board was based on a concern for public health, that the hardship caused the owners of a trailer court was of their own creation, and that the spirit of the zoning ordinance would be observed by denying a variance for an expansion of the trailer court, there was substantial and competent evidence to sustain the action of the court sustaining the denial of the variance. Wheeler v. Armstrong, 166 M 363, 533 P2d 964 (1975).

Evidence at Hearing: Taking of additional evidence by District Court on appeal from Board of Adjustment's denial of zoning variance was not abuse of discretion even though Board did not present any additional evidence. Lambros v. Bd. of Adjustment, 153 M 20, 452 P2d 398 (1969).

Legislative Power Paramount to City Zoning Regulations: When the Legislature determines that the constitutional rights of developmentally disabled are to live and develop within community structure as a family unit rather than be segregated in isolated institutions, city zoning regulations should be revised to meet legislative requirements, as a city has no power except as conferred by legislative grants, which the legislative branch may modify or withdraw at its pleasure. Function Transfer: Pursuant to sec. 117, Ch. 609, L. 1987, the Governor by executive order transferred the function and authority contained in this section from the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services to the Department of Family Services.

1983 Amendment: In (1), changed "boarding home" to "youth group home".

Case Notes

Frivolous Resistance to Group Homes and Facilities: There is absolutely no question that under Montana law a group home for eight or fewer people is a residence and may be located in any area in the state zoned residential. The Supreme Court will not require community residential facilities to repeatedly defend their well-established right to locate in any residential area. The city's appeal from a lower court order upholding this principle is dismissed as frivolous, with costs of $500 assessed against the city in favor of the regional mental health center seeking a conditional use permit to locate a group home for eight or fewer mentally disabled adults in a residential area. Mahrt v. Kalispell, 213 M 96, 690 P2d 418, 41 St. Rep. 1979 (1984).

Effect of Restrictive Covenant on Use of Residence as Home for Developmentally Disabled Children: Restrictive covenants are to be strictly construed, and where residence for developmentally disabled children was structured as single housekeeping unit and was to all outside appearances a usual, stable, and permanent family unit, it was within the ambit and intent of subdivision restrictive covenant limiting use of property to single-family dwellings. State ex rel. Region II Child & Family Serv., Inc. v. District Court, 187 M 126, 609 P2d 245 (1980).

Constitutionality: This section is constitutional within purview of 1972 Montana Constitution and supersedes city ordinances that restrict use of residential areas to one-family dwellings only. State ex rel. Thelen v. Missoula, 168 M 375, 543 P2d 173 (1975).

Failure to File for Stay of Execution of Judgment or Injunction to Delay Subdivision Approval — Subsequent Approval Rendering Issue Moot: Plaintiff filed a complaint alleging that Gallatin County unlawfully gave preliminary approval for a subdivision. However, plaintiff did not seek an injunction to prohibit the approval process from continuing. While the action was pending, the county granted final approval of the subdivision, and the District Court granted the county's motion for summary judgment. Plaintiff timely appealed, but did not apply to the District Court or the Supreme Court for a stay of judgment. Thus, there was no order in effect that prohibited the county from approving the subdivision or to prevent the selling of subdivision lots. Plaintiff could not complain that the subdivision approval process continued when plaintiff failed to seek available remedies to preserve the status quo pending appeal. At the time of appeal, the lots had been sold and the parties could not be returned to the status quo, so the appeal was dismissed as moot. Henesh v. Bd. of Comm'rs of Gallatin County, 2007 MT 335, 340 M 239, 173 P3d 1188 (2007), followed in Povsha v. Billings, 2007 MT 353, 340 M 346, 174 P3d 515 (2007).

Shared Well Agreement Valid Despite Subdivision Requirement for Individual Wells When Approved by State and County Regulators: Despite conditions in the subdivision certificate that called for individual water wells on each tract, the predecessors in interest to the Williamses and the Schwagers entered a shared water well agreement that endured between the tract owners for about 20 years. The subdivision certificate was approved by both the state and county. A disagreement arose between the Williamses and the Schwagers regarding use of the shared well, and the Williamses sought to enjoin the Schwagers from interfering with the well. The Schwagers responded that the well was in violation of the subdivision certificate and that the shared water well agreement was thus void. The District Court concluded that the agreement was valid and enforceable, and granted the Williamses' injunction. The Schwagers appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The agreement was not void ab initio because the subdivision certificate was approved as required prior to installation of the water system, nor was the agreement illegal per se, because a county health department official testified that the parties could still obtain approval for a shared well, which was encouraged by the county in cases in which sufficient water existed, despite the requirement in the subdivision certificate that called for individual water systems. Further, the Schwagers could not attempt to benefit from repudiating the contract after previously accepting the benefits of the agreement in the form of water fees from the Williamses, and the District Court did not err in enforcing the agreement. Williams v. Schwager, 2002 MT 107, 309 M 455, 47 P3d 839 (2002).

Subdivision and Platting Act Constitutional — Permissible Delegation of Legislative Authority: Plaintiff challenged the constitutionality of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act on the grounds that the statutory preamble to the Act's exemptions amounted to an unconstitutional delegation or usurpation of legislative authority on the basis that the Act contains insufficient guidelines. The Supreme Court distinguished this case from cases relating to a legislative grant of rulemaking authority to administrative agencies based on differences in nature between agencies and local governments. The delegation of authority by the Legislature was not impermissible, and rules adopted by the county pursuant to the Act are constitutional when the rules are not inconsistent with or contradictory to the Act and when they give notice to the property owner as to what the county will look at in making a determination. State ex rel. Dreher v. Fuller, 257 M 445, 849 P2d 1045, 50 St. Rep. 349 (1993).

County Not Acting as State's Agent in Denial of Disposal Permit — Mandamus Erroneously Granted: Where the plaintiff applied to the county health department for a disposal permit but was not informed for a period of 6 years whether the permit would be granted, the District Court erred in holding that the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) was estopped from denying the permit by the county's failure to act. There were no statutes or decisions that made the county the agent of the Department at the time of the 1971 permit application. Under the rationale of St. v. District Court, 170 M 15, 550 P2d 382 (1976), the record and statutes show that the county did not act as an agent for the state in the denial of the 1971 application. Huttinga v. Pringle, 205 M 482, 668 P2d 1068, 40 St. Rep. 1444 (1983).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Subsequent Sale of Parcel Originally Used as Lien Security — State and Local Regulation Inapplicable: The provisions of Title 76 relating to local and state regulation of subdivisions do not apply to the subsequent sale of an undivided parcel that was originally used as security for a construction lien pursuant to 76-3-201, and nothing in the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act requires that the parcel be reviewed or surveyed upon subsequent sale. 42 A.G. Op. 101 (1988).

Conveyance of Land From Private Owner to U.S.D.A. — Transaction Exempt From Regulation: In the case of land conveyed from a private owner to the U.S. Department of Agriculture pursuant to 16 U.S.C. §485, since the land was subject to condemnation by the U.S. in the absence of agreement and because the term "law of eminent domain", as defined in 76-3-201, includes federal condemnation proceedings, the transaction was exempted from regulation under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Further, the Department is immune from direct enforcement of the Act because of general sovereignty principles. 42 A.G. Op. 36 (1987).

Exemption of U.S. From Filing and Enforcement Provisions: The filing and enforcement provisions of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act are inapplicable to a conveyance by the federal government pursuant to 43 U.S.C. §1716 and in which transaction the United States is the subdivider. 42 A.G. Op. 36 (1987).

Violation of Statute — Contracts Voidable: Deeds and contracts that convey land in violation of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act are voidable. The effect of the voidability of such an illegal contract or deed varies depending on the circumstances of the case. 38 A.G. Op. 106 (1980).

Curing Defect: Violations of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act may be corrected by the parties to the transaction by voiding the prior improper conveyance and conveying the land in accordance with the Act. 38 A.G. Op. 106 (1980).

Subdivision Remainders: The Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) may require that plats show the remainder of land less than 20 acres left after the segregation of subdivided parcels and has authority to review such remainders under Title 76, ch. 4. 37 A.G. Op. 74 (1977).

Affidavit of Good Faith Not to Circumvent Act — When Required: A transaction involving a contract for deed which allows the purchaser to acquire title to a portion of the land is subject to 76-3-101, et seq., if the transaction is undertaken for the purpose of evading the act, and a local governing body may require a person claiming the 76-3-201 exemption to file an affidavit of good faith without intent to circumvent. 37 A.G. Op. 41 (1977).

Contracts or Deeds: Contracts to convey land or deeds executed after July 1, 1973, in violation of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act are void. 35 A.G. Op. 65 (1974).

Effect on Prior Contracts: Montana Subdivision and Platting Act does not govern the recording of deeds prepared and executed under contracts for deed prior to July 1, 1973, but not presented for recording until after June 30, 1973. 35 A.G. Op. 55 (1973).

Regulatory Powers Regarding Subdivision Control: The 1973 Montana Subdivision and Platting Act vests control of subdivisions in local government units. The Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) has no regulatory functions regarding subdivisions outside water supply, sewage, and solid waste disposal. Part Attorney General's Opinions

State Agency Subject to Local Review in Creation of Recreational Vehicle Camping Area: The term "subdivision" is defined in 76-3-103 to include the provision of multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks argued that, as a state agency, it was exempt from the review requirement. Because exemptions are provided for some state activities but not for activities to provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles on state land, the clear implication is that the state is to stand on the same footing as a private person in this matter. It was noted that there is a trend toward abandoning the traditional view that activities of the state may be exercised free of local control. The Department is subject to local subdivision review to the extent that it creates an area which will provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. 39 A.G. Op. 14 (1981).

Case Notes

Any Division of Land Smaller Than One Hundred Sixty Acres Subject to Subdivision Review — No Exception Created by "Remainder Doctrine": Defendant filed some 30 certificates of survey with the Gallatin County Clerk and Recorder, nearly all of which divided land into two parcels, one of which was greater than 160 acres and one of which was a "remainder parcel" of less than 160 acres. The Clerk and Recorder initially believed that the parcels were not subject to subdivision review because each certificate of survey created a tract of land greater than 160 acres. However, the Clerk and Recorder subsequently initiated an action for declaratory judgment, seeking a declaration that the certificates of survey were illegal subdivisions of land because they had not been submitted for subdivision review or statutorily exempted from review. The District Court held that subdivision review was not required because the transactions created tracts of land greater than 160 acres. The Clerk and Recorder appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. By definition, a subdivision is a division of land that creates one or more parcels containing less than 160 acres. Defendant argued that divisions of land that create a tract greater than 160 acres with a "remainder" left over, even if the remainder is less than 160 acres, were not subject to review, but that argument defied the clear language of 76-3-103. Under this suggested "remainder doctrine", all land divisions would be exempt from regulation as long as one parcel greater than 160 acres was created, which was beyond the scope of the legislative intent in defining a subdivision and in creating subdivision regulations. Further, there is no exemption in 76-3-201 that encompasses a "remainder doctrine", nor is an exception or exemption to subdivision review created by the Legislature's silence on the issue. The court declined to read such an exception or exemption into the law when the Legislature did not expressly provide one. Because all but one certificate of survey created one parcel of less than 160 acres, each of those certificates of survey was subject to subdivision review, and the District Court erred in concluding otherwise. Mills v. Alta Vista Ranch, LLC, 2008 MT 214, 344 M 212, 187 P3d 627 (2008).

Approval of Preliminary Plat Not Appealable: Kalispell argued that the issuing of a preliminary plat approval by the city-county planning board was illegal because it did not conform with the master zoning plan adopted by the city and county. The Supreme Court followed the precedent of its decision in Sourdough v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 253 M 325, 833 P2d 207 (1992), holding that there is no statutory appeal process from the approval of a preliminary plat. Kalispell v. Flathead County, 260 M 258, 859 P2d 458, 50 St. Rep. 1033 (1993).

Statute of Limitations Not to Begin to Run on Covenant Running With the Land Until Demand for Performance Made: The landowners did not request that the developer build a covenanted road until 16 years after they purchased the property. The Supreme Court determined that a covenant to dedicate is an affirmative, written covenant running with the land. It is meant to benefit a purchaser's property. The Supreme Court held that public policy demands that real estate developers be strictly held to their covenants and that the statute of limitations does not begin to run on an affirmative covenant until a demand for performance has been made. Scherpenseel v. Bitney, 263 M 68, 865 P2d 1145, 50 St. Rep. 1709 (1993), distinguished in Country Estates Homeowners Ass'n, Inc. v. McMillan, 276 M 100, 915 P2d 806, 53 St. Rep. 297 (1996).

Subdivision and Platting Act Constitutional — Permissible Delegation of Legislative Authority: Plaintiff challenged the constitutionality of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act on the grounds that the statutory preamble to the Act's exemptions amounted to an unconstitutional delegation or usurpation of legislative authority on the basis that the Act contains insufficient guidelines. The Supreme Court distinguished this case from cases relating to a legislative grant of rulemaking authority to administrative agencies based on differences in nature between agencies and local governments. The delegation of authority by the Legislature was not impermissible, and rules adopted by the county pursuant to the Act are constitutional when the rules are not inconsistent with or contradictory to the Act and when they give notice to the property owner as to what the county will look at in making a determination. Dismissal of Appeal of Preliminary Subdivision Plat Approval Upheld: The Sourdough Protective Association petitioned the District Court for a writ of mandamus and moved to stay the Board of County Commissioners from further proceedings concerning a subdivision project for which it had granted preliminary approval. The Supreme Court held that the association had no basis to support its petition because the Board was not subject to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act and the Legislature had not created an appeal process for cases involving conditional approval of preliminary plats. Sourdough Protective Ass'n, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Gallatin County, 253 M 325, 833 P2d 207, 49 St. Rep. 563 (1992).

Attorney General's Opinions

Local Government Required to Adopt Subdivision Water Supply and Sewage and Solid Waste Disposal That Conform to State Regulations: Unless a local governing body makes specific findings to support the conclusion that more stringent rules are required to protect public health, a local governing body must adopt subdivision regulations for water supply and sewage and solid waste disposal that are as stringent as the state standards adopted by the Department of Environmental Quality under Title 76, ch. 4, part 1. The local government may incorporate the state regulations by reference, but the actual method of adoption is up to the discretion of the local government. 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

Original Property Boundary Established by United States Government Survey — Parcels Not Exempt From Subdivision and Platting Act: The sole fact that a parcel of land was described by references to boundaries established by a United States government survey does not exempt the parcel from the requirements of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Federal survey laws that were adopted to facilitate the conveyance of land in the public domain into private ownership are distinct from Montana subdivision laws that generally regulate divisions of land and conveyances of property among private landowners. Therefore, a property owner may not convey, without complying with Montana subdivision laws, component aliquot parts of sections and government lots that are described and identified in a deed on file with a County Clerk and Recorder and that are less than 160 acres in size. 47 A.G. Op. 10 (1997), clarifying 38 A.G. Op. 66 (1980).

Strong Public Interest in Compliance: The purpose of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act contained in 76-3-102 is in accord with the inalienable right of all Montanans to "a clean and healthful environment" (Art. II, sec. 3, Mont. Const.). The unauthorized approval of the Board of County Commissioners of a certificate of survey cannot, by itself, overcome the strong public interest (see 1993 amendment) in compliance with the provisions of the subdivision and platting law. 38 A.G. Op. 106 (1980).

Case Notes

Any Division of Land Smaller Than One Hundred Sixty Acres Subject to Subdivision Review — No Exception Created by "Remainder Doctrine": Defendant filed some 30 certificates of survey with the Gallatin County Clerk and Recorder, nearly all of which divided land into two parcels, one of which was greater than 160 acres and one of which was a "remainder parcel" of less than 160 acres. The Clerk and Recorder initially believed that the parcels were not subject to subdivision review because each certificate of survey created a tract of land greater than 160 acres. However, the Clerk and Recorder subsequently initiated an action for declaratory judgment, seeking a declaration that the certificates of survey were illegal subdivisions of land because they had not been submitted for subdivision review or statutorily exempted from review. The District Court held that subdivision review was not required because the transactions created tracts of land greater than 160 acres. The Clerk and Recorder appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. By definition, a subdivision is a division of land that creates one or more parcels containing less than 160 acres. Defendant argued that divisions of land that create a tract greater than 160 acres with a "remainder" left over, even if the remainder is less than 160 acres, were not subject to review, but that argument defied the clear language of 76-3-103. Under this suggested "remainder doctrine", all land divisions would be exempt from regulation as long as one parcel greater than 160 acres was created, which was beyond the scope of the legislative intent in defining a subdivision and in creating subdivision regulations. Further, there is no exemption in 76-3-201 that encompasses a "remainder doctrine", nor is an exception or exemption to subdivision review created by the Legislature's silence on the issue. The court declined to read such an exception or exemption into the law when the Legislature did not expressly provide one. Because all but one certificate of survey created one parcel of less than 160 acres, each of those certificates of survey was subject to subdivision review, and the District Court erred in concluding otherwise. Mills v. Alta Vista Ranch, LLC, 2008 MT 214, 344 M 212, 187 P3d 627 (2008).

Agricultural-Use Only Covenant Running With the Land — Covenant Enforceable Against Subsequent Owners Who Had Notice of Covenant: The Turners placed an agricultural-use only restrictive covenant on a 12.3-acre parcel of property, which lay within the city limits of Helena, in order to sever it from a 14.5-acre parcel and avoid subdivision review. A private residence was located on the retained parcel. After dividing the property, the Turners sold the retained parcel to another party and quit-claimed the remaining 12.3-acre parcel to the Hamptons. Greg Hampton had owned the parcel prior to its acquisition by the Turners, who had originally agreed to reconvey the parcel to Hampton under an agreement that stemmed from ongoing divorce proceedings between Hampton and his former wife. Hampton had previously sought to divide the property with a restrictive covenant in the same manner as the Turners, but Hampton's certificate of survey was rejected because Hampton was not the titled owner at the time. Shortly after the 12.3-acre parcel was quit-claimed to them, the Hamptons sought to have the county lift the covenant, but the Board of County Commissioners refused to revoke the covenant. It was undisputed that the parcel was never used for any agricultural purposes and that the parcel was in a mostly residential area coupled with undeveloped open space. On appeal, the Hamptons did not question the legality of the process by which the county chose not to lift the covenant, but rather questioned whether the covenant was one that ran with the land, thereby binding the subsequent owners of both the covenantor and covenantee. Despite the fact that Hampton claimed to be unaware of the covenant when it was quit-claimed, the District Court concluded that Hampton was well aware of the covenant and took the property subject to the covenant as would anyone else. A narrow interpretation of the agricultural-use covenant requires a covenantor and a covenantee, and the county does not satisfy that requirement; nevertheless, the Turners' estate in the retained land was benefited in that neither the Turners nor their subsequent grantee was required to undergo subdivision review. Thus, the District Court did not err in determining that the Turners placed a valid agricultural-use only covenant on the 12.3-acre parcel that ran with the land. The Hamptons' argument that no "transaction" occurred, because the conveyance should have been simultaneous with the placement of the covenant, did not comport with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, which requires county approval of the exemption prior to the sale and conveyance of any divided property. That the county, as a party to the covenant, may choose to enforce the agricultural-use restriction was a foreseeable event that the Hamptons were willing to risk for the sake of taking title to the parcel. No material facts remained in dispute as to whether the Hamptons had notice of the restrictive covenant, so the covenant was enforceable against them as a matter of law. Hampton v. Lewis & Clark County, 2001 MT 81, 305 M 103, 23 P3d 908 (2001).

No Duty of County to Determine Whether Land Transaction Constituted Attempt to Evade Subdivision Act Review: A county has no affirmative duty to analyze or investigate an exemption claimed under 76-3-207 beyond the duty to accept for review a certificate of survey or other evidence establishing the claimed exemption, nor must any defined threshold of evidence be met in order for the county to accept a claimed exemption. Hampton v. Lewis & Clark County, 2001 MT 81, 305 M 103, 23 P3d 908 (2001).

Sale of Lot Presumptively Including Access: It is a presumption, albeit disputable, that the complete use and enjoyment of a parcel of land includes access to that parcel. To overcome the presumption, the seller must offer evidence or some legal basis that would controvert the buyer's reliance on the presumption. Here, the Kester's sold the Erkers a house in Big Sky for approximately $310,000. The Kesters' attorney later discovered through the title company that a portion of the driveway, which provided sole access to the house, had not been conveyed by the deed to the lot and requested additional money for the deed to the driveway. There was no indication at the time of sale that any parcel was separate and distinct from the lot, nor did the Kesters reveal any intention to reserve the driveway from the purchase of the lot. Although the Erkers were charged with constructive notice of the contents of properly recorded instruments describing prior conveyances of the property, under Montana subdivision laws, the driveway was not an individual parcel of land at the time of purchase, so the Erkers could be charged only with knowledge that the purchase of the lot described in the common metes and bounds description included the driveway. Absent evidence to the contrary, the Erkers were entitled to the presumption that purchase of the lot included access to it and to summary judgment as a matter of law. Erker v. Kester, 1999 MT 231, 296 M 123, 988 P2d 1221, 56 St. Rep. 912 (1999), following Yellowstone Valley Co. v. Assoc. Mtg. Investors, Inc., 88 M 73, 290 P 255, 70 ALR 1002 (1930).

Local Board of Health Not Considered Governing Body Despite Interlocal Agreement: Despite the fact that a county board of health was created by interlocal agreement, the District Court erred in concluding that a local board of health is considered a governing body by definition under this section. The Montana Subdivision and Platting Act does not, under 76-3-501 and 76-3-504, authorize local boards of health to adopt and enforce regulations governing sanitation in subdivisions, regardless of size. The authority of a local board of health to regulate subdivisions derives from 50-2-116, not from the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark County Bd. of Health, 286 M 256, 950 P2d 733, 54 St. Rep. 1398 (1997).

Review, Not Regulatory, Function Applicable to Local Board of Health Control of Minor Subdivision: Section 50-2-106, when read in conjunction with 76-4-104, does not authorize a local board of health to regulate sanitation in minor subdivisions containing five or fewer parcels. By its plain language, 76-4-104 delegates to local boards of health the power to review select subdivisions but not the power to promulgate regulations. As a reviewing authority, the board's function is limited to reviewing the proposed water supply, sewage, and solid waste disposal facilities and advising the Department of Environmental Quality of its recommendation for approval or disapproval of the subdivision. However, 50-2-116 explicitly authorizes a local board of health to regulate sewage control and disposal that is not regulated by the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. The Act limits state sanitation regulation to subdivisions containing parcels of fewer than 20 acres each and precludes regulation of subdivisions in which each parcel of land contains more than 20 acres. Thus, the regulation of sanitation in subdivisions containing parcels of more than 20 acres each is clearly the responsibility of local boards of health. Nevertheless, 76-4-122 requires both state and local approval before filing a subdivision plat with the County Clerk and Recorder, and to hold that approval by the local board of health is a ministerial, nondiscretionary act would render 76-4-122 inoperative. Giving effect to the purpose of all the applicable statutes and examining the legislative history of 50-2-116, the Supreme Court held that the 1991 enactment of 50-2-116(1)(i) revealed a legislative intent to expand, rather than diminish, the authority of local boards of health to regulate subdivision sanitation. Thus, local boards of health have discretionary statutory authority to regulate all subdivisions, regardless of size, notwithstanding the state's authority to regulate certain subdivisions under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark County Bd. of Health, 286 M 256, 950 P2d 733, 54 St. Rep. 1398 (1997).

Certificate of Survey Filed Before Monuments Set Not Properly Filed Within Meaning of Subdivision Act: Stanchfield Cattle Company sought to subdivide land by dividing it into 20-acre parcels and having it surveyed. After completion of the survey, the surveyor had the certificate of survey filed, with a note on the face of the certificate stating that the monuments had not been set because of winter conditions but would be set before July 1. NFC, which held a right of first refusal on the property, sued to prevent the transfer of any property to prospective buyers, claiming that the certificate of survey had not been filed in accordance with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court decision, holding that despite whatever practices might be common among surveyors, 76-3-404(3) and an administrative rule of the Department of Commerce (now Department of Labor and Industry), ARM 8.94.3002, require that the monuments be set at the time that the certificate of survey is filed. The Supreme Court noted that it could not change the requirements of the Act and the Department rule. NFC Partners v. Stanchfield Cattle Co., 274 M 46, 905 P2d 1106, 52 St. Rep. 1115 (1995).

Certificate of Survey — May Meet Definition of Plat: Owens argued that the incorporation by reference of the certificate of survey into a sales agreement for real property could not establish an easement because under the statute, the easement would have to be created by reference to the plat describing the property being transferred. The Supreme Court held that identifying the establishing document as a plat pursuant to the statute is not a critical element in the creation of an easement and that a certificate of survey could meet the definition of a plat as set out in the statute. The certificate must do more than establish boundaries and do more than provide a property description of a single parcel of land. The certificate must establish the division of land into two parcels and show a right-of-way for a private roadway and public utility easement. Bache v. Owens, 267 M 279, 883 P2d 817, 51 St. Rep. 1001 (1994), distinguishing Swart v. Stucky, 167 M 171, 536 P2d 762 (1975). Bache v. Owens was followed in Ruana v. Grigonis, 275 M 441, 913 P2d 1247, 53 St. Rep. 216 (1996). See also Bache v. Owens, 280 M 106, 929 P2d 217, 53 St. Rep. 1320 (1996).

Division of Land by Deed in Which Grantor and Grantee Same Party — No Transfer of Title: A transfer of land requires a conveyance of title from one person to another. If the persons are the same, no transfer occurs. If there is no transfer, there is no division of land. Therefore, a landowner cannot divide a large parcel of land into smaller parcels by executing a deed in which the grantor and the grantee are the same party. Rocky Mtn. Timberlands, Inc. v. Lund, 265 M 463, 877 P2d 1018, 51 St. Rep. 653 (1994), followed in Elk Park Ranch, Inc. v. Park County, 282 M 154, 935 P2d 1131, 54 St. Rep. 293 (1997).

Condominiums as Subdivision — Unreasonable Reliance by Developers on County Opinion as to Review Requirements: The District Court awarded damages against the county in an action by condominium developers who claimed they reasonably relied to their detriment on the county's opinion that the condominiums would not be subject to subdivision review. The Supreme Court reversed after finding that the County Attorney's office maintained no confidential or professional relationship with the developers—therefore, the developers' reliance on the county's opinion was unreasonable in light of: (1) the state's determination that review would be necessary; (2) the fact that developers were represented by their own counsel; (3) the inclusion of condominiums in the definitions of "subdivision" in 76-4-102 and this section; and (4) the actual opposition to the lack of subdivision review expressed by opponents of the project, who ultimately filed suit. Young v. Flathead County, 232 M 274, 757 P2d 772, 45 St. Rep. 1047 (1988).

Subdivision Review of Four-Plex Apartments Unnecessary: Appellants brought an action to stop construction of an apartment building for failure of its builders to comply with subdivision review. The lower court granted the county's summary judgment motion based on the fact that 40 A.G. Op. 57 (1984) was rendered after construction began. During the pendency of the action, 76-3-204 was amended to clarify that new apartment buildings are exempt from subdivision review. Since an appellate court must apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision, the Supreme Court upheld the lower court decision because the law as amended makes subdivision review unnecessary for the respondents' four-plex apartment building. Lee v. Flathead County, 217 M 370, 704 P2d 1060, 42 St. Rep. 1258 (1985).

"Dedication": An action was filed to quiet title to a county road that had been established as a public road in 1909. The certificate of dedication of the 1909 plat stated that the streets therein were "granted and dedicated to the use of the public forever". In 1944, pursuant to section 1635, R.C.M. 1935, a petition for county road closure was filed. That same year the petition was granted by the County Commissioners. After 1944, neither the plaintiffs nor their predecessors in interest paid any taxes on the roadway and no portion of the roadway was fenced into the lands now belonging to the plaintiffs until 1980. The court quieted title in the plaintiffs, ruling that the 1909 plat dedication was the equivalent of a right-of-way deed under which the public acquired only the right-of-way and the incidents necessary to its enjoyment and that upon abandonment the fee in the street reverted to the abutting landowners, with each abutting landowner taking fee from the edge of his property to the center of the street. Bailey v. Ravalli Co., 201 M 138, 653 P2d 139, 39 St. Rep. 2010 (1982), followed in Herreid v. Hauck, 254 M 496, 839 P2d 571, 49 St. Rep. 884 (1992).

Definition of "Plat" — Applicability: Whenever the meaning of a word or phrase is defined in any part of the code, such definition is applicable to the same word or phrase wherever it occurs, except where a contrary intention plainly appears. The definition of "plat" found in this section of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act is clearly applicable to Title 76, ch. 4, part 1, on sanitation in subdivisions. The Department of Health and Environmental Sciences' (now Department of Environmental Quality) contention that it has broad authority in defining the term "plat" by virtue of the lack of a statutory definition under the sanitation in subdivisions law is without merit. (Case considered under pre-1977 law.) State ex rel. Dept. of Health and Environmental Sciences v. Lasorte, 182 M 267, 596 P2d 477, 36 St. Rep. 1126 (1979).

State Agency Review Under Sanitation in Subdivision Law Not Applicable to Certificate of Survey: Where after a series of real estate transactions, each denominated an "occasional sale" and evidenced by a certificate of survey, one 14-acre parcel of land became 13 separate and distinct parcels reconveyed to the original owner, the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) had no authority under the sanitation in subdivisions law to review the certificates of survey. That act provides for Department review only of subdivision plats, and Department regulation which included certificate of survey within definition of plat was held void. (Case considered under pre-1977 law; see 1993 amendments.) State ex rel. Dept. of Health and Environmental Sciences v. Lasorte, 182 M 267, 596 P2d 477, 36 St. Rep. 1126 (1979).

Agency Regulation Conflicting With Occasional Sale Exemption: Court upheld issuance of a Writ of Mandate to compel the lifting of sanitary restrictions, the filing of a certificate of survey, and an award of relator's attorney fees because the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act (prior to 1977 and 1993 amendments) clearly and unambiguously exempts occasional sales in resubdivisions and state agency's regulations were in direct conflict with the Act and exceeded delegated authority. State ex rel. Swart v. Casne, 172 M 302, 564 P2d 983 (1977), followed in State ex rel. Leach v. Visser, 234 M 438, 767 P2d 858, 45 St. Rep. 2035 (1988), with Leach distinguished in State ex rel. Dreher v. Fuller, 257 M 445, 849 P2d 1045, 50 St. Rep. 349 (1993).

Certificate of Survey Distinguished From Plat: A document entitled "A Certificate of Survey . . .", which established boundaries and property description for deed on entire single parcel and did not contain representations of a subdivision of the parcel or otherwise conform to requirements of "plat" set forth in subsection (9) of this section, was a "certificate of survey". State ex rel. Swart v. Stucky, 167 M 171, 536 P2d 762 (1975), distinguished in Bache v. Owens, 267 M 279, 883 P2d 817, 51 St. Rep. 1001 (1994).

Attorney General's Opinions

Original Property Boundary Established by United States Government Survey — Parcels Not Exempt From Subdivision and Platting Act: The sole fact that a parcel of land was described by references to boundaries established by a United States government survey does not exempt the parcel from the requirements of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Federal survey laws that were adopted to facilitate the conveyance of land in the public domain into private ownership are distinct from Montana subdivision laws that generally regulate divisions of land and conveyances of property among private landowners. Therefore, a property owner may not convey, without complying with Montana subdivision laws, component aliquot parts of sections and government lots that are described and identified in a deed on file with a County Clerk and Recorder and that are less than 160 acres in size. 47 A.G. Op. 10 (1997), clarifying 38 A.G. Op. 66 (1980).

Condominiums Not Exempt From Provisions of Subdivision and Platting Act: Condominiums are subdivisions that are not exempted under 76-3-204 from the provisions of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. 45 A.G. Op. 12 (1993).

Occasional Sale by Division Into Two Parcels — Restriction on Sale of Second Parcel: If a parcel of land is divided into two parcels, each under 20 acres in size, and one of the parcels is sold as an occasional sale, the remaining parcel may not, in the absence of another legitimately claimed exemption, be sold without subdivision review within 12 months following the sale of the first parcel. (See 1993 amendments.) 41 A.G. Op. 40 (1986).

Application of "Occasional Sale" Exception: When a 600-acre parcel of land was divided into parcels of 20 or more acres and sold to new owners who, on the same day, filed certificates of survey to divide their 20-acre parcels into two 10-acre parcels, the new owners were entitled to use the "occasional sale" exception in the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act because the initial division of the 600-acre parcel into 20-acre parcels was not a "subdivision". (See 1993 amendments.) 41 A.G. Op. 21 (1985).

Duplex, Office Building, Second Dwelling for Family Member, and Motel Room as Subdivisions: Construction of a duplex for rental or sale purposes nominally falls within the scope of a subdivision because a legally enforceable possessory interest in a portion of a formerly integrated parcel of land will be conveyed. However, the duplex project may, under certain circumstances, be excepted from subdivision status or subjected to less stringent surveying and filing requirements under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208. The availability of exception from some or all of this chapter's requirements must be determined by a careful analysis of the particular facts. The construction of an office building for rental purposes will, for similar reasons, constitute a subdivision. An exemption from full compliance with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act may nonetheless exist under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208. The existence of a legally enforceable possessory interest determines if the construction of a second dwelling for a family member constitutes a division of land. Whether such a possessory interest exists must be resolved with reference to the involved facts. Again, an exception to subdivision status and to full compliance with the Subdivision and Platting Act may arise under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208 even if a division of land has occurred. Summary review procedures under 76-3-505 (now repealed) applicable to minor subdivisions may be available as to each of these projects. Rental of hotel rooms will not, however, constitute a subdivision. Although a hotel or motel guest has a form of possessory right in his room, the involved transaction is actually the sale of a product or service which is temporary lodging. The guest is a licensee. 41 A.G. Op. 3 (1985). (Opinion rendered prior to 1985 amendment of 76-3-204.)

Tract of Four-Plexes Considered a Subdivision: A developer's construction of 48 four-plexes, to be used as rental occupancy buildings, on a tract of land owned by the developer is a "subdivision" subject to local review under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Each dwelling unit constitutes a parcel and will be segregated from the larger tract by transference of possession. Since the units will be newly constructed, the exemption in 76-3-204 does not apply. 40 A.G. Op. 57 (1984). (Opinion rendered prior to 1985 amendment of 76-3-204.)

Commencement of Time Limitation for Occasional Sale: The filing of a certificate of survey merely creates a parcel for purposes of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. The filing of the certificate is not subject to time restrictions. It is the actual sale that is restricted by 76-3-207(1)(d). The 12-month limitation period on occasional sales of land commences with the actual transfer of interest in the parcel of land from the grantor to the grantee. (See 1993 amendments.) 38 A.G. Op. 117 (1980).

Platted City Not a Platted Subdivision: A platted city does not constitute a platted subdivision for purposes of applying 76-3-207. Therefore, dividing a city lot into two parcels does not need to be reviewed as a subdivision. 38 A.G. Op. 108 (1980).

Division of Land by Deed Description: A segregation of one or more parcels of land from a larger tract held in single or undivided ownership constitutes a division of land regardless of whether the deed describes the larger tract in relation to aliquot parts of a U.S. Government survey. 38 A.G. Op. 66 (1980).

Contract Remedy Providing Transfer of Twenty-Acre Parcel of Land as Security for Contractual Obligations Violative of Subdivision Laws: As part of a sale of real property, Canton pledged a 20-acre parcel to Riverview Homes II, Ltd. (Riverview), as security in the event that Canton breached his contractual obligation to complete a proposed subdivision and construct an artificial lake. Canton breached the contract, and Riverview sought to quiet title to the 20-acre parcel. The District Court agreed that Canton breached the contract, but held that the contract remedy violated subdivision laws. Riverview appealed, contending that the parcel was exempted from subdivision review as a division of land created to provide security for a lien under 76-3-201 and that the security provision was an enforceable construction lien because of Canton's contractual obligation to construct the lake. The Supreme Court noted that Riverview neither furnished services or materials to Canton for the lake construction nor satisfied any other requirement applicable to construction liens in Title 71, ch. 3, part 5, so the construction lien theory failed. If it was not a construction lien, it had to be considered a general lien under 71-3-101, which, pursuant to Reiter v. Reiter, 237 M 220, 772 P2d 314 (1989), can be claimed only as arising from dealings in particular trades or businesses in which the existence of a general lien has been recognized by judicial decisions or if a custom to that effect can be established by evidence. General liens are looked upon with disfavor, and the court refused to recognize a general lien for breach of a contract to provide equity in land in this case. The District Court's conclusion that the 20-acre parcel was not transferable under 76-3-302, and failed to qualify for an exemption under 76-3-201, was affirmed. Riverview Homes II, Ltd. v. Canton, 2001 MT 309, 307 M 517, 38 P3d 848 (2001).

Case Notes

Failure of Condominium Projects to Meet Prerequisites for Exemption From Subdivision Review — Summary Judgment for County Proper: In a case that consolidated possible exemption of two condominium projects from subdivision review, the District Court held that the projects did not qualify for the exemption and granted summary judgment to the county for not accepting deeds and posting a reminder notice that construction of the condominiums was prohibited until subdivision review was completed. The condominium developers appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Under the 2005 version of 76-3-203 in effect at the time of the controversy, certain condominiums were exempt from review if the approval of the original division of land expressly contemplated the construction of the condominiums and the park dedication requirements in 76-3-621 were met, or if the condominium proposal was in conformance with applicable effective local zoning regulations. The developers of one project argued that the condominiums were exempt as part of the local scenic corridor zoning district. However, the scenic corridor zoning district did not address condominium development, so because the project did not conform to local zoning regulations, that project required subdivision review. The developers of the second project contended that because their parcels were created prior to enactment of state subdivision law in 1973, their parcels were entitled to a wholesale blanket exemption from subdivision review. The Supreme Court, citing Shults v. Liberty Cove, Inc., 2006 MT 247, 334 M 70, 146 P3d 710 (2006), concluded that no wholesale blanket exemption from subdivision review exists for pre-1973 tract land, so the second project was likewise subject to subdivision review. The District Court's grant of summary judgment was affirmed. Etzler v. Flathead County, 2009 MT 367, 353 M 252, 220 P3d 395 (2009).

Improper Property Development — Right of Access: Defendants developed a subdivision. Plaintiff, an adjoining landowner, sold parcels of his land to his brother and another party. The subdivision developers objected to plaintiff and his successors using the subdivision for access to their tracts. The parties could not agree on conditions of usage, and the developers attempted various methods of blocking plaintiffs' access through the subdivision. Plaintiffs sought damages from blocked access and a prescriptive easement. Defendant contended plaintiffs had intentionally violated state and local subdivision laws in the land transfers and that allowing them access would sanction the alleged illegal action. Defendant contended the trial court should not have excluded evidence of the alleged violation of subdivision laws. On appeal, the Supreme Court found nothing in Montana subdivision law which prevents an individual who has developed his property contrary to law from pursuing a claim against an adjoining subdivision for right of access. Public authorities must deal with any improprieties in development. The evidence was properly excluded as irrelevant. Smith v. Moran, 215 M 31, 693 P2d 1246, 42 St. Rep. 152 (1985).

State Agency Subject to Local Review in Creation of Recreational Vehicle Camping Area: The term "subdivision" is defined in 76-3-103 to include the provision of multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks argued that, as a state agency, it was exempt from the review requirement. Because exemptions are provided for some state activities but not for activities to provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles on state land, the clear implication is that the state is to stand on the same footing as a private person in this matter. It was noted that there is a trend toward abandoning the traditional view that activities of the state may be exercised free of local control. The Department is subject to local subdivision review to the extent that it creates an area which will provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. 39 A.G. Op. 14 (1981).

Any Division of Land Smaller Than One Hundred Sixty Acres Subject to Subdivision Review — No Exception Created by "Remainder Doctrine": Defendant filed some 30 certificates of survey with the Gallatin County Clerk and Recorder, nearly all of which divided land into two parcels, one of which was greater than 160 acres and one of which was a "remainder parcel" of less than 160 acres. The Clerk and Recorder initially believed that the parcels were not subject to subdivision review because each certificate of survey created a tract of land greater than 160 acres. However, the Clerk and Recorder subsequently initiated an action for declaratory judgment, seeking a declaration that the certificates of survey were illegal subdivisions of land because they had not been submitted for subdivision review or statutorily exempted from review. The District Court held that subdivision review was not required because the transactions created tracts of land greater than 160 acres. The Clerk and Recorder appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. By definition, a subdivision is a division of land that creates one or more parcels containing less than 160 acres. Defendant argued that divisions of land that create a tract greater than 160 acres with a "remainder" left over, even if the remainder is less than 160 acres, were not subject to review, but that argument defied the clear language of 76-3-103. Under this suggested "remainder doctrine", all land divisions would be exempt from regulation as long as one parcel greater than 160 acres was created, which was beyond the scope of the legislative intent in defining a subdivision and in creating subdivision regulations. Further, there is no exemption in 76-3-201 that encompasses a "remainder doctrine", nor is an exception or exemption to subdivision review created by the Legislature's silence on the issue. The court declined to read such an exception or exemption into the law when the Legislature did not expressly provide one. Because all but one certificate of survey created one parcel of less than 160 acres, each of those certificates of survey was subject to subdivision review, and the District Court erred in concluding otherwise. Contract Remedy Providing Transfer of Twenty-Acre Parcel of Land as Security for Contractual Obligations Violative of Subdivision Laws: As part of a sale of real property, Canton pledged a 20-acre parcel to Riverview Homes II, Ltd. Survey Requirements for Remainder Created When Highway Right-of-Way Obtained by State: A County Clerk and Recorder may not require a survey or plat for the recordation of an instrument transferring title to a remainder that was created when the state obtained property for a highway right-of-way. 44 A.G. Op. 25 (1992).

Subsequent Sale of Parcel Originally Used as Lien Security — State and Local Regulation Inapplicable: The provisions of Title 76 relating to local and state regulation of subdivisions do not apply to the subsequent sale of an undivided parcel that was originally used as security for a construction lien pursuant to this section, and nothing in the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act requires that the parcel be reviewed or surveyed upon subsequent sale. 42 A.G. Op. 101 (1988).

Conveyance of Land From Private Owner to U.S.D.A. — Transaction Exempt From Regulation: In the case of land conveyed from a private owner to the U.S. Department of Agriculture pursuant to 16 U.S.C. §485, since the land was subject to condemnation by the U.S. in the absence of agreement and because the term "law of eminent domain", as defined in 76-3-201, includes federal condemnation proceedings, the transaction was exempted from regulation under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Further, the Department is immune from direct enforcement of the Act because of general sovereignty principles. 42 A.G. Op. 36 (1987).

Exemption of U.S. From Filing and Enforcement Provisions: The filing and enforcement provisions of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act are inapplicable to a conveyance by the federal government pursuant to 43 U.S.C. §1716 and in which transaction the United States is the subdivider. 42 A.G. Op. 36 (1987).

Reference Intended Only to Designate Law Governing State Condemnation: The parenthetical reference to Title 70, chapter 30, in 76-3-201 does not limit the term "law of eminent domain" to proceedings under the state statute. The reference was intended only to designate that provision of Montana law which largely governs condemnation matters and was not designed to foreclose applicability of the exemption to agreements providing for divisions of land which could have been effected through federal condemnation proceedings. 42 A.G. Op. 36 (1987).

Portion of Lot Sold to Satisfy Delinquent Assessment: Where only a portion of a lot is included in a rural special improvement district and a sale of that portion is made to satisfy a delinquent assessment, a division of property "by operation of law" has occurred, thereby exempting the sale from the operation of this chapter. 39 A.G. Op. 48 (1982).

Review of Certificate of Survey: The Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) has authority under Title 76, ch. 4, part 1, to review certificates of survey. 38 A.G. Op. 81 (1980).

Affidavit of Good Faith Not to Circumvent Act — When Required: A transaction involving a contract for deed which allows the purchaser to acquire title to a portion of the land is subject to 76-3-101, et seq., if the transaction is undertaken for the purpose of evading the act, and a local governing body may require a person claiming the 76-3-201 exemption to file an affidavit of good faith without intent to circumvent. 37 A.G. Op. 41 (1977).

76-3-202. Exemption for structures on complying subdivided lands.

Attorney General's Opinions

Duplex, Office Building, Second Dwelling for Family Member, and Motel Room as Subdivisions: Construction of a duplex for rental or sale purposes nominally falls within the scope of a subdivision because a legally enforceable possessory interest in a portion of a formerly integrated parcel of land will be conveyed. However, the duplex project may, under certain circumstances, be excepted from subdivision status or subjected to less stringent surveying and filing requirements under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208. The availability of exception from some or all of this chapter's requirements must be determined by a careful analysis of the particular facts. The construction of an office building for rental purposes will, for similar reasons, constitute a subdivision. An exemption from full compliance with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act may nonetheless exist under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208. The existence of a legally enforceable possessory interest determines if the construction of a second dwelling for a family member constitutes a division of land. Whether such a possessory interest exists must be resolved with reference to the involved facts. Again, an exception to subdivision status and to full compliance with the Subdivision and Platting Act may arise under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208 even if a division of land has occurred. Summary review procedures under 76-3-505 (now repealed) applicable to minor subdivisions may be available as to each of these projects. Rental of hotel rooms will not, however, constitute a subdivision. Although a hotel or motel guest has a form of possessory right in his room, the involved transaction is actually the sale of a product or service which is temporary lodging. The guest is a licensee. 41 A.G. Op. 3 (1985). (Opinion rendered prior to 1985 amendment of 76-3-204.)

76-3-203. Exemption for certain condominiums.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 373 near beginning inserted "townhomes, or townhouses, as those terms are defined in 70-23-102"; in (1) and (2) inserted references to townhomes or townhouses; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 12, 2011.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 229 in introductory clause after "with" inserted "parts 5 and 6" and after "chapter" inserted "or on lots within incorporated cities and towns"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2007.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 534 inserted (1) providing a compliance exemption for condominiums that are expressly contemplated in the original division of land and that meet park dedication requirements; inserted (2) providing a compliance exemption for condominiums that are in conformance with applicable local zoning regulations; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Case Notes

Failure of Condominium Projects to Meet Prerequisites for Exemption From Subdivision Review — Summary Judgment for County Proper: In a case that consolidated possible exemption of two condominium projects from subdivision review, the District Court held that the projects did not qualify for the exemption and granted summary judgment to the county for not accepting deeds and posting a reminder notice that construction of the condominiums was prohibited until subdivision review was completed. The condominium developers appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Under the 2005 version of 76-3-203 in effect at the time of the controversy, certain condominiums were exempt from review if the approval of the original division of land expressly contemplated the construction of the condominiums and the park dedication requirements in 76-3-621 were met, or if the condominium proposal was in conformance with applicable effective local zoning regulations. The developers of one project argued that the condominiums were exempt as part of the local scenic corridor zoning district. However, the scenic corridor zoning district did not address condominium development, so because the project did not conform to local zoning regulations, that project required subdivision review. The developers of the second project contended that because their parcels were created prior to enactment of state subdivision law in 1973, their parcels were entitled to a wholesale blanket exemption from subdivision review. The Supreme Court, citing Shults v. Liberty Cove, Inc., 2006 MT 247, 334 M 70, 146 P3d 710 (2006), concluded that no wholesale blanket exemption from subdivision review exists for pre-1973 tract land, so the second project was likewise subject to subdivision review. The District Court's grant of summary judgment was affirmed. Etzler v. Flathead County, 2009 MT 367, 353 M 252, 220 P3d 395 (2009).

Subdivision Exempt From Subdivision Review — Condominium Project Also Exempt: In 1983, a parcel of land was subdivided by defendant's predecessor in interest. The division was subject to the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, but was exempt because the divided parcels exceeded the acreage threshold required for review. In 2002, defendant filed an application to divide the property into 70 lots, but the application was denied because of traffic and ground water concerns. Having been informed that condominiums could be built without subdivision review under this section, defendant did not appeal the denial of the application but went ahead with the project as a condominium development and received a zoning compliance permit and approval to create a sewer district from the county. Before building began, plaintiff filed an action to enjoin the development. The District Court found that the condominiums were subject to subdivision review the same as if they were being built on individual parcels. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. A division of land that was specifically exempt from subdivision review in 1983 was divided in compliance with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act and could not then be considered to be out of compliance with the Act because of the very exemption. Therefore, assuming that the condominium project complied with applicable zoning regulations, the development was exempt from subdivision review under this section. Shults v. Liberty Cove, Inc., 2006 MT 247, 334 M 70, 146 P3d 710 (2006).

Subdivision Review of Four-Plex Apartments Unnecessary: Appellants brought an action to stop construction of an apartment building for failure of its builders to comply with subdivision review. The lower court granted the county's summary judgment motion based on the fact that 40 A.G. Op. 57 (1984) was rendered after construction began. During the pendency of the action, 76-3-204 was amended to clarify that new apartment buildings are exempt from subdivision review. Since an appellate court must apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision, the Supreme Court upheld the lower court decision because the law as amended makes subdivision review unnecessary for the respondents' four-plex apartment building. Lee v. Flathead County, 217 M 370, 704 P2d 1060, 42 St. Rep. 1258 (1985), affirmed as law of the case in Paulson v. Lee, 229 M 164, 745 P2d 359, 44 St. Rep. 1864 (1987).

Condominiums Not Exempt From Provisions of Subdivision and Platting Act: Condominiums are subdivisions that are not exempted under this section from the provisions of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. 45 A.G. Op. 12 (1993).

Duplex, Office Building, Second Dwelling for Family Member, and Motel Room as Subdivisions: Construction of a duplex for rental or sale purposes nominally falls within the scope of a subdivision because a legally enforceable possessory interest in a portion of a formerly integrated parcel of land will be conveyed. Tract of Four-Plexes Considered a Subdivision: A developer's construction of 48 four-plexes, to be used as rental occupancy buildings, on a tract of land owned by the developer is a "subdivision" subject to local review under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Each dwelling unit constitutes a parcel and will be segregated from the larger tract by transference of possession. Since the units will be newly constructed, the exemption in 76-3-204 does not apply. 40 A.G. Op. 57 (1984). (Opinion rendered prior to 1985 amendment of 76-3-204.)

Sale of Existing Building to Condominium Unit Buyers: An owner's sale of an existing office or apartment building to individual condominium owners is exempted from the requirements of this chapter by this section. However, the sale is subject to the general prohibition of this chapter that it not be simply the final step in a scheme to evade application of this chapter. 39 A.G. Op. 74 (1982).

Condominiums as Subdivisions: The phrase "regardless of size, which provides permanent multiple space for recreational camping vehicles or mobile homes" only applies to the antecedent "area" and not to "condominiums". Condominium is an independent class expressly included in the definition of subdivision whether or not constructed on a parcel of land containing 20 acres or more. Therefore, condominiums are subject to review by the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) under the provisions of this chapter. The clause "sale, rent, lease, or other conveyance of one or more parts of a building" in 76-3-204 refers to something other than condominiums and thus does not provide an exemption for condominiums. 39 A.G. Op. 28 (1981).

State Agency Subject to Local Review in Creation of Recreational Vehicle Camping Area: The term "subdivision" is defined in 76-3-103 to include the provision of multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks argued that, as a state agency, it was exempt from the subdivision review requirement. Because exemptions are provided for some state activities but not for activities to provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles on state land, the clear implication is that the state is to stand on the same footing as a private person in this matter. It was noted that there is a trend toward abandoning the traditional view that activities of the state may be exercised free of local control. The Department is subject to local subdivision review to the extent that it creates an area which will provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. 39 A.G. Op. 14 (1981).

76-3-206. Exemption for conveyances executed prior to July 1, 1974.

Original Property Boundary Established by United States Government Survey — Parcels Not Exempt From Subdivision and Platting Act: The sole fact that a parcel of land was described by references to boundaries established by a United States government survey does not exempt the parcel from the requirements of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Federal survey laws that were adopted to facilitate the conveyance of land in the public domain into private ownership are distinct from Montana subdivision laws that generally regulate divisions of land and conveyances of property among private landowners. Therefore, a property owner may not convey, without complying with Montana subdivision laws, component aliquot parts of sections and government lots that are described and identified in a deed on file with a County Clerk and Recorder and that are less than 160 acres in size. 47 A.G. Op. 10 (1997), clarifying 38 A.G. Op. 66 (1980).

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 446 in (1) in two places after "divisions" inserted "or aggregations"; in (1)(d) at end after "boundaries" deleted "and the aggregation of lots"; inserted (1)(f) regarding aggregations of parcels or lots under certain conditions; in (2)(a) after "division" inserted "redesign, or rearrangement" and after "body" substituted "before an amended plat may be filed" for "and an amended plat must be filed"; in (2)(b) at end substituted "review under parts 5 and 6 of this chapter" for "the provisions of this chapter"; in (4) in two places after "division" inserted "or aggregation"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 252 in (1) at end inserted "and are subject to applicable zoning regulations adopted under Title 76, chapter 2". Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 436 in (3)(a) at beginning inserted "Subject to subsection (3)(b)"; inserted (3)(b) providing for the proration of property taxes on centrally assessed land, requiring the owner of the land to ensure that the prorated taxes and assessments are paid prior to the division of the land, and authorizing the county treasurer to accept partial payments of the taxes due; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Chapter 563 inserted (4) authorizing governing body of municipality or county to charge up to $200 for examination of a division of land to determine if land exempt from subdivision review. Amendment effective May 5, 2003.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 468 in (1)(c), near beginning, inserted "gift"; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 468, L. 1995, provided: "It is the intent of the legislature that the department of commerce, local government assistance division, update its model subdivision rules to minimize the fiscal impacts to local governments in implementing this legislation."

Applicability: Section 13, Ch. 468, L. 1995, provided: "Funds in a park fund that exceed $10,000 as of [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1995] must be used for park land acquisition and initial development. Funds in a park fund up to $10,000 as of [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1995] may be used for park maintenance in accordance with a formally adopted park plan."

1993 Amendments: Chapter 272 in (1)(b) substituted "a single gift or sale in each county to each member" for "a gift or sale to any member"; deleted former (1)(d) that read: "(d) a single division of a parcel outside of platted subdivisions when the transaction is an occasional sale"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 6, 1993.

Chapter 366 in (3) substituted "certified that all real property taxes and special assessments assessed and levied on the land to be divided have been paid" for "certified that no real property taxes assessed and levied on the land to be divided are delinquent"; and made minor changes in style.

Applicability: Section 7(1), Ch. 272, L. 1993, provided that this section applies "to all subdivision applications filed after passage and approval of [this act]". Approved April 6, 1993.

1989 Amendment: Inserted (1)(f) relating to relocation of common boundary between lot within platted subdivision and adjoining land outside the subdivision; and made minor change in phraseology.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (3) prohibiting division of land unless County Treasurer has certified that property taxes are not delinquent.

Case Notes

City Council Denial of Subdivision Exemption Not Violative of Constitutional Protections: The Missoula City Council denied plaintiffs' applications for exemptions from subdivision requirements, and plaintiffs appealed on grounds that denial of the applications constituted violations of constitutional rights of equal protection and public participation, was a taking, and was a tortious violation of the city council's statutory duties. The District Court granted summary judgment for the city on all the claims and plaintiffs appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The equal protection argument was merely a bald assertion that was largely unclear and poorly supported, failing to demonstrate a discriminatory purpose, and was properly dismissed on summary judgment. The takings claim failed because plaintiffs never possessed a right to obtain an exemption, but instead only lost the opportunity to obtain an exemption, and the discretion to grant or deny the exemption was properly exercised by the city council. Plaintiffs raised the public participation claim in District Court but failed to discuss the issue in briefs on appeal, so the Supreme Court declined to consider the issue. The claim of a tortious violation of the city council's statutory duties also failed as a cognizable negligence claim because plaintiffs failed to prove that the council's actions damaged plaintiffs. Roe v. Missoula, 2009 MT 417, 354 M 1, 221 P3d 1200 (2009). See also Gudmundsen v. State ex rel. Mont. St. Hosp. Warm Springs, 2009 MT 56, 349 M 297, 203 P3d 813 (2009).

Failure of Subdivision Exemption Application to Meet Lot Aggregation or Boundary Line Relocation Exemption — Denial of Application Affirmed: Plaintiffs, seeking to relocate the boundary line of their two city lots in order to create a vacant lot that could be sold, applied for a subdivision exemption. The city council denied the exemption and plaintiffs appealed, but the Supreme Court examined city regulations and affirmed. The city council concluded that the application failed to meet the lot aggregation exemption because it was essentially a boundary line relocation and not a lot aggregation, and the application failed to meet the boundary line relocation exemption because city regulations prohibited the creation of a new parcel transferable to anyone other than an adjoining property owner. The Supreme Court noted that plaintiffs questioned the process used by the city council to unilaterally review the applications, but the court held that process did not harm plaintiffs because the application suggested an intention to improperly evade subdivision review. The application would have been forwarded to the city council in any event, so it was not necessary to consider whether the application actually qualified for an exemption. The District Court was affirmed. Roe v. Missoula, 2009 MT 417, 354 M 1, 221 P3d 1200 (2009).

Improper Version of Subdivision Law Applied to Survey Exemption Question — Remand: The parents divided a parcel of land on Flathead Lake into two parcels and transferred one parcel to their daughter and her husband in 1973. The parents' adjoining parcel was transferred to other family members and ultimately transferred to plaintiff. Plaintiff sought to adjudicate the boundary between the properties. The District Court apparently applied the 2003 subdivision and platting law and found that the property division qualified for a family exemption and would not be considered as a subdivision under this section, but the court was unclear about the surveying criteria that it applied to the property division, apparently applying the subdivision law after finding that the subdivision law did not apply. The Supreme Court held that the District Court order was flawed because of the internal inconsistencies and because the District Court applied the 2003 law when it should have applied the law in effect when the property division was made in 1973. The case was therefore remanded for the District Court to determine whether additional factfinding or evidence was necessary in order to establish the proper survey criteria and resolve the boundary issue in accordance with the 1973 law. Karlson v. Rosich, 2006 MT 290, 334 M 370, 147 P3d 196 (2006).

Agricultural-Use Only Covenant Running With the Land — Covenant Enforceable Against Subsequent Owners Who Had Notice of Covenant: The Turners placed an agricultural-use only restrictive covenant on a 12.3-acre parcel of property, which lay within the city limits of Helena, in order to sever it from a 14.5-acre parcel and avoid subdivision review. A private residence was located on the retained parcel. After dividing the property, the Turners sold the retained parcel to another party and quit-claimed the remaining 12.3-acre parcel to the Hamptons. Greg Hampton had owned the parcel prior to its acquisition by the Turners, who had originally agreed to reconvey the parcel to Hampton under an agreement that stemmed from ongoing divorce proceedings between Hampton and his former wife. Hampton had previously sought to divide the property with a restrictive covenant in the same manner as the Turners, but Hampton's certificate of survey was rejected because Hampton was not the titled owner at the time. Shortly after the 12.3-acre parcel was quit-claimed to them, the Hamptons sought to have the county lift the covenant, but the Board of County Commissioners refused to revoke the covenant. It was undisputed that the parcel was never used for any agricultural purposes and that the parcel was in a mostly residential area coupled with undeveloped open space. On appeal, the Hamptons did not question the legality of the process by which the county chose not to lift the covenant, but rather questioned whether the covenant was one that ran with the land, thereby binding the subsequent owners of both the covenantor and covenantee. Despite the fact that Hampton claimed to be unaware of the covenant when it was quit-claimed, the District Court concluded that Hampton was well aware of the covenant and took the property subject to the covenant as would anyone else. A narrow interpretation of the agricultural-use covenant requires a covenantor and a covenantee, and the county does not satisfy that requirement; nevertheless, the Turners' estate in the retained land was benefited in that neither the Turners nor their subsequent grantee was required to undergo subdivision review. Thus, the District Court did not err in determining that the Turners placed a valid agricultural-use only covenant on the 12.3-acre parcel that ran with the land. The Hamptons' argument that no "transaction" occurred, because the conveyance should have been simultaneous with the placement of the covenant, did not comport with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, which requires county approval of the exemption prior to the sale and conveyance of any divided property. That the county, as a party to the covenant, may choose to enforce the agricultural-use restriction was a foreseeable event that the Hamptons were willing to risk for the sake of taking title to the parcel. No material facts remained in dispute as to whether the Hamptons had notice of the restrictive covenant, so the covenant was enforceable against them as a matter of law. Hampton v. Lewis & Clark County, 2001 MT 81, 305 M 103, 23 P3d 908 (2001).

No Duty of County to Determine Whether Land Transaction Constituted Attempt to Evade Subdivision Act Review: A county has no affirmative duty to analyze or investigate an exemption claimed under this section beyond the duty to accept for review a certificate of survey or other evidence establishing the claimed exemption, nor must any defined threshold of evidence be met in order for the county to accept a claimed exemption. Hampton v. Lewis & Clark County, 2001 MT 81, 305 M 103, 23 P3d 908 (2001).

Sale of Lot Presumptively Including Access: It is a presumption, albeit disputable, that the complete use and enjoyment of a parcel of land includes access to that parcel. To overcome the presumption, the seller must offer evidence or some legal basis that would controvert the buyer's reliance on the presumption. Here, the Kester's sold the Erkers a house in Big Sky for approximately $310,000. The Kesters' attorney later discovered through the title company that a portion of the driveway, which provided sole access to the house, had not been conveyed by the deed to the lot and requested additional money for the deed to the driveway. There was no indication at the time of sale that any parcel was separate and distinct from the lot, nor did the Kesters reveal any intention to reserve the driveway from the purchase of the lot. Although the Erkers were charged with constructive notice of the contents of properly recorded instruments describing prior conveyances of the property, under Montana subdivision laws, the driveway was not an individual parcel of land at the time of purchase, so the Erkers could be charged only with knowledge that the purchase of the lot described in the common metes and bounds description included the driveway. Absent evidence to the contrary, the Erkers were entitled to the presumption that purchase of the lot included access to it and to summary judgment as a matter of law. Erker v. Kester, 1999 MT 231, 296 M 123, 988 P2d 1221, 56 St. Rep. 912 (1999), following Yellowstone Valley Co. v. Assoc. Mtg. Investors, Inc., 88 M 73, 290 P 255, 70 ALR 1002 (1930).

Clerk Under No Clear Duty to Record Deed — Mandamus Erroneously Granted: Where the plaintiff attempted to record a deed to a 5-acre parcel of land without the removal or approval of sanitary restrictions by the county health department (which the court held was estopped from withholding its approval of a disposal permit) but was refused by the Clerk and Recorder, the District Court erred in granting a Writ of Mandamus ordering the Clerk to file a certificate of survey and record the warranty deed. The Clerk and Recorder was statutorily required to refuse to file the survey and record the deed and lacked any discretion to accept a survey absent compliance with the requirements of 76-4-122. Huttinga v. Pringle, 205 M 482, 668 P2d 1068, 40 St. Rep. 1444 (1983).

State Agency Review Under Sanitation in Subdivision Law Not Applicable to Certificate of Survey: Where after a series of real estate transactions, each denominated an "occasional sale" and evidenced by a certificate of survey, one 14-acre parcel of land became 13 separate and distinct parcels reconveyed to the original owner, the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) had no authority under the sanitation in subdivisions law to review the certificates of survey. That act provides for Department review only of subdivision plats, and Department regulation which included certificate of survey within definition of plat was held void. (Case considered under pre-1977 law; see 1993 amendments.) State ex rel. Dept. of Health & Environmental Sciences v. Lasorte, 182 M 267, 596 P2d 477, 36 St. Rep. 1126 (1979).

Administrative Regulation Proscribing Occasional Sale in Resubdivision Void: Administrative regulation under this section (prior to 1977 and 1993 amendments) requiring all resubdivisions or redesigns of previously filed subdivisions to be approved by local governing body and requiring approved amended plat to be filed was held void as proscribing the statutory exemption for occasional sales. State ex rel. Swart v. Casne, 172 M 302, 564 P2d 983 (1977), followed in State ex rel. Leach v. Visser, 234 M 438, 767 P2d 858, 45 St. Rep. 2035 (1988).

Attorney General's Opinions

Occasional Sale by Division Into Two Parcels — Restriction on Sale of Second Parcel: If a parcel of land is divided into two parcels, each under 20 acres in size, and one of the parcels is sold as an occasional sale, the remaining parcel may not, in the absence of another legitimately claimed exemption, be sold without subdivision review within 12 months following the sale of the first parcel. (See 1993 amendments.) 41 A.G. Op. 40 (1986).

Application of "Occasional Sale" Exception: When a 600-acre parcel of land was divided into parcels of 20 or more acres and sold to new owners who, on the same day, filed certificates of survey to divide their 20-acre parcels into two 10-acre parcels, the new owners were entitled to use the "occasional sale" exception in the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act because the initial division of the 600-acre parcel into 20-acre parcels was not a "subdivision". (See 1993 amendments.) 41 A.G. Op. 21 (1985).

Duplex, Office Building, Second Dwelling for Family Member, and Motel Room as Subdivisions: Construction of a duplex for rental or sale purposes nominally falls within the scope of a subdivision because a legally enforceable possessory interest in a portion of a formerly integrated parcel of land will be conveyed. However, the duplex project may, under certain circumstances, be excepted from subdivision status or subjected to less stringent surveying and filing requirements under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208. The availability of exception from some or all of this chapter's requirements must be determined by a careful analysis of the particular facts. The construction of an office building for rental purposes will, for similar reasons, constitute a subdivision. An exemption from full compliance with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act may nonetheless exist under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208. The existence of a legally enforceable possessory interest determines if the construction of a second dwelling for a family member constitutes a division of land. Whether such a possessory interest exists must be resolved with reference to the involved facts. Again, an exception to subdivision status and to full compliance with the Subdivision and Platting Act may arise under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208 even if a division of land has occurred. Summary review procedures under 76-3-505 (now repealed) applicable to minor subdivisions may be available as to each of these projects. Rental of hotel rooms will not, however, constitute a subdivision. Although a hotel or motel guest has a form of possessory right in his room, the involved transaction is actually the sale of a product or service which is temporary lodging. The guest is a licensee. 41 A.G. Op. 3 (1985). (Opinion rendered prior to 1985 amendment of 76-3-204.)

Exemption Requests — Hearing and Decision: Whether a particular exemption granted by this section is claimed "for the purpose of evading this chapter" is manifestly a question of fact and directed to the discretion of the local government. The Attorney General will not answer the question. However, to assist local government in analyzing the issue, the following observations are made: (1) since it promotes the public health and welfare, the chapter must be liberally construed to effectuate its objects and its exemptions must be narrowly applied; (2) local government may properly require one claiming an exemption to make an evidentiary showing that the exemption is justified and may establish by rule a procedure for a hearing and decision; (3) the local government should evaluate all relevant circumstances in assessing claimant's intent, including the nature of claimant's business, the prior history of the land in question and whether claimant has engaged in prior exempt transactions involving the land, and the proposed configuration of the land after the allegedly exempt transactions would be completed; and (4) a claimant who attempts to use a pattern of exempt transactions that will result in a subdivision which is not reviewed should be denied exemption. 40 A.G. Op. 16 (1983).

Occasional Sale Exemption — Number of Lots Certificate of Survey May Include: A single certificate of survey may not reflect the creation of more than one lot to be conveyed under this section's provision that a single division of a parcel outside of platted subdivisions is not a subdivision under this chapter if the transaction is an occasional sale. (See 1993 amendments.) 40 A.G. Op. 16 (1983).

Commencement of Time Limitation for Occasional Sale: The filing of a certificate of survey merely creates a parcel for purposes of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. The filing of the certificate is not subject to time restrictions. It is the actual sale that is restricted by subsection (1)(d) of this section. The 12-month limitation period on occasional sales of land commences with the actual transfer of interest in the parcel of land from the grantor to the grantee. (See 1993 amendments.) 38 A.G. Op. 117 (1980).

Platted City Not a Platted Subdivision: A platted city does not constitute a platted subdivision for purposes of applying this section. Therefore, dividing a city lot into two parcels does not need to be reviewed as a subdivision. 38 A.G. Op. 108 (1980).

Review of Certificate of Survey: The Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) has authority under Title 76, ch. 4, part 1, to review certificates of survey. 38 A.G. Op. 81 (1980).

"Immediate Family" Defined: The term "immediate family", as used in this section, means the spouse of the grantor and children of the grantor by blood or adoption. 35 A.G. Op. 70 (1974).

76-3-208. Subdivisions exempted from surveying and filing requirements but subject to review provisions.

Attorney General's Opinions

Duplex, Office Building, Second Dwelling for Family Member, and Motel Room as Subdivisions: Construction of a duplex for rental or sale purposes nominally falls within the scope of a subdivision because a legally enforceable possessory interest in a portion of a formerly integrated parcel of land will be conveyed. However, the duplex project may, under certain circumstances, be excepted from subdivision status or subjected to less stringent surveying and filing requirements under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208. The availability of exception from some or all of this chapter's requirements must be determined by a careful analysis of the particular facts. The construction of an office building for rental purposes will, for similar reasons, constitute a subdivision. An exemption from full compliance with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act may nonetheless exist under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208. The existence of a legally enforceable possessory interest determines if the construction of a second dwelling for a family member constitutes a division of land. Whether such a possessory interest exists must be resolved with reference to the involved facts. Again, an exception to subdivision status and to full compliance with the Subdivision and Platting Act may arise under 76-3-207 and 76-3-208 even if a division of land has occurred. Summary review procedures under 76-3-505 (now repealed) applicable to minor subdivisions may be available as to each of these projects. Rental of hotel rooms will not, however, constitute a subdivision. Although a hotel or motel guest has a form of possessory right in his room, the involved transaction is actually the sale of a product or service which is temporary lodging. The guest is a licensee. 41 A.G. Op. 3 (1985). (Opinion rendered prior to 1985 amendment of 76-3-204.)

Recording Prerequisites: Transfers of land that do not involve "divisions of land" or "subdivisions", as defined by the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, do not require a certificate of survey or a plat before being recorded by the Clerk and Recorder. 37 A.G. Op. 88 (1977). See also 44 A.G. Op. 25 (1992).

Case Notes

Agricultural-Use Only Covenant Running With the Land — Covenant Enforceable Against Subsequent Owners Who Had Notice of Covenant: The Turners placed an agricultural-use only restrictive covenant on a 12.3-acre parcel of property, which lay within the city limits of Helena, in order to sever it from a 14.5-acre parcel and avoid subdivision review. A private residence was located on the retained parcel. After dividing the property, the Turners sold the retained parcel to another party and quit-claimed the remaining 12.3-acre parcel to the Hamptons. Greg Hampton had owned the parcel prior to its acquisition by the Turners, who had originally agreed to reconvey the parcel to Hampton under an agreement that stemmed from ongoing divorce proceedings between Hampton and his former wife. Hampton had previously sought to divide the property with a restrictive covenant in the same manner as the Turners, but Hampton's certificate of survey was rejected because Hampton was not the titled owner at the time. Shortly after the 12.3-acre parcel was quit-claimed to them, the Hamptons sought to have the county lift the covenant, but the Board of County Commissioners refused to revoke the covenant. It was undisputed that the parcel was never used for any agricultural purposes and that the parcel was in a mostly residential area coupled with undeveloped open space. On appeal, the Hamptons did not question the legality of the process by which the county chose not to lift the covenant, but rather questioned whether the covenant was one that ran with the land, thereby binding the subsequent owners of both the covenantor and covenantee. Despite the fact that Hampton claimed to be unaware of the covenant when it was quit-claimed, the District Court concluded that Hampton was well aware of the covenant and took the property subject to the covenant as would anyone else. A narrow interpretation of the agricultural-use covenant requires a covenantor and a covenantee, and the county does not satisfy that requirement; nevertheless, the Turners' estate in the retained land was benefited in that neither the Turners nor their subsequent grantee was required to undergo subdivision review. Thus, the District Court did not err in determining that the Turners placed a valid agricultural-use only covenant on the 12.3-acre parcel that ran with the land. The Hamptons' argument that no "transaction" occurred, because the conveyance should have been simultaneous with the placement of the covenant, did not comport with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, which requires county approval of the exemption prior to the sale and conveyance of any divided property. That the county, as a party to the covenant, may choose to enforce the agricultural-use restriction was a foreseeable event that the Hamptons were willing to risk for the sake of taking title to the parcel. No material facts remained in dispute as to whether the Hamptons had notice of the restrictive covenant, so the covenant was enforceable against them as a matter of law. Hampton v. Lewis & Clark County, 2001 MT 81, 305 M 103, 23 P3d 908 (2001).

No Duty of County to Determine Whether Land Transaction Constituted Attempt to Evade Subdivision Act Review: A county has no affirmative duty to analyze or investigate an exemption claimed under 76-3-207 beyond the duty to accept for review a certificate of survey or other evidence establishing the claimed exemption, nor must any defined threshold of evidence be met in order for the county to accept a claimed exemption. Hampton v. Lewis & Clark County, 2001 MT 81, 305 M 103, 23 P3d 908 (2001).

Standing of Person in Zoning District to Bring Action Against Developer of Condominiums in Same District: To establish standing to bring suit, a complaining party must clearly allege past, present, or threatened injury to a property right or a civil right that is distinguishable from an injury to the public generally. Thus, a property owner who lived in the same zoning district as a proposed condominium development and who would be directly affected by a subdivision review or the lack of a subdivision review had standing to challenge the development. When Conveyance of Land Void: Contracts to convey land made on or after July 1, 1973, in violation of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, are void. Contract Remedy Providing Transfer of Twenty-Acre Parcel of Land as Security for Contractual Obligations Violative of Subdivision Laws: As part of a sale of real property, Canton pledged a 20-acre parcel to Riverview Homes II, Ltd. (Riverview), as security in the event that Canton breached his contractual obligation to complete a proposed subdivision and construct an artificial lake. Canton breached the contract, and Riverview sought to quiet title to the 20-acre parcel. The District Court agreed that Canton breached the contract, but held that the contract remedy violated subdivision laws. Riverview appealed, contending that the parcel was exempted from subdivision review as a division of land created to provide security for a lien under 76-3-201 and that the security provision was an enforceable construction lien because of Canton's contractual obligation to construct the lake. The Supreme Court noted that Riverview neither furnished services or materials to Canton for the lake construction nor satisfied any other requirement applicable to construction liens in Title 71, ch. 3, part 5, so the construction lien theory failed. If it was not a construction lien, it had to be considered a general lien under 71-3-101, which, pursuant to Reiter v. Reiter, 237 M 220, 772 P2d 314 (1989), can be claimed only as arising from dealings in particular trades or businesses in which the existence of a general lien has been recognized by judicial decisions or if a custom to that effect can be established by evidence. General liens are looked upon with disfavor, and the court refused to recognize a general lien for breach of a contract to provide equity in land in this case. The District Court's conclusion that the 20-acre parcel was not transferable under 76-3-302, and failed to qualify for an exemption under 76-3-201, was affirmed. Riverview Homes II, Ltd. v. Canton, 2001 MT 309, 307 M 517, 38 P3d 848 (2001).

Failure to File Plat — Deed Invalid: A warranty deed attempting to transfer 2 acres of a 12.63-acre tract was invalid because a subdivision plat was not filed before the transfer. The County Clerk and Recorder should not have recorded the deed. McDonald v. Jones, 258 M 211, 852 P2d 588, 50 St. Rep. 502 (1993). Following the ruling in this case, the District Court took judicial notice of the underlying case and granted summary judgment to Insured Titles, Inc., after determining that the exclusions of the insurance policy applied and that McDonald knowingly altered the legal description of the property, thus defeating coverage under the policy. The grant of summary judgment was affirmed in Insured Titles, Inc. v. McDonald, 275 M 111, 911 P2d 209, 53 St. Rep. 61 (1996).

Improper Property Development — Right of Access: Defendants developed a subdivision. Plaintiff, an adjoining landowner, sold parcels of his land to his brother and another party. The subdivision developers objected to plaintiff and his successors using the subdivision for access to their tracts. The parties could not agree on conditions of usage, and the developers attempted various methods of blocking plaintiffs' access through the subdivision. Plaintiffs sought damages from blocked access and a prescriptive easement. Defendant contended plaintiffs had intentionally violated state and local subdivision laws in the land transfers and that allowing them access would sanction the alleged illegal action. Defendant contended the trial court should not have excluded evidence of the alleged violation of subdivision laws. On appeal, the Supreme Court found nothing in Montana subdivision law which prevents an individual who has developed his property contrary to law from pursuing a claim against an adjoining subdivision for right of access. Public authorities must deal with any improprieties in development. The evidence was properly excluded as irrelevant. Smith v. Moran, 215 M 31, 693 P2d 1246, 42 St. Rep. 152 (1985).

1987 Amendment: At beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; inserted (2) restricting surveying requirements to parcels or tracts proposed for transfer that were created after July 1, 1973; inserted (3) establishing that documents showing that parcel or tract existed before July 1, 1973, do not constitute and may not be substituted for a legal description of the property; and made minor changes in grammar.

Contract Remedy Providing Transfer of Twenty-Acre Parcel of Land as Security for Contractual Obligations Violative of Subdivision Laws: As part of a sale of real property, Canton pledged a 20-acre parcel to Riverview Homes II, Ltd. Canton breached the contract, and Riverview sought to quiet title to the 20-acre parcel. Riverview appealed, contending that the parcel was exempted from subdivision review as a division of land created to provide security for a lien under 76-3-201 and that the security provision was an enforceable construction lien because of Canton's contractual obligation to construct the lake. The Supreme Court noted that Riverview neither furnished services or materials to Canton for the lake construction nor satisfied any other requirement applicable to construction liens in Title 71, ch. 3, part 5, so the construction lien theory failed. If it was not a construction lien, it had to be considered a general lien under 71-3-101, which, pursuant to Reiter v. General liens are looked upon with disfavor, and the court refused to recognize a general lien for breach of a contract to provide equity in land in this case. The District Court's conclusion that the 20-acre parcel was not transferable under this section, and failed to qualify for an exemption under 76-3-201, was affirmed. Riverview Homes II, Ltd. v. Canton, 2001 MT 309, 307 M 517, 38 P3d 848 (2001).

No Duty of Clerk and Recorder to Record Invalid Deed — Writ of Mandamus Improper: Under 7-4-2617, a County Clerk and Recorder is obligated to record only an instrument, paper, or notice that is authorized by law to be recorded. Under this section, a County Clerk and Recorder has a mandatory duty not to accept and record an otherwise proper deed if it fails to comply with the applicable survey requirements. The District Court did not err in refusing to issue a writ of mandamus requiring recording of deeds when a landowner attempted to divide a large parcel of land into smaller parcels by executing a deed in which the landowner was both grantor and grantee, which is not authorized by law, and when the statutorily required plat was not filed. Rocky Mtn. Timberlands, Inc. v. Lund, 265 M 463, 877 P2d 1018, 51 St. Rep. 653 (1994).

Failure to File Plat — Deed Invalid: A warranty deed attempting to transfer 2 acres of a 12.63-acre tract was invalid because a subdivision plat was not filed before the transfer. The grant of summary judgment was affirmed in Insured Titles, Inc. v. McDonald, 275 M 111, 911 P2d 209, 53 St. Rep. 61 (1996).

Agency Regulation Conflicting With Occasional Sale Exemption: Court upheld issuance of a Writ of Mandate to compel the lifting of sanitary restrictions, the filing of a certificate of survey, and an award of relator's attorney fees because the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act (prior to 1977 amendment of 76-3-207) clearly and unambiguously exempts occasional sales in resubdivisions and state agency's regulations were in direct conflict with the Act and exceeded delegated authority. (See 1993 amendments to 76-3-103 and 76-3-207.) State ex rel. Swart v. Casne, 172 M 302, 564 P2d 983 (1977).

Survey Requirements for Remainder Created When Highway Right-of-Way Obtained by State: A County Clerk and Recorder may not require a survey or plat for the recordation of an instrument transferring title to a remainder that was created when the state obtained property for a highway right-of-way. 44 A.G. Op. 25 (1992).

Recording Prerequisites: Transfers of land that do not involve "divisions of land" or "subdivisions", as defined by the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, do not require a certificate of survey or a plat before being recorded by the Clerk and Recorder. 37 A.G. Refusal to Record Deed: A County Clerk and Recorder may not refuse to record a deed that purports to convey subdivided land for which no approved certified plat has been filed. 35 A.G. Op. 25 (1973). (Opinion rendered prior to 1974 amendment.)

Case Notes

Building Restriction Line on Subdivision Plat Creating Negative Easement Precluding Building in Restricted Portion of Lot: Defendant constructed a garage that was located on both sides of a building restriction line marked on a subdivision plat. Plaintiffs sought removal of the portion of the garage that crossed the building restriction line. Although defendant was aware of the building restriction line when purchasing the subdivision property, defendant contended that an easement was not created because the deed failed to have express language of the grantor's request to create an easement and because the deed did not identify the dominant and servient tenement or give the servient tenement knowledge of the building restriction line's use and necessity. The District Court found that defendant was aware of the building restriction by virtue of the recorded plat and a special exception to the title policy obtained upon purchase of the property, and defendant was ordered to remove the garage. Defendant appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The description of the building restriction line on the subdivision plat clearly created a negative easement in plaintiffs' favor, restricting any building on a portion of defendant's lot, so the District Court did not err in prohibiting defendant from building in that area. Plaintiffs' easement was thus enforceable and removal of the garage was proper. Conway v. Miller, 2010 MT 103, 356 Mont. 231, 232 P.3d 390, following Halverson v. Turner, 268 Mont. 168, 885 P.2d 1285 (1994), and Pearson v. Virginia City Ranches Ass'n, 2000 MT 12, 298 Mont. 52, 993 P.2d 688, and distinguishing Blazer v. Wall, 2008 MT 145, 343 Mont. 173, 183 P.3d 84.

No Reserved Easement to Off-Survey Property Absent Language in Deed Expressly Reserving Easement: Blazer asserted that an easement was reserved across Wall's property that allowed access to Blazer's off-survey property. The District Court agreed and ordered Wall to remove encroachments in the easement. On appeal, the Supreme Court disagreed. An express easement arises when a property owner conveys property that includes language in the conveyance reserving the right to use some part of the transferred land as a right-of-way or when the instrument of conveyance to a recorded plat or certificate of survey adequately describes an easement. Additionally, an easement by reservation may be established only when the dominant and servient estates are split from single ownership, and express depiction of an easement on a referenced plat or certificate of survey is not sufficient, in and of itself, to create an easement for the benefit of a stranger to the deed. In this case, there was no express language in the transaction documents reserving an easement to an adjoining parcel or to Blazer's off-survey property, so no easement for Blazer was created. The District Court was reversed. Blazer v. Wall, 2008 MT 145, 343 M 173, 183 P3d 84 (2008), following Bache v. Owens, 267 M 279, 883 P2d 817

(1994), Halverson v. Turner, 268 M 168, 885 P2d 1285 (1994), Ruana v. Grigonis, 275 M 441, 913 P2d 1247 (1996), and Pearson v. Virginia City Ranches Ass'n, 2000 MT 12, 298 M 52, 993 P2d 688 (2000).

Bridle Path Easement — Express Easement by Reservation Versus Implied Easement — Extrinsic Evidence Regarding Parties' Intent Inadmissible: Purchasers in a subdivision had language in their deeds creating an express easement for a bridle path in the subdivision. The bridle path was never built, and over the years, the easement was obstructed by improvements on the lots of several subdivision residents. Eventually, the subdivision association attempted to extinguish the easement at a meeting of the board of directors. Some residents asked the District Court to establish the validity of the easement and to restrain obstruction of the easement, and their request was granted by partial summary judgment. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted the difference between an implied easement, which is a creature of equity dependent on the intent of the parties, and an express easement by reservation, which is a creature of the documents of conveyance and the record. An express easement by reservation arises when the purchaser's deed refers to the plat where the easement is clearly depicted and labeled. In this case, the intent of the parties to create a bridle path easement was manifested through the language in the deeds and the plat, so under 28-2-905, extrinsic evidence regarding the intent of the parties was inadmissible. Further, the subdivision association was given oversight of the easement, but not ownership of it, and so lacked authority to extinguish the easement. The lower court's finding that a valid bridle path easement existed was affirmed. Pearson v. Virginia City Ranches Ass'n, 2000 MT 12, 298 M 52, 993 P2d 688, 57 St. Rep. 65 (2000), following Missoula v. Mix, 123 M 365, 214 P2d 212 (1950), Bache v. Owens, 267 M 279, 883 P2d 817 (1994), Halverson v. Turner, 268 M 168, 885 P2d 1285 (1994), and Tungsten Holdings, Inc. v. Parker, 282 M 387, 938 P2d 641, 54 St. Rep. 399 (1997), and distinguishing White v. Landerdahl, 191 M 554, 625 P2d 1145, 38 St. Rep. 412 (1981).

Conveyance Referencing Certificate of Survey Creates Express Easement Running With Land: Dahlia Halverson recorded a certificate of survey (COS) showing a 30-foot easement for a road upon her property in favor of adjoining property. Later, she conveyed the property subject to the easement by quitclaim deed to Shirley Turner and included a land description and a reference to the previously recorded COS. Her successor in interest claimed that the Turner property was subject to the easement originally created in the COS. Relying upon Benson v. Pyfer, 240 M 175, 783 P2d 923 (1989), and Bache v. Owens, 267 M 279, 883 P2d 817, 51 St. Rep. 1001 (1994), the Supreme Court held that the reference in the quitclaim deed to the previously filed COS that noted the creation of the easement was sufficient to create in the Turner property an express easement running with the land that was not personal to Dahlia Halverson and was therefore available to her successor in interest. Halverson v. Turner, 268 M 168, 885 P2d 1285, 51 St. Rep. 1233 (1994), followed in Ruana v. Grigonis, 275 M 441, 913 P2d 1247, 53 St. Rep. 216 (1996), and Pearson v. Virginia City Ranches Ass'n, 2000 MT 12, 298 M 52, 993 P2d 688, 57 St. Rep. 65 (2000). Ruana was followed in Reichle v. Anderson, 284 M 384, 943 P2d 1324, 54 St. Rep. 930 (1997). See also Bache v. Owens, 280 M 106, 929 P2d 217, 53 St. Rep. 1320 (1996).

No Implied Warranty of Habitability or Use Found: The plaintiffs, a condominium owners' association and its individual members, sued Big Sky of Montana Realty, Inc., the successor in interest of Big Sky of Montana, Inc., for breach of implied warranties in failing to originally construct and later repair construction defects in fireplaces in the Deer Lodge Condominiums at Big Sky, Montana, in accordance with applicable fire and building codes. The plaintiffs based their claim of implied warranty on case law that found an implied warranty of habitability and on cases that held that subdivision plats create an implied covenant between developers and subsequent purchasers to use space in the manner designated in the plat. The District Court granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment, dismissing Big Sky of Montana Realty, Inc. The Supreme Court held that the District Court correctly found that no implied warranties existed. Ass'n of Unit Owners of Deer Lodge Condominium v. Big Sky of Mont., Inc., 245 M 64, 798 P2d 1018, 47 St. Rep. 1814 (1990).

Conclusionary Statements of Reliance on Plat Provisions Not Enough to Avoid Summary Judgment: The plaintiffs alleged that the provisions contained in the recorded plat constituted misrepresentations upon which they relied and entitled them to rescission of the contract. The defendants were granted summary judgment on the basis that the plaintiffs' statements were only conclusionary and did not allege sufficient facts to avoid summary judgment. Benson v. Pyfer, 240 M 175, 783 P2d 923, 46 St. Rep. 2033 (1989).

Use of Plats to Induce Purchasers: In order to sell lots, a subdivider prepared and recorded subdivision plat maps that designated common areas and roadways. The purchase and sale contracts did not state who would construct roads or common areas. The issue of whether purchasers of lots have any legally enforceable right to have roads constructed depends not on their designation in the plats but on the subdividers use of the plats in inducing purchasers. The instruments in question do not comprise a promise, express or implied, to construct roads. The purchasers did acquire an easement for the designated use. The case was remanded to determine factual issues relating to the use of the plats in inducing purchasers. Majers v. Shining Mtns., 219 M 366, 711 P2d 1375, 43 St. Rep. 16 (1986).

1995 Amendment: Chapter 100 in second sentence of (1), after "vacation", inserted "the governing body or the district court, as provided in 7-5-2502, shall determine to which properties" and after "portions" deleted "to the center thereof", inserted third sentence that read: "The governing body or the district court, as provided in 7-5-2502, shall take into consideration the previous platting; the manner in which the right-of-way was originally dedicated, granted, or conveyed; the reasons stated in the petition requesting the vacation; the parties requesting the vacation; and any agreements between the adjacent property owners regarding the use of the vacated area", and at beginning of last sentence inserted "The title to the streets and alleys of the vacated portions may revert" and before "the owners" inserted "one or more of"; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Admissibility and Jury Instructions Related to Unrecorded Subdivision Covenants — Validity of Unrecorded Instrument Between Persons With Notice: At issue in a subdivision dispute were unrecorded covenants prohibiting commercial activity in the subdivision. The District Court allowed the unrecorded instruments into evidence and instructed the jury that the instruments were valid between the parties who had notice of them. On appeal, the Supreme Court found no error either in admission of the covenants into evidence or in the jury instruction. Witnesses testified that copies of the unrecorded instruments had been given to both parties, so the documents were clearly relevant and admissible, and because both parties were notified of the restrictive covenants, an instruction regarding the validity of the instruments was appropriate under 70-21-102. Rice v. C.I. Lanning, 2004 MT 237, 322 M 487, 97 P3d 580 (2004).

Agricultural-Use Only Covenant Running With the Land — Covenant Enforceable Against Subsequent Owners Who Had Notice of Covenant: The Turners placed an agricultural-use only restrictive covenant on a 12.3-acre parcel of property, which lay within the city limits of Helena, in order to sever it from a 14.5-acre parcel and avoid subdivision review. A private residence was located on the retained parcel. After dividing the property, the Turners sold the retained parcel to another party and quit-claimed the remaining 12.3-acre parcel to the Hamptons. Greg Hampton had owned the parcel prior to its acquisition by the Turners, who had originally agreed to reconvey the parcel to Hampton under an agreement that stemmed from ongoing divorce proceedings between Hampton and his former wife. Hampton had previously sought to divide the property with a restrictive covenant in the same manner as the Turners, but Hampton's certificate of survey was rejected because Hampton was not the titled owner at the time. Shortly after the 12.3-acre parcel was quit-claimed to them, the Hamptons sought to have the county lift the covenant, but the Board of County Commissioners refused to revoke the covenant. It was undisputed that the parcel was never used for any agricultural purposes and that the parcel was in a mostly residential area coupled with undeveloped open space. On appeal, the Hamptons did not question the legality of the process by which the county chose not to lift the covenant, but rather questioned whether the covenant was one that ran with the land, thereby binding the subsequent owners of both the covenantor and covenantee. Despite the fact that Hampton claimed to be unaware of the covenant when it was quit-claimed, the District Court concluded that Hampton was well aware of the covenant and took the property subject to the covenant as would anyone else. A narrow interpretation of the agricultural-use covenant requires a covenantor and a covenantee, and the county does not satisfy that requirement; nevertheless, the Turners' estate in the retained land was benefited in that neither the Turners nor their subsequent grantee was required to undergo subdivision review. Thus, the District Court did not err in determining that the Turners placed a valid agricultural-use only covenant on the 12.3-acre parcel that ran with the land. The Hamptons' argument that no "transaction" occurred, because the conveyance should have been simultaneous with the placement of the covenant, did not comport with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, which requires county approval of the exemption prior to the sale and conveyance of any divided property. That the county, as a party to the covenant, may choose to enforce the agricultural-use restriction was a foreseeable event that the Hamptons were willing to risk for the sake of taking title to the parcel. No material facts remained in dispute as to whether the Hamptons had notice of the restrictive covenant, so the covenant was enforceable against them as a matter of law. Hampton v. Lewis & Clark County, 2001 MT 81, 305 M 103, 23 P3d 908 (2001).

No Duty of County to Determine Whether Land Transaction Constituted Attempt to Evade Subdivision Act Review: A county has no affirmative duty to analyze or investigate an exemption claimed under 76-3-207 beyond the duty to accept for review a certificate of survey or other evidence establishing the claimed exemption, nor must any defined threshold of evidence be met in order for the county to accept a claimed exemption. Hampton v. Lewis & Clark County, 2001 MT 81, 305 M 103, 23 P3d 908 (2001).

Use of Plats to Induce Purchasers: In order to sell lots, a subdivider prepared and recorded subdivision plat maps that designated common areas and roadways. The purchase and sale contracts did not state who would construct roads or common areas. The issue of whether purchasers of lots have any legally enforceable right to have roads constructed depends not on their designation in the plats but on the subdividers use of the plats in inducing purchasers. The instruments in question do not comprise a promise, express or implied, to construct roads. The purchasers did acquire an easement for the designated use. The case was remanded to determine factual issues relating to the use of the plats in inducing purchasers. Majers v. Shining Mtns., 219 M 366, 711 P2d 1375, 43 St. Rep. 16 (1986), distinguished in Scherpenseel v. Bitney, 263 M 68, 865 P2d 1145, 50 St. Rep. 1709 (1993).

Survey Requirements

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Violation of Statute — Contracts and Deeds Voidable: The vendor of subdivided land violated the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act by filing a certificate of survey under Title 76, ch. 3, part 4, for divisions of land other than a subdivision, rather than filing an approved subdivision plat under the requirements of Title 76, ch. 3, part 6. The vendor obtained the approval of the certificate of survey from the Board of County Commissioners prior to filing the certificate, but the Board had no statutory authority to give approval. It is the opinion of the Attorney General that deeds and contracts which convey land in violation of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act but with the unauthorized approval of the Board of County Commissioners are voidable. 38 A.G. Op. 106 (1980).

Case Notes

Improper Version of Subdivision Law Applied to Survey Exemption Question — Remand: The parents divided a parcel of land on Flathead Lake into two parcels and transferred one parcel to their daughter and her husband in 1973. The parents' adjoining parcel was transferred to other family members and ultimately transferred to plaintiff. Plaintiff sought to adjudicate the boundary between the properties. The District Court apparently applied the 2003 subdivision and platting law and found that the property division qualified for a family exemption and would not be considered as a subdivision under 76-3-207, but the court was unclear about the surveying criteria that it applied to the property division, apparently applying the subdivision law after finding that the subdivision law did not apply. The Supreme Court held that the District Court order was flawed because of the internal inconsistencies and because the District Court applied the 2003 law when it should have applied the law in effect when the property division was made in 1973. The case was therefore remanded for the District Court to determine whether additional factfinding or evidence was necessary in order to establish the proper survey criteria and resolve the boundary issue in accordance with the 1973 law. Karlson v. Rosich, 2006 MT 290, 334 M 370, 147 P3d 196 (2006).

Aliquot Parts — Location in More Than One Government Lot: When the plaintiffs tried to convey land purchased from the defendants to a third party, the county refused to record the deed based on an unpublished 1981 Attorney General's opinion which had concluded that this section required that the 1/32 or larger aliquot parts of a United States government section or lot be contained in the same section or lot. The plaintiffs sued to rescind the contract for deed. A majority of the Supreme Court held that the requirement of this section can be satisfied even if the aliquot parts are located in more than one government section or lot; however, the court affirmed summary judgment for plaintiffs because it found the parcel in question, being 22 ½ acres, was not divisible as an aliquot part of any government sections or lots. (See 1993 amendments to 76-3-103 and 76-3-207.) McCarthy v. Timberland Resources, Inc., 219 M 278, 712 P2d 1292, 42 St. Rep. 2016 (1985).

County Directed to Accept and Record Deeds on Certain Parcels — No Survey Necessary on Resale: In a case in which the size of the parcels was 20 acres or more, the notice of purchaser's interest for the parcel was accepted and recorded, and the parcel could be described with reference to U.S. government sections, the county was directed to accept and record deeds for the parcels in question. Since the description of the land had not changed since it was originally divided and quit claimed and since the quit claim deeds were duly recorded, a survey of those parcels on resale was not necessary in order for the resale deed to be recorded. (See 1993 amendments to 76-3-103 and 76-3-207.) Timberland Resources, Inc. v. Vaught, 227 M 247, 738 P2d 1277, 44 St. Rep. 1054 (1987), following McCarthy v. Timberland Resources, Inc., 219 M 278, 712 P2d 1292, 42 St. Rep. 2016 (1985).

Agency Regulation Conflicting With Occasional Sale Exemption: Court upheld issuance of a Writ of Mandate to compel the lifting of sanitary restrictions, the filing of a certificate of survey, and an award of relator's attorney fees because the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act (prior to 1977 amendment of 76-3-207) clearly and unambiguously exempts occasional sales in resubdivisions and state agency's regulations were in direct conflict with the Act and exceeded delegated authority. (See 1993 amendments to 76-3-103 and 76-3-207.) State ex rel. Swart v. Casne, 172 M 302, 564 P2d 983 (1977).

Attorney General's Opinions

Survey Requirements: When a grantor proposes to transfer a quarter-section block of property (160 acres) that has within its boundaries two smaller parcels (10 and 15 acres in size) that the grantor does not own, a survey is not required. The two smaller tracts, being already created, are not a "division of land" requiring a survey under this section. A survey is required only when the transfer of title involves division of a tract of property. In such a situation, a grantor is not barred from using a quitclaim deed transferring the entire block, including the tracts the grantor does not own, but that action is inadvisable and subject to potential liability. 42 A.G. Op. 121 (1988).

Recording Prerequisites: Transfers of land that do not involve "divisions of land" or "subdivisions", as defined by the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, do not require a certificate of survey or a plat before being recorded by the Clerk and Recorder. 37 A.G. Op. 88 (1977). See also 44 A.G. Op. 25 (1992).

Use of Original Survey for Reference — Proper Determination of Tract Boundary: A dispute arose in a quiet title action based on subdivision surveys that differed from the original government survey. When surveyors use corner sections and lines to base measurements and plot tracts, it is essential that they properly identify and authenticate the original monument. Original corners established by a government survey, if those corners can be found, or places where they were originally established, if those places can be definitely determined, are conclusive without regard to whether they were located correctly or not and must remain the true corners or monuments by which to determine the boundaries. The footsteps of the original surveyor should be followed, so far as discoverable on the ground by monuments, and it is immaterial if the lines run by the original surveyor are incorrect. Olson v. Jude, 2003 MT 186, 316 M 438, 73 P3d 809 (2003). See also Vaught v. McClymond, 116 M 542, 155 P2d 612 (1945), and Helehan v. Ueland, 223 M 228, 725 P2d 1192 (1986).

Certificate of Survey Filed Before Monuments Set Not Properly Filed Within Meaning of Subdivision Act: Stanchfield Cattle Company sought to subdivide land by dividing it into 20-acre parcels and having it surveyed. After completion of the survey, the surveyor had the certificate of survey filed, with a note on the face of the certificate stating that the monuments had not been set because of winter conditions but would be set before July 1. NFC, which held a right of first refusal on the property, sued to prevent the transfer of any property to prospective buyers, claiming that the certificate of survey had not been filed in accordance with the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court decision, holding that despite whatever practices might be common among surveyors, subsection (3) of this section and an administrative rule of the Department of Commerce (now Department of Labor and Industry), ARM 8.94.3002, require that the monuments be set at the time that the certificate of survey is filed. The Supreme Court noted that it could not change the requirements of the Act and the Department rule. NFC Partners v. Stanchfield Cattle Co., 274 M 46, 905 P2d 1106, 52 St. Rep. 1115 (1995).

Mandamus to Compel Filing: Where a document had as its purpose the establishment of boundaries and the description of property for a deed on a single parcel containing an area greater than the amount regulated by the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, and the document contained no representation of a subdivision, the document was a "certificate of survey" and the Clerk and Recorder had a legal duty under this section to accept the document for filing since it contained no evidence to bring it within the definition of a subdivision. City Ordinance Requiring Developer Surcharge — Valid Exercise of Self-Governing Power: A city ordinance imposing a 5% surcharge on developers of raw land prior to creation of a special improvement district was a valid exercise of the city's self-governing powers. Diefenderfer v. Billings, 223 M 487, 726 P2d 1362, 43 St. Rep. 1934 (1986).

Agency Regulation Conflicting With Occasional Sale Exemption: Court upheld issuance of a Writ of Mandate to compel the lifting of sanitary restrictions, the filing of a certificate of survey, and an award of relator's attorney fees because the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act (prior to 1977 amendment of 76-3-207) clearly and unambiguously exempts occasional sales in resubdivisions and state agency's regulations were in direct conflict with the Act and exceeded delegated authority. Part Attorney General's Opinions

Authority of Self-Governing Local Government to Enforce Master Plan (now Growth Policy): A local government unit with self-governing powers may not refuse to file a certificate of survey because the involved parcel encompasses less than 40, but equal to or more than 20, acres even if its master plan (now growth policy) prohibits divisions of land of such size. A local government that has adopted a master plan (now growth policy) to regulate future land-use planning and zoning may condition issuance of permits for the construction, alteration, or enlargement of structures upon compliance with such plan. 42 A.G. Op. 16 (1987).

Size Parcel Prohibited by Master Plan (now Growth Policy) — Certificate Filing Required — Conditional Issuance of Permit: A local government unit with self-governing powers may not refuse to file a certificate of survey simply because the parcel encompasses less than 40 but equal to or greater than 20 acres, even if its master plan (now growth policy) prohibits divisions of land of such size. However, the local government may condition issuance of permits for construction, alteration, or enlargement of structures upon compliance with the master plan (now growth policy). 42 A.G. Op. 16 (1987).

Suitability for Access — Landowner May Declare Unsuitability: If a landowner elects on his application to accept a written determination that access and easements are not suitable for the purposes of providing services to the divided parcels, the local governing body may attach this notation to the instrument of transference prior to the recordation and forego any review of access suitability. 41 A.G. Op. 43 (1986).

Suitability for Access Review Mandatory: In divisions of land consisting exclusively of parcels 20 acres or larger, the landowner must apply to the local governing body for a determination of whether appropriate access and easements are properly provided. 41 A.G. Op. 43 (1986).

State Agency Subject to Local Review in Creation of Recreational Vehicle Camping Area: The term "subdivision" is defined in 76-3-103 to include the provision of multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks argued that, as a state agency, it was exempt from the review requirement. Because exemptions are provided for some state activities but not for activities to provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles on state land, the clear implication is that the state is to stand on the same footing as a private person in this matter. It was noted that there is a trend toward abandoning the traditional view that activities of the state may be exercised free of local control. The Department is subject to local subdivision review to the extent that it creates an area which will provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. 39 A.G. Op. 14 (1981).

Minor Subdivisions Not Exempt From Dedication: Minor subdivisions are not exempted from the requirements regarding dedicating land to the public for parks and playgrounds or alternative requirements provided therefor by law. 37 A.G. Op. 1 (1977).

Neither a local governing body (under the provisions of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act) nor the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of environmental quality] (under Title 76, chapter 4, part 1) may modify its subdivision rules and apply the modified rules to a subdivision submitted for review when previously existing rules were in effect."

Case Notes

City Council Denial of Subdivision Exemption Not Violative of Constitutional Protections: The Missoula City Council denied plaintiffs' applications for exemptions from subdivision requirements, and plaintiffs appealed on grounds that denial of the applications constituted violations of constitutional rights of equal protection and public participation, was a taking, and was a tortious violation of the city council's statutory duties. The District Court granted summary judgment for the city on all the claims and plaintiffs appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The equal protection argument was merely a bald assertion that was largely unclear and poorly supported, failing to demonstrate a discriminatory purpose, and was properly dismissed on summary judgment. The takings claim failed because plaintiffs never possessed a right to obtain an exemption, but instead only lost the opportunity to obtain an exemption, and the discretion to grant or deny the exemption was properly exercised by the city council. Plaintiffs raised the public participation claim in District Court but failed to discuss the issue in briefs on appeal, so the Supreme Court declined to consider the issue. The claim of a tortious violation of the city council's statutory duties also failed as a cognizable negligence claim because plaintiffs failed to prove that the council's actions damaged plaintiffs. Roe v. Missoula, 2009 MT 417, 354 M 1, 221 P3d 1200 (2009). See also Gudmundsen v. State ex rel. Mont. St. Hosp. Warm Springs, 2009 MT 56, 349 M 297, 203 P3d 813 (2009).

Failure of Subdivision Exemption Application to Meet Lot Aggregation or Boundary Line Relocation Exemption — Denial of Application Affirmed: Plaintiffs, seeking to relocate the boundary line of their two city lots in order to create a vacant lot that could be sold, applied for a subdivision exemption. The city council denied the exemption and plaintiffs appealed, but the Supreme Court examined city regulations and affirmed. The city council concluded that the application failed to meet the lot aggregation exemption because it was essentially a boundary line relocation and not a lot aggregation, and the application failed to meet the boundary line relocation exemption because city regulations prohibited the creation of a new parcel transferable to anyone other than an adjoining property owner. The Supreme Court noted that plaintiffs questioned the process used by the city council to unilaterally review the applications, but the court held that process did not harm plaintiffs because the application suggested an intention to improperly evade subdivision review. The application would have been forwarded to the city council in any event, so it was not necessary to consider whether the application actually qualified for an exemption. The District Court was affirmed. Roe v. Missoula, 2009 MT 417, 354 M 1, 221 P3d 1200 (2009).

Failure of Environmental Assessment to Provide Statutorily Required Summary of Subdivision Impact — Approval of Preliminary Plat Unlawful: Plaintiffs asserted that the Board of County Commissioners erred in approving a preliminary plat for a subdivision in rural Sanders County. The District Court granted judgment for the Board and the developer. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The environmental assessment prepared in support of the subdivision was inadequate in explaining how the subdivision would impact water resources and water management such as wastewater and runoff, roads and traffic, and essential public services such as fire and police services. Because the environmental assessment was inadequate under plain statutory language, the Board's approval of the preliminary plat was unlawful for failure to comply with relevant statutes. The case was remanded for entry of judgment in favor of plaintiffs. Citizens for Responsible Dev. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2009 MT 182, 351 M 40, 208 P3d 876 (2009).

Authority of Water and Sewer Association to Ban Private Wells Within Subdivision: A private, nonprofit water and sewer association was created to regulate the use of water and the handling and disposition of sewage within a subdivision. A drought forced the temporary shutdown of the association's water system and the institution of watering restrictions in order to preserve sufficient pressure and capacity in the water system to meet subdivision residents' demands for drinking water, household use, and fire suppression activities. Defendants decided to explore the possibility of drilling a private well for lawn and garden purposes. The association board subsequently decided to ban private wells in the subdivision for all purposes. Nevertheless, defendants drilled an untreated well solely for lawn and garden use. The association then demanded that defendants abandon their well, and when defendants refused, the association sought a declaratory judgment that the rule prohibiting private wells was valid and enforceable and requested the District Court to require defendants to abandon their well. Defendants denied that the association had the authority to burden private property interests or to require removal of the well. The District Court concluded that the rule was valid, granted summary judgment for the association, and ordered removal of defendants' well. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The rule was reasonably related to the association's obligation to preserve the health, safety, and financial viability of its water system and was valid and legal. The fact that the rule affected a well that was not directly owned by the association did not affect the validity of the rule because, as members of the association, defendants were bound by association rules intended to protect the public water system. The possibility that defendants' untreated well could be attached to the subdivision water system posed a cross-contamination threat to the system, and the well also posed a threat of depletion of the aquifer that the association depended upon in part for its public water supply, so abandonment of the well was warranted. Eastgate Village Water & Sewer Ass'n v. Davis, 2008 MT 141, 343 M 108, 183 P3d 873 (2008), following Appeal of Two Crow Ranch, Inc., 159 M 16, 494 P2d 915 (1972).

Retroactive Application of Ordinances to Application for Plat Approval: A provision of this section stating that review and approval or disapproval of a subdivision may occur only under regulations in effect at the time of an application for preliminary plat approval expressly precluded the retroactive application of the city's development code to the developer's application for approval. (See 2005 amendment and amendment to 76-3-604.) The District Court properly ruled that the code could not be retroactively applied to the application and excluded evidence of the code in the developer's suit for attaching conditions to the preliminary approval. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Local Governing Body Failure to Follow Local Regulations on Criteria for Approval of Subdivision: This section requires the local governing body to review and approve or disapprove a proposed subdivision under the local regulations in effect at the time that an application for approval of a preliminary plat is submitted to the local governing body. (See 2005 amendment and amendment to 76-3-604.) The governing body may not ignore its own local regulations and apply only the criteria that 76-3-608 requires to be considered. In this case, the local regulations contained the five criteria provided in 76-3-608 but, in addition, still contained three criteria that had been amended out of that section. The local governing body conditionally approved a subdivision without considering those three criteria. This chapter's mandate that a local governing body assert local control and develop its own subdivision regulations, as well as other provisions of this chapter, clearly contemplates that the local government entity is free to promulgate regulations, in addition to those in this chapter, that do not necessarily conform exactly to this chapter, so long as the regulations do not conflict with this chapter. This chapter establishes minimum requirements that the local governing body must follow. The additional three criteria in the local governing body's regulations do not conflict with this chapter, and findings on those criteria were mandated. In addition, the local governing body failed to follow its local regulation stating that findings on the criteria that the local regulation required to be applied must show that the subdivision will be in the public interest. The District Court therefore properly set aside the local governing body's conditional approval of the subdivision. Burnt Fork Citizens Coalition v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Ravalli County, 287 M 43, 951 P2d 1020, 54 St. Rep. 1490 (1997).

Local Board of Health Not Considered Governing Body Despite Interlocal Agreement: Despite the fact that a county board of health was created by interlocal agreement, the District Court erred in concluding that a local board of health is considered a governing body by definition under 76-3-103. The Montana Subdivision and Platting Act does not, under 76-3-504 and this section, authorize local boards of health to adopt and enforce regulations governing sanitation in subdivisions, regardless of size. The authority of a local board of health to regulate subdivisions derives from 50-2-116, not from the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark County Bd. of Health, 286 M 256, 950 P2d 733, 54 St. Rep. 1398 (1997).

No Mandatory Application of Wastewater Treatment Regulation by Local Board of Health: Under this section, review and approval or disapproval of a subdivision under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act may occur only under regulations in effect at the time that an application is submitted to the governing body. (See 2005 amendment and amendment to 76-3-604.) The Lewis and Clark County Commission approved the Green Acres subdivision in July 1990, at which time the Lewis and Clark County Board of Health's onsite wastewater treatment regulations mandated shallow standard treatment systems, rather than the present regulation requiring intermittent sand filters. Skinner Enterprises, Inc., argued that the 1990 regulation should be applied pursuant to this section. However, local boards of health derive authority to regulate subdivisions from 50-2-116, not from the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Therefore, the local board's own onsite wastewater treatment regulations did not obligate the local board to apply the 1990 regulation. Further, 50-2-130 allows local boards of health to promulgate regulations that are more stringent than comparable state regulations, notwithstanding the provisions of 7-1-113 prohibiting a local government from exercising any power inconsistent with state law or administrative regulations. The facts regarding whether shallow-capped drainfields or intermittent sand filters are considered more stringent were not the subject of the present appeal. The discretionary authority of the local board of health to regulate subdivision sanitation by requiring intermittent sand filters was affirmed. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark County Bd. of Health, 286 M 256, 950 P2d 733, 54 St. Rep. 1398 (1997).

Review, Not Regulatory, Function Applicable to Local Board of Health Control of Minor Subdivision: Section 50-2-106, when read in conjunction with 76-4-104, does not authorize a local board of health to regulate sanitation in minor subdivisions containing five or fewer parcels. By its plain language, 76-4-104 delegates to local boards of health the power to review select subdivisions but not the power to promulgate regulations. As a reviewing authority, the board's function is limited to reviewing the proposed water supply, sewage, and solid waste disposal facilities and advising the Department of Environmental Quality of its recommendation for approval or disapproval of the subdivision. However, 50-2-116 explicitly authorizes a local board of health to regulate sewage control and disposal that is not regulated by the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. The Act limits state sanitation regulation to subdivisions containing parcels of fewer than 20 acres each and precludes regulation of subdivisions in which each parcel of land contains more than 20 acres. Thus, the regulation of sanitation in subdivisions containing parcels of more than 20 acres each is clearly the responsibility of local boards of health. Nevertheless, 76-4-122 requires both state and local approval before filing a subdivision plat with the County Clerk and Recorder, and to hold that approval by the local board of health is a ministerial, nondiscretionary act would render 76-4-122 inoperative. Giving effect to the purpose of all the applicable statutes and examining the legislative history of 50-2-116, the Supreme Court held that the 1991 enactment of 50-2-116(1)(i) revealed a legislative intent to expand, rather than diminish, the authority of local boards of health to regulate subdivision sanitation. Thus, local boards of health have discretionary statutory authority to regulate all subdivisions, regardless of size, notwithstanding the state's authority to regulate certain subdivisions under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark County Bd. of Health, 286 M 256, 950 P2d 733, 54 St. Rep. 1398 (1997).

Local Government Regulations — Rebuttable Presumption Permissible: County subdivision regulations that contained a rebuttable presumption of evasion did not violate the due process rights of appellant. Because exemptions of statutes pertaining to health, safety, and welfare of the public should be narrowly construed, a party claiming the exemption should have the burden of proving entitlement to the exemption. State ex rel. Dreher v. Fuller, 257 M 445, 849 P2d 1045, 50 St. Rep. 349 (1993).

Local Government Regulations — Retroactive Use of Prior Valid Conveyances: When plain language of local regulations does not have retroactive application, it is not improper for local government officials to examine the prior history of the developers and tract in question in order to make an informed decision regarding whether an applicant is evading the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. State ex rel. Dreher v. Fuller, 257 M 445, 849 P2d 1045, 50 St. Rep. 349 (1993).

Subdivision and Platting Act Constitutional — Permissible Delegation of Legislative Authority: Plaintiff challenged the constitutionality of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act on the grounds that the statutory preamble to the Act's exemptions amounted to an unconstitutional delegation or usurpation of legislative authority on the basis that the Act contains insufficient guidelines. The Supreme Court distinguished this case from cases relating to a legislative grant of rulemaking authority to administrative agencies based on differences in nature between agencies and local governments. The delegation of authority by the Legislature was not impermissible, and rules adopted by the county pursuant to the Act are constitutional when the rules are not inconsistent with or contradictory to the Act and when they give notice to the property owner as to what the county will look at in making a determination. State ex rel. Dreher v. Fuller, 257 M 445, 849 P2d 1045, 50 St. Rep. 349 (1993).

No Writ of Mandamus — Refusal to Record Deeds in Violation of County Subdivision Law: In an action to compel county officers to accept for recording a deed and certificate of survey, the trial court properly denied a Writ of Mandamus. The county officers' refusal was based on a belief that appellant was attempting to evade county subdivision regulations. When the act sought to be compelled is discretionary, as in this case, a Writ of Mandamus will be issued only if the failure to act is such an abuse of discretion that it amounts to no exercise of discretion at all. The evidence in this case indicates no abuse of discretion. Withers v. Beaverhead County, 218 M 447, 710 P2d 1339, 42 St. Rep. 1730 (1985), distinguished in State ex rel. Leach v. Visser, 234 M 438, 767 P2d 858, 45 St. Rep. 2035 (1988).

Attorney General's Opinions

Local Government Required to Adopt Subdivision Water Supply and Sewage and Solid Waste Disposal That Conform to State Regulations: Unless a local governing body makes specific findings to support the conclusion that more stringent rules are required to protect public health, a local governing body must adopt subdivision regulations for water supply and sewage and solid waste disposal that are as stringent as the state standards adopted by the Department of Environmental Quality under Title 76, ch. 4, part 1. The local government may incorporate the state regulations by reference, but the actual method of adoption is up to the discretion of the local government. 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

State Agency Subject to Local Review in Creation of Recreational Vehicle Camping Area: The term "subdivision" is defined in 76-3-103 to include the provision of multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks argued that, as a state agency, it was exempt from the review requirement. Because exemptions are provided for some state activities but not for activities to provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles on state land, the clear implication is that the state is to stand on the same footing as a private person in this matter. It was noted that there is a trend toward abandoning the traditional view that activities of the state may be exercised free of local control. The Department is subject to local subdivision review to the extent that it creates an area which will provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. 39 A.G. Op. 14 (1981).

Local Sanitary Regulations: County Commissioners may adopt reasonably stricter sanitation regulations for subdivisions than those adopted by the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality). 35 A.G. Op. 39 (1973).

Transition: Section 36, Ch. 582, L. 1999, provided: "A governing body that adopts a master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 1999, may adopt zoning regulations that are consistent with the master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 2, part 2 or 3, until October 1, 2001."

1995 Amendments: Chapter 418 in (6)(c) substituted "department of environmental quality" for "department of health and environmental sciences"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 471 in (6)(c), at beginning, inserted "subject to the provisions of 76-3-511"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 22(3), Ch. 471, L. 1995, provided: "(3) [This act] does not apply to the establishment of fees or public participation requirements."

1981 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 236 deleted all of the language and replaced it with an introduction and (1) through (8) describing minimum requirements for subdivision regulations (see 1981 Session Law for text). The prior language read: "(1) Not later than December 31, 1973, the department of community affairs, through its division of planning, shall, in conformance with the Montana Administrative Procedure Act, prescribe reasonable minimum requirements for subdivision regulations adopted pursuant to this chapter.

(2) The minimum requirements shall include detailed criteria for the content of the environmental assessment required by this chapter. In prescribing the minimum contents of the subdivision regulations, the department of community affairs, through its division of planning, shall require the submission by the subdivider to the governing body of an environmental assessment.

(3) The department shall provide for the review of preliminary plats by those agencies of state and local government and affected public utilities having a substantial interest in a proposed subdivision. Such agency or utility review shall not delay the governing body's action on the plat beyond the time limit specified herein, and the failure of any agency to complete a review of a plat shall not be a basis for rejection of the plat by the governing body."

Chapter 274 substituted "department of commerce" for "department of community affairs, through its division of planning" in (1) and (2).

In preparing the composite of Ch. 236 and Ch. 274, which both amended 76-3-504, the Code Commissioner did not include the amendatory language in Chapter 274 pertaining to the transfer of functions of the department of community affairs to the department of commerce. The reason for this is that Ch. 236 entirely deleted the subsections containing these functions and instead established minimum subdivision regulation requirements for local governments.

Case Notes

Failure of Environmental Assessment to Provide Statutorily Required Summary of Subdivision Impact — Approval of Preliminary Plat Unlawful: Plaintiffs asserted that the Board of County Commissioners erred in approving a preliminary plat for a subdivision in rural Sanders County. The District Court granted judgment for the Board and the developer. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The environmental assessment prepared in support of the subdivision was inadequate in explaining how the subdivision would impact water resources and water management such as wastewater and runoff, roads and traffic, and essential public services such as fire and police services. Because the environmental assessment was inadequate under plain statutory language, the Board's approval of the preliminary plat was unlawful for failure to comply with relevant statutes. The case was remanded for entry of judgment in favor of plaintiffs. Citizens for Responsible Dev. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2009 MT 182, 351 M 40, 208 P3d 876 (2009).

Proper Determination of Legal Access for Subdivision Parcels: Plaintiffs asserted that language in a declaration of a subdivision easement permitting all subdivision owners to use subdivision roads should limit access only to owners of lots that existed at the time that the declaration was executed. The District Court disagreed, and based on the clear and unambiguous language of the declaration, the Supreme Court concurred. Although not all of the subdivision parcels were established at the time that the declaration was executed, the declaration was clear that use of the roads extended to all lot owners, including the parcels yet to be divided. The Board of County Commissioners did not act arbitrarily in finding that legal access existed for the entire subdivision. Fielder v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2007 MT 118, 337 M 256, 162 P3d 67 (2007).

Local Board of Health Not Considered Governing Body Despite Interlocal Agreement: Despite the fact that a county board of health was created by interlocal agreement, the District Court erred in concluding that a local board of health is considered a governing body by definition under 76-3-103. The Montana Subdivision and Platting Act does not, under 76-3-501 and this section, authorize local boards of health to adopt and enforce regulations governing sanitation in subdivisions, regardless of size. The authority of a local board of health to regulate subdivisions derives from 50-2-116, not from the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark County Bd. of Health, 286 M 256, 950 P2d 733, 54 St. Rep. 1398 (1997).

Review, Not Regulatory, Function Applicable to Local Board of Health Control of Minor Subdivision: Section 50-2-106, when read in conjunction with 76-4-104, does not authorize a local board of health to regulate sanitation in minor subdivisions containing five or fewer parcels. By its plain language, 76-4-104 delegates to local boards of health the power to review select subdivisions but not the power to promulgate regulations. As a reviewing authority, the board's function is limited to reviewing the proposed water supply, sewage, and solid waste disposal facilities and advising the Department of Environmental Quality of its recommendation for approval or disapproval of the subdivision. However, 50-2-116 explicitly authorizes a local board of health to regulate sewage control and disposal that is not regulated by the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. The Act limits state sanitation regulation to subdivisions containing parcels of fewer than 20 acres each and precludes regulation of subdivisions in which each parcel of land contains more than 20 acres. Thus, the regulation of sanitation in subdivisions containing parcels of more than 20 acres each is clearly the responsibility of local boards of health. Nevertheless, 76-4-122 requires both state and local approval before filing a subdivision plat with the County Clerk and Recorder, and to hold that approval by the local board of health is a ministerial, nondiscretionary act would render 76-4-122 inoperative. Giving effect to the purpose of all the applicable statutes and examining the legislative history of 50-2-116, the Supreme Court held that the 1991 enactment of 50-2-116(1)(i) revealed a legislative intent to expand, rather than diminish, the authority of local boards of health to regulate subdivision sanitation. Thus, local boards of health have discretionary statutory authority to regulate all subdivisions, regardless of size, notwithstanding the state's authority to regulate certain subdivisions under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark County Bd. of Health, 286 M 256, 950 P2d 733, 54 St. Rep. 1398 (1997).

Public Hearing on Minor Subdivision: Unless local regulations require a public hearing on minor subdivision, as provided by 76-3-505 (now repealed), no such hearing is necessary or required, prior to summary approval. Young v. Stillwater County Comm'rs, 177 M 488, 582 P2d 353 (1978).

Attorney General's Opinions

Compliance Review of Local Subdivision Rules Required at Preliminary Plat Stage: The review of a proposed subdivision for compliance with local subdivision regulations must occur at the preliminary plat stage. Once a preliminary plat is approved, additional conditions for compliance may not be imposed, so compliance review at the final plat stage would render review meaningless. 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

Local Government Required to Adopt Subdivision Water Supply and Sewage and Solid Waste Disposal That Conform to State Regulations: Unless a local governing body makes specific findings to support the conclusion that more stringent rules are required to protect public health, a local governing body must adopt subdivision regulations for water supply and sewage and solid waste disposal that are as stringent as the state standards adopted by the Department of Environmental Quality under Title 76, ch. 4, part 1. The local government may incorporate the state regulations by reference, but the actual method of adoption is up to the discretion of the local government. 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

Exemption of U.S. From Filing and Enforcement Provisions: The filing and enforcement provisions of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act are inapplicable to a conveyance by the federal government pursuant to 43 U.S.C. §1716 and in which transaction the United States is the subdivider. 42 A.G. Op. 36 (1987).

Severability: Section 4, Ch. 503, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 468 inserted (1) concerning completion of required improvements; at beginning of first sentence of (2)(a) deleted "Local regulations may provide that" and after "final plat" substituted "the subdivider shall provide or cause to be provided" for "the governing body shall require" and inserted second sentence concerning reduction of bond requirements; inserted (2)(b) concerning incremental payment or guarantee plan; inserted (3) concerning legislative immunity; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 468, L. 1995, provided: "It is the intent of the legislature that the department of commerce, local government assistance division, update its model subdivision rules to minimize the fiscal impacts to local governments in implementing this legislation."

acquisition and initial development. Funds in a park fund up to $10,000 as of [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1995] may be used for park maintenance in accordance with a formally adopted park plan."

Provision Made for Water and Sewer Mains — City Annexation Plan in Substantial Statutory Compliance: Plaintiff was one of 277 property owners who contended that a plan for the extension of services into areas annexed by the city of Whitefish did not comply with annexation statutes. The Supreme Court examined the plan and concluded that: (1) the statement required by 7-2-4731 regarding extension of municipal services was included; (2) provision for future development in conformance with 7-2-4732 was made; (3) the plan included a financing method conforming with 7-2-4732 and this section; (4) tax burden statements conforming to 7-2-4732 and voting methodology statements conforming to 7-2-4733 were included; (5) the plan contained a long-range plan as required in 7-2-4732; (6) a timetable required by 7-2-4732 was included; and (7) the plan included maps of general land use, the city's present and proposed boundaries, and present and proposed streets and water mains, and a statement regarding other boundaries was included in conformance with 7-2-4731. The District Court's conclusion that the plan for the extension of services met statutory requirements was affirmed. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 2 in (1) near middle of first sentence and in (2) near beginning of introductory clause substituted "76-3-504(1)(g)(iii)" for "76-3-504(1)(f)(iii)". Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 302 throughout section substituted "regulation" for "rule". Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 at beginning of first sentence of (1) deleted "After April 14, 1995"; in (1), in first sentence, and in (2), near beginning, substituted "76-3-504(6)(c)" for "76-3-504(5)(c)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 471, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, the federal government frequently regulates areas that are also subject to state regulation; and

WHEREAS, differing state and federal policy goals and unique state prerogatives frequently result in different levels of regulation, different standards, and different requirements being imposed by state and federal programs covering the same subject matter; and

WHEREAS, Montana must simultaneously move toward reducing redundant and unnecessary regulation that dulls the state's competitive advantage while being ever vigilant in the protection of the public's health, safety, and welfare; and

WHEREAS, Montana's administrative agencies should consider applicable federal standards when adopting, readopting, or amending rules with analogous federal counterparts; and

WHEREAS, Montana's administrative agencies should analyze whether analogous federal standards sufficiently protect the health, safety, and welfare of Montana's citizens; and

WHEREAS, as part of the formal rulemaking process, the public should be advised of the agencies' conclusions about whether analogous federal standards sufficiently protect the health, safety, and welfare of Montana citizens."

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 471, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in order to provide guidance to the board of health and environmental sciences [now board of environmental review], the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of environmental quality], and local units of government in complying with [this act].

The legislature intends that in addition to all requirements imposed by existing law and rules, the board or the department include as part of the initial publication and all subsequent publications of a rule a written finding if the rule in question contains any standards or requirements that exceed the standards or requirements imposed by comparable federal law.

If the rules are more stringent than comparable federal law, the written finding must include but is not limited to a discussion of the policy reasons and an analysis that supports the board's or department's decision that the proposed state standards or requirements protect public health or the environment of the state and that the state standards or requirements to be imposed can mitigate harm to the public health or the environment and are achievable under current technology. The department is not required to show that the federal regulation is inadequate to protect public health. The written finding must also include information from the hearing record regarding the costs to the regulated community directly attributable to the proposed state standard or requirement."

Effective Date: Section 23, Ch. 471, L. 1995, provided that this section is effective on passage and approval. Approved April 14, 1995.

Applicability: Section 22(2) and (3), Ch. 471, L. 1995, provided: "(2) [Sections 4 and 5] [50-2-130 and 76-3-511] apply to local units of government when they attempt to regulate the control and disposal of sewage from private and public buildings.

(3) [This act] does not apply to the establishment of fees or public participation requirements."

Attorney General's Opinions

Local Government Required to Adopt Subdivision Water Supply and Sewage and Solid Waste Disposal That Conform to State Regulations: Unless a local governing body makes specific findings to support the conclusion that more stringent rules (now regulations) are required to protect public health, a local governing body must adopt subdivision regulations for water supply and sewage and solid waste disposal that are as stringent as the state standards adopted by the Department of Environmental Quality under Title 76, ch. 4, part 1. The local government may incorporate the state regulations by reference, but the actual method of adoption is up to the discretion of the local government. 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

Part 6
Local Review Procedure

Part Case Notes

No Writ of Mandate — Appropriation of In-Lieu Funds: When the County Commission appropriated in-lieu park funds to a project not specifically authorized in the county outdoor recreation and open space plan, a Writ of Mandate did not lie because the appropriation of the in-lieu funds is a discretionary act. Burgess v. Gallatin County Comm'n, 215 M 503, 698 P2d 862, 42 St. Rep. 585 (1985).

Writ of Certiorari Not Available — Appropriation of In-Lieu Funds: When the County Commission appropriated in-lieu park funds to a project not specifically authorized in the county outdoor recreation and open space plan, a Writ of Certiorari did not lie because the Commission, in appropriating money, was acting in a legislative, not judicial, capacity. There is no action more clearly legislative than that of appropriation of public funds. Burgess v. Gallatin County Comm'n, 215 M 503, 698 P2d 862, 42 St. Rep. 585 (1985).

"Dedication": An action was filed to quiet title to a county road that had been established as a public road in 1909. The certificate of dedication of the 1909 plat stated that the streets therein were "granted and dedicated to the use of the public forever". In 1944, pursuant to section 1635, R.C.M. 1935, a petition for county road closure was filed. That same year the petition was granted by the County Commissioners. After 1944, neither the plaintiffs nor their predecessors in interest paid any taxes on the roadway and no portion of the roadway was fenced into the lands now belonging to the plaintiffs until 1980. The court quieted title in the plaintiffs, ruling that the 1909 plat dedication was the equivalent of a right-of-way deed under which the public acquired only the right-of-way and the incidents necessary to its enjoyment and that upon abandonment the fee in the street reverted to the abutting landowners, with each abutting landowner taking fee from the edge of his property to the center of the street. Bailey v. Ravalli Co., 201 M 138, 653 P2d 139, 39 St. Rep. 2010 (1982), followed in Herreid v. Hauck, 254 M 496, 839 P2d 571, 49 St. Rep. 884 (1992).

Regulatory Powers Regarding Subdivision Control: The 1973 Montana Subdivision and Platting Act vests control of subdivisions in local government units. The Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) has no regulatory functions regarding subdivisions outside water supply, sewage, and solid waste disposal. Mont. Wilderness Ass'n v. Bd. of Health & Environmental Sciences, 171 M 477, 559 P2d 1157 (1976).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Use of Cash Donations to Fund Restroom Construction on Daly Mansion Grounds: The Marcus Daly Mansion is a significant historical and architectural resource preserved for the future enjoyment of visitors and, as such, is considered a park, notwithstanding the fact that the property is owned by a state agency. The provision of facilities not previously in existence, as part of a long-term plan to improve the park, falls within the definition of "initial development" as used in 76-3-606 (now repealed). Therefore, cash donations received by Ravalli County in lieu of park land dedication may be used by the County Park Board to fund restroom construction on the mansion grounds. 44 A.G. Op. 13 (1991).

Exemption of U.S. From Filing and Enforcement Provisions: The filing and enforcement provisions of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act are inapplicable to a conveyance by the federal government pursuant to 43 U.S.C. §1716 and in which transaction the United States is the subdivider. 42 A.G. Op. 36 (1987).

Authority of Self-Governing Local Government to Enforce Master Plan (now Growth Policy): A local government unit with self-governing powers may not refuse to file a certificate of survey because the involved parcel encompasses less than 40, but equal to or more than 20, acres even if its master plan (now growth policy) prohibits divisions of land of such size. A local government that has adopted a master plan (now growth policy) to regulate future land-use planning and zoning may condition issuance of permits for the construction, alteration, or enlargement of structures upon compliance with such plan. 42 A.G. Op. 16 (1987).

Dedication of Lands Within Municipality to Use of Public Forever — Municipal Election Required for Sale: Park dedication language in a subdivision plat located within a municipality dedicating certain lands "to the use of the public forever" creates a trust for a specific purpose. Under the terms of 7-8-4201, a municipal election must be held before the city can dispose of the property. 41 A.G. Op. 42 (1986).

Park Board Partly Funded by County General Fund: The funding for the county park board's obligations is derived from the county general fund as well as from other specific sources as enumerated by 7-16-2324, 7-16-2328, and 76-3-606 (now repealed). Since a specific separate tax levy is not authorized for the park fund, additional money must be appropriated from the county general fund authorized by 7-6-2501 if the revenue from sources other than taxation is insufficient to meet the necessary expenditures. 40 A.G. Op. 49 (1984).

Restriction on Use of Revenues Received From Sale of Park Lands and Donations: Revenues raised from sale of park lands and from cash donations in lieu of dedication of land for park purposes pursuant to 7-16-2324 and 76-3-606 (now repealed) are restricted in use to the purposes of purchase of additional lands or the initial development of parks and playgrounds. While these revenues are part of the park fund, they should be separated from unrestricted park fund revenues. 40 A.G. Op. 49 (1984).

Violation of Statute — Contracts and Deeds Voidable: The vendor of subdivided land violated the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act by filing a certificate of survey under Title 76, ch. 3, part 4, for divisions of land other than a subdivision, rather than filing an approved subdivision plat under the requirements of Title 76, ch. 3, part 6. The vendor obtained the approval of the certificate of survey from the Board of County Commissioners prior to filing the certificate, but the Board had no statutory authority to give approval. It is the opinion of the Attorney General that deeds and contracts which convey land in violation of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act but with the unauthorized approval of the Board of County Commissioners are voidable. 38 A.G. Op. 106 (1980).

Unwritten Blanket Policy Invalid: A local governing body's unwritten blanket policy or practice of accepting cash donations in lieu of public park and playground dedication with respect to subdivisions of five or fewer parcels is invalid. Minor subdivisions may be exempted from public park and playground dedication requirements only on a case-by-case basis and only if they meet one of the criteria for exemption under 76-3-606(2) (now repealed). A cash donation under such provision must be based upon the fair market value of the unimproved, unsubdivided land that is to be subdivided. Fair market value is the amount a willing buyer would pay and a willing seller would accept for the land when neither is under duress. 37 A.G. Op. 169 (1978).

Meaning of "Exclusive of All Other Dedications": The phrase "exclusive of all other dedications" in 76-3-606 (now repealed) includes only dedications for purposes other than public parks and playgrounds. 37 A.G. Op. 38 (1977).

Minor Subdivisions Not Exempt From Dedication: Minor subdivisions are not exempted from the requirements regarding dedicating land to the public for parks and playgrounds or alternative requirements provided therefor by law. (See 76-3-621(3).) 37 A.G. Op. 1 (1977).

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 298 in (1) in first sentence at beginning substituted "Subject to the submittal deadlines established as provided in 76-3-504(3)" for exception clause that read: "Except when a plat is eligible for summary review pursuant to 76-3-505" and near end inserted "subdivision application, including the"; in (2)(a) near middle inserted "application and"; in (2)(b) in first sentence near middle and in second sentence after "body shall submit the" inserted "application and" and in third sentence after "governing body shall provide" substituted "a summary of the information contained in the application and" for "an informational copy of the"; in (2)(c) near middle substituted "application and preliminary plat" for "proposed plat"; and made minor changes in style. 1995 Amendment: Chapter 506 in (2)(b) inserted third sentence regarding a county governing body providing an informational copy of a preliminary subdivision plat to school district trustees; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 15, 1995.

1981 Amendment: Inserted (2)(d) requiring municipality to coordinate whenever possible subdivision review and annexation procedures to minimize duplication of hearings, reports, and other requirements when subdivision is proposed for annexation to municipality.

Interim Study Committee Bill: Chapter 89, L. 1981 (SB 35), was introduced at the request of the interim Study Committee on Annexation Laws. See committee report, Legislative Council, 1980.

Severability Clause: Section 4, Ch. 498, L. 1975, was a severability clause.

Case Notes

Authority of Board of County Commissioners to Approve Subdivisions Within Three-Mile Area Outside Corporate Limits: The city of Bozeman sought a reversal of 43 A.G. Op. 26 (1989), in which the Attorney General held that the Board of County Commissioners has final authority to approve subdivisions that are within the 3-mile area immediately outside the corporate limits of the city when the city has a commission-manager form of government. Bozeman asserted that 76-2-312 was not a limitation on the authority of commission-manager governments but rather an acknowledgement by the Legislature that such municipal governments already had extraterritorial subdivision authority under 7-3-4444 and that 76-2-312 exempted cities with a commission-manager form of government from procedural requirements that other forms of municipal government have to follow in order to exercise their extraterritorial subdivision authority. However, 7-3-4444 does not refer to the city commission, but instead clearly provides that the authority granted is to the city director of public services to ensure that the involved plat complies with platting regulations. If the plat complies, the director must approve it. The District Court properly found that 76-2-312 took away the extraterritorial subdivision authority over subdivisions that Bozeman, as a commission-manager form of government, would otherwise have had under 76-2-310 and 76-2-311. Bozeman v. Racicot, 253 M 204, 832 P2d 767, 49 St. Rep. 435 (1992).

Public Hearing on Minor Subdivision: Unless local regulations require a public hearing on minor subdivision, as provided by 76-3-505 (now repealed), no such hearing is necessary or required, prior to summary approval. Young v. Stillwater County Comm'rs, 177 M 488, 582 P2d 353 (1978).

Application: A certificate of survey is not subject to review under this section. State ex rel. Swart v. Stucky, 167 M 171, 536 P2d 762 (1975).

Attorney General's Opinions

Compliance Review of Local Subdivision Rules Required at Preliminary Plat Stage: The review of a proposed subdivision for compliance with local subdivision regulations must occur at the preliminary plat stage. Once a preliminary plat is approved, additional conditions for compliance may not be imposed, so compliance review at the final plat stage would render review meaningless. 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

Condominiums Not Exempt From Provisions of Subdivision and Platting Act: Condominiums are subdivisions that are not exempted under 76-3-204 from the provisions of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. 45 A.G. Op. 12 (1993).

Authority of County Commissioners to Approve Subdivisions Under Commission-Manager Government: The Board of County Commissioners has final authority to approve subdivisions that are within the 3-mile area immediately outside the corporate limits of the city when the city has a commission-manager form of government. 43 A.G. Op. 26 (1989).

Tract of Four-Plexes Considered a Subdivision: A developer's construction of 48 four-plexes, to be used as rental occupancy buildings, on a tract of land owned by the developer is a "subdivision" subject to local review under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Each dwelling unit constitutes a parcel and will be segregated from the larger tract by transference of possession. Since the units will be newly constructed, the exemption in 76-3-204 does not apply. 40 A.G. Op. 57 (1984). (Opinion rendered prior to 1985 amendment of 76-3-204.)

State Agency Subject to Local Review in Creation of Recreational Vehicle Camping Area: The term "subdivision" is defined in 76-3-103 to include the provision of multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks argued that, as a state agency, it was exempt from the review requirement. Because exemptions are provided for some state activities but not for activities to provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles on state land, the clear implication is that the state is to stand on the same footing as a private person in this matter. It was noted that there is a trend toward abandoning the traditional view that activities of the state may be exercised free of local control. The Department is subject to local subdivision review to the extent that it creates an area which will provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. 39 A.G. Op. 14 (1981).

Case Notes

Preliminary Subdivision Plat Properly Voided for Failure to Provide Available Ground Water Information and to Consider Surface Pollution Impacts: The District Court held that the Helena City Commission improperly granted a subdivision plat and voided the preliminary plat. The developer challenged the decision, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court concluded that an environmental assessment of the subdivision proposal was adequate regarding a base flood elevation survey, the requirement of a hydraulic analysis, and the soil liquefaction issue but that the assessment was inadequate regarding issues related to probable impacts arising from surface pollution entering ground water and an adjacent creek and failed to contain available ground water information. The District Court also correctly concluded that a paucity of information on ground water prevented the Commission from taking the required hard look at those impacts pursuant to Clark Fork Coalition v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2008 MT 407, 347 M 197, 197 P3d 482 (2008), so the Commission's decision to approve the preliminary plat without an assessment of the impact of surface pollution on ground water and on the nearby creek was arbitrary and capricious. Aspen Trails Ranch, LLC v. Simmons, 2010 MT 79, 356 Mont. 41, 230 P.3d 808.

Failure of Environmental Assessment to Provide Statutorily Required Summary of Subdivision Impact — Approval of Preliminary Plat Unlawful: Plaintiffs asserted that the Board of County Commissioners erred in approving a preliminary plat for a subdivision in rural Sanders County. The District Court granted judgment for the Board and the developer. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The environmental assessment prepared in support of the subdivision was inadequate in explaining how the subdivision would impact water resources and water management such as wastewater and runoff, roads and traffic, and essential public services such as fire and police services. Because the environmental assessment was inadequate under plain statutory language, the Board's approval of the preliminary plat was unlawful for failure to comply with relevant statutes. The case was remanded for entry of judgment in favor of plaintiffs. Citizens for Responsible Dev. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2009 MT 182, 351 M 40, 208 P3d 876 (2009).

Transition — Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 527, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies to jurisdictions that adopted a growth policy pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 2001, beginning October 1, 2002."

1999 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 236 in (2) substituted "within 60 working days" for "within 60 days"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 5, 1999.

Chapter 582 throughout section substituted reference to disapprove for reference to reject; in (1) substituted "growth policy" for "master plan"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 582, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Transition: Section 36, Ch. 582, L. 1999, provided: "A governing body that adopts a master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 1, before October 1, 1999, may adopt zoning regulations that are consistent with the master plan pursuant to Title 76, chapter 2, part 2 or 3, until October 1, 2001."

Case Notes

Subdivision Application Not Arbitrary, Capricious, or Unlawful — Denial of Application Affirmed: Granite County denied plaintiffs' subdivision application on the basis that there were significant and unmitigable adverse impacts to agriculture, local schools, traffic, and the public health and safety. Plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court considered the potential impacts of each of the factors and affirmed. The county's decision to deny the application was not arbitrary, capricious, or unlawful, and the District Court properly affirmed the application denial. Hansen v. Granite County, 2010 MT 107, 356 Mont. 269, 232 P.3d 409.

Failure of Environmental Assessment to Provide Statutorily Required Summary of Subdivision Impact — Approval of Preliminary Plat Unlawful: Plaintiffs asserted that the Board of County Commissioners erred in approving a preliminary plat for a subdivision in rural Sanders County. The District Court granted judgment for the Board and the developer. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The environmental assessment prepared in support of the subdivision was inadequate in explaining how the subdivision would impact water resources and water management such as wastewater and runoff, roads and traffic, and essential public services such as fire and police services. Because the environmental assessment was inadequate under plain statutory language, the Board's approval of the preliminary plat was unlawful for failure to comply with relevant statutes. The case was remanded for entry of judgment in favor of plaintiffs. Citizens for Responsible Dev. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2009 MT 182, 351 M 40, 208 P3d 876 (2009).

No Error in Approval of Preliminary Plat Prior to Water and Sanitation Review and Approval of Final Plat: Plaintiffs contended that state approval of water and sanitation issues was required before a local government may approve a preliminary plat. The District Court disagreed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. In this case, in accordance with regulations and normal practice in the course of preliminary plat review, the Board of County Commissioners approved a preliminary plat with several conditions, including state approval of water and sanitation systems, and final plat approval was contingent on satisfaction of those conditions. Thus, the District Court correctly determined that the preliminary plat review stage did not end with approval of the preliminary plat, but only after the developer satisfied the mitigating conditions imposed on the preliminary plat approval. Fielder v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2007 MT 118, 337 M 256, 162 P3d 67 (2007). See also 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

Standard of Review — Denial of Preliminary Subdivision Application Not Arbitrary, Capricious, or Unlawful: A preliminary subdivision application is subject to the review of the governing body to determine whether the plat conforms to the master growth plan (now growth policy) adopted for the area and the plat's effect on the public health, safety, and welfare. The standard of review applied as to whether the review was conducted correctly is whether the record establishes that the governing body acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unlawfully. Here, the record established that the Ennis Town Council heard evidence that a proposed recreational vehicle park did not conform to the goals of the Ennis comprehensive plan (now growth policy) and that the proposed park posed a threat to the health, safety, and welfare of the townspeople of Ennis. The decision to deny the preliminary subdivision application was not arbitrary, capricious, or unlawful and was properly affirmed. Madison River R.V. Ltd. v. Ennis, 2000 MT 15, 298 M 91, 994 P2d 1098, 57 St. Rep. 84 (2000). See also N. Fork Preservation Ass'n v. Dept. of State Lands, 238 M 451, 778 P2d 862 (1989).

Extension Within Reasonable Time of Expiration of Period: In October 1981, the Flathead County Commissioners gave preliminary 1-year approval to a subdivision plat. In December 1982, the developer requested an extension to the preliminary approval. On January 14, 1983, the Commissioners approved the extension. Plaintiff filed a complaint alleging 76-3-610 precluded the Commissioners from granting an extension to the preliminary approval after the original time period had run. The District Court dismissed the action. Plaintiff appealed, contending that the phrase "At the end of" in the statute meant by or before the period in question expires and not after the expiration. The Supreme Court held that the plain meaning of the statute was evident in the language used. The statute permits County Commissioners to grant an extension to a preliminary plat approval within a reasonable time of the expiration of that period. Oldenburg v. Flathead County, 208 M 128, 676 P2d 778, 41 St. Rep. 217 (1984).

Standing to Compel Review of Subdivision: Where petitioner, an engineering group seeking a Writ of Mandamus ordering County Commissioners to act on five minor subdivisions, had no legal interest in any of the land subject to this action, it has no standing to bring an action. State ex rel. Professional Consultants, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 181 M 177, 592 P2d 945, 36 St. Rep. 613 (1979). (Dissent by Chief Justice Haswell.)

Attorney General's Opinions

Compliance Review of Local Subdivision Rules Required at Preliminary Plat Stage: The review of a proposed subdivision for compliance with local subdivision regulations must occur at the preliminary plat (now preliminary subdivision application) stage. Once a preliminary plat is approved, additional conditions for compliance may not be imposed, so compliance review at the final plat stage would render review meaningless. (See 2005 amendment.) 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

No Delegation of Approval or Rejection of Plat to Planning Board or Staff: While this section allows for review of a preliminary plat (now preliminary subdivision application) by a governing body or its designated agent or agency, the approval, conditional approval, or rejection of the preliminary plat must be an action of the governing body itself and may not be delegated by a county commission to a planning board or to an administrative officer on the planning board staff. 41 A.G. Op. 64 (1986).

WHEREAS, farmers and ranchers are often forced to sell their land to generate sufficient income to retire; and

WHEREAS, cluster development can facilitate the preservation of Montana's unique landscape; and

WHEREAS, cluster development can reduce local government costs for infrastructure and provision of services by concentrating building sites on smaller lots so that services and utilities can be concentrated in a smaller area; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Department of Commerce is charged with providing technical assistance and information related to community development; and

WHEREAS, local governments need mechanisms to encourage development approaches that minimize costs to local citizens and that promote effective and efficient provision of public services."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 582 throughout section substituted "growth policy" for "master plan" or "plan"; in (3)(a) inserted exception clause; at end of (6)(b) substituted "meet the requirements of 76-1-601" for former language that read: "(i) housing, transportation, and land use elements sufficient for the governing body to protect public health, safety, and welfare; and

(ii) a discussion of physical constraints on development that exist within the area encompassed by the proposed subdivision"; inserted (7) authorizing governing body to exempt subdivisions entirely within designated geographic boundaries from review criteria and outlining criteria for exemption; and made minor changes in style. 1993 Amendment: Chapter 272 in (1), before "environmental assessment", inserted "applicable" and at end substituted "meets the requirements of this chapter" for "would be in the public interest. The governing body shall disapprove any subdivision which it finds not to be in the public interest"; in (2), at beginning, deleted "To determine whether the proposed subdivision would be in the public interest" and at end substituted reference to the criteria in subsection (3) for specific criteria relating to the basis of the need for the subdivision, public opinion, and effects on agriculture, local services, taxes, the environment, wildlife and its habitat, and public health and safety; inserted (3) stating criteria that a subdivision proposal must be reviewed for; and made minor changes in style. Case Notes

Failure to Consult With Subdivider Not Error When Plat Application Denied — Plain Meaning Rule: When the Gallatin County Board of County Commissioners denied an application for approval of a subdivision, it was not error for the Board to refuse to consult with the subdivider regarding mitigation. Under the language of 76-3-608, and in accordance with the plain meaning rule of interpreting statutes, consultation with the subdivider is required only when mitigation is required. MM&I, LLC v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2010 MT 274, 358 Mont. 420, 246 P.3d 1029.

Preliminary Subdivision Plat Properly Voided for Failure to Provide Available Ground Water Information and to Consider Surface Pollution Impacts: The District Court held that the Helena City Commission improperly granted a subdivision plat and voided the preliminary plat. The developer challenged the decision, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court concluded that an environmental assessment of the subdivision proposal was adequate regarding a base flood elevation survey, the requirement of a hydraulic analysis, and the soil liquefaction issue but that the assessment was inadequate regarding issues related to probable impacts arising from surface pollution entering ground water and an adjacent creek and failed to contain available ground water information. The District Court also correctly concluded that a paucity of information on ground water prevented the Commission from taking the required hard look at those impacts pursuant to Clark Fork Coalition v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2008 MT 407, 347 M 197, 197 P3d 482 (2008), so the Commission's decision to approve the preliminary plat without an assessment of the impact of surface pollution on ground water and on the nearby creek was arbitrary and capricious. Aspen Trails Ranch, LLC v. Simmons, 2010 MT 79, 356 Mont. 41, 230 P.3d 808.

Failure of Environmental Assessment to Provide Statutorily Required Summary of Subdivision Impact — Approval of Preliminary Plat Unlawful: Plaintiffs asserted that the Board of County Commissioners erred in approving a preliminary plat for a subdivision in rural Sanders County. The District Court granted judgment for the Board and the developer. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The environmental assessment prepared in support of the subdivision was inadequate in explaining how the subdivision would impact water resources and water management such as wastewater and runoff, roads and traffic, and essential public services such as fire and police services. Because the environmental assessment was inadequate under plain statutory language, the Board's approval of the preliminary plat was unlawful for failure to comply with relevant statutes. The case was remanded for entry of judgment in favor of plaintiffs. Citizens for Responsible Dev. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2009 MT 182, 351 M 40, 208 P3d 876 (2009).

No Error in Approval of Preliminary Plat Prior to Water and Sanitation Review and Approval of Final Plat: Plaintiffs contended that state approval of water and sanitation issues was required before a local government may approve a preliminary plat. The District Court disagreed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. In this case, in accordance with regulations and normal practice in the course of preliminary plat review, the Board of County Commissioners approved a preliminary plat with several conditions, including state approval of water and sanitation systems, and final plat approval was contingent on satisfaction of those conditions. Thus, the District Court correctly determined that the preliminary plat review stage did not end with approval of the preliminary plat, but only after the developer satisfied the mitigating conditions imposed on the preliminary plat approval. Fielder v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2007 MT 118, 337 M 256, 162 P3d 67 (2007). See also 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

Prevailing on State Claim but Not on Federal Section 1983 Claim — No Attorney Fees Under Federal Law Rule for Section 1983 Claim: The city approved a preliminary subdivision application, subject to 26 conditions imposed by the city, and the developer sued the city for imposing the conditions. Although the developer prevailed on its claims under state law, it did not prevail on its federal section 1983 claim that the city acted arbitrarily and capriciously in imposing conditions when the city conditionally approved the preliminary subdivision application. Therefore, the developer was not entitled to attorney fees under the rule that a prevailing section 1983 plaintiff should ordinarily recover attorney fees unless special circumstances would render an award unjust. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Right to Be Free From Unreasonable Restriction on Development — Not Sufficient Protected Property Interest to Support Federal Section 1983 Claim: This section's provision that when reviewing a subdivision and requiring mitigation, a governing body may not unreasonably restrict a landowner's ability to develop land did not give the developer a protected property interest sufficient to support a claim under 42 U.S.C. 1983 that the city acted arbitrarily and capriciously in imposing conditions when the city conditionally approved the preliminary plat application. This section imposes restrictions upon a landowner's ability to develop land; it does not establish a right to develop the land. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Local Governing Body Failure to Follow Local Regulations on Criteria for Approval of Subdivision: Section 76-3-501 requires the local governing body to review and approve or disapprove a proposed subdivision under the local regulations in effect at the time that an application for approval of a preliminary plat is submitted to the local governing body. (See 2005 amendments to 76-3-501 and 76-3-604.) The governing body may not ignore its own local regulations and apply only the criteria that this section requires to be considered. In this case, the local regulations contained the five criteria provided in this section but, in addition, still contained three criteria that had been amended out of that section. The local governing body conditionally approved a subdivision without considering those three criteria. This chapter's mandate that a local governing body assert local control and develop its own subdivision regulations, as well as other provisions of this chapter, clearly contemplates that the local government entity is free to promulgate regulations, in addition to those in this chapter, that do not necessarily conform exactly to this chapter, so long as the regulations do not conflict with this chapter. This chapter establishes minimum requirements that the local governing body must follow. The additional three criteria in the local governing body's regulations do not conflict with this chapter, and findings on those criteria were mandated. In addition, the local governing body failed to follow its local regulation stating that findings on the criteria that the local regulation required to be applied must show that the subdivision will be in the public interest. The District Court therefore properly set aside the local governing body's conditional approval of the subdivision. Burnt Fork Citizens Coalition v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Ravalli County, 287 M 43, 951 P2d 1020, 54 St. Rep. 1490 (1997).

Stand-Alone Local Vicinity Plan Violative of Master Plan (now Growth Policy) — Local Vicinity Plan as Amendment to or Partial Repeal of Master Plan (now Growth Policy) Improper: It was improper for a county to adopt a local vicinity plan (LVP) that regulated development in a specific area of the county when the LVP violated the mandate of the county master plan (now growth policy) authorizing an LVP only to the extent that it was consistent with the master plan (now growth policy). An LVP may not stand alone as the preeminent plan for a particular area when the LVP is inconsistent with the county master plan (now growth policy), nor may an LVP be adopted as an amendment to or revision or repeal of the master plan (now growth policy) in a manner that subordinates the goals and objectives of the master plan (now growth policy) as the preeminent county planning device. Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997).

Consistency Between Comprehensive Plan (now Growth Policy), Zoning Ordinances, and Other Planning Documents — Validity of Development Approvals: Zoning ordinances and other planning documents adopted after adoption of a comprehensive (master) plan (now growth policy) must be consistent with the comprehensive plan (now growth policy) and with each other, and when all three were inconsistent with each other, the zoning commission exceeded its jurisdiction and authority when it approved a planned unit development. It was unsatisfactory to base the decision to approve the development on planning documents that were inherently inconsistent and unreliable. Bridger Canyon Property Owners' Ass'n, Inc. v. Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 270 M 160, 890 P2d 1268, 52 St. Rep. 125 (1995), followed in Ash Grove Cement Co. v. Jefferson County, 283 M 486, 943 P2d 85, 54 St. Rep. 756 (1997), and N. 93 Neighbors, Inc. v. Flathead County Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2006 MT 132, 332 M 327, 137 P3d 557 (2006).

Denial of Application Not Abuse of Discretion: The County Commissioners denied an application for further development of a subdivision until existing drainage problems were remedied by the developer. The Supreme Court held that the Commissioners' decision was based on sufficient evidence that further development could constitute a threat to the public's health and was not an abuse of discretion. Christianson v. Gasvoda, 242 M 212, 789 P2d 1234, 47 St. Rep. 696 (1990). See also MM&I, LLC v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2010 MT 274, 358 Mont. 420, 246 P.3d 1029.

Public Interest Finding — Application: The public interest finding mandated by this section applies to "minor" subdivisions which qualify for review under 76-3-609. (See 1993 amendments.) State ex rel. Florence-Carlton School District v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 180 M 285, 590 P2d 602 (1978).

Attorney General's Opinions

Compliance Review of Local Subdivision Rules Required at Preliminary Plat Stage: The review of a proposed subdivision for compliance with local subdivision regulations must occur at the preliminary plat (now preliminary subdivision application) stage. Once a preliminary plat is approved, additional conditions for compliance may not be imposed, so compliance review at the final plat stage would render review meaningless. 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 236 in (1) substituted "within 35 working days" for "within 35 days"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 5, 1999.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 236, L. 1999, provided: "[This act] does not apply to subdivision proposals submitted to a governing body prior to [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 5, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 468 in (1) and (3) substituted "minor subdivision" for "such subdivision"; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 468, L. 1995, provided: "It is the intent of the legislature that the department of commerce, local government assistance division, update its model subdivision rules to minimize the fiscal impacts to local governments in implementing this legislation."

Applicability: Section 13, Ch. 468, L. 1995, provided: "Funds in a park fund that exceed $10,000 as of [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1995] must be used for park land acquisition and initial development. Funds in a park fund up to $10,000 as of [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1995] may be used for park maintenance in accordance with a formally adopted park plan."

1987 Amendment: Deleted former (2) that read: "(2) (a) For divisions of land consisting exclusively of parcels 20 acres and larger, the governing body shall review the division of land within 35 days of the submission of an application for review. The governing body's review must be limited to a written determination that appropriate access and easements are properly provided. The review shall provide either:

(i) that the access and easements are suitable for the purposes of providing appropriate services to the land; or

(ii) that the access and easements are not suitable for the purposes of providing appropriate services to the land, in which case the county, the school district or districts, and other authorities and districts in which the land is located will not provide services that involve use of the unsuitable access and easements. Such services include:

(A) fire protection;

(B) school busing;

(C) ambulance;

(D) snow removal; and

(E) similar services as determined by the governing body.

(b) The governing body shall deliver a copy of the determination of the review to the county clerk and recorder to be reflected on the certificate of survey or deed of conveyance of the land that was subject to review.

(c) The governing body may, upon application by a landowner, redetermine the suitability of access and easements. If the governing body determines that there has been a material change regarding access or easements and the change provides for suitable access and easements for services, it may determine that such land is now suitable as provided in subsection (2)(a)(i) and shall deliver a copy of such determination to the county clerk and recorder to be reflected on the certificate of survey or deed of conveyance.

(d) Requirements for holding a public hearing, preparing an environmental assessment, and finding that the division of land is in the public interest do not apply."

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2) (see 1987 amendment note for text).

Standing for Mandamus: Petitioner, an engineering survey group seeking a Writ of Mandamus to compel County Commissioners to act on five minor subdivisions, has no stated legal interest in any of the subdivisions. Some form of ownership in the land is necessary to impart standing to bring a mandamus action. State ex rel. Professional Consultants, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 181 M 177, 592 P2d 945, 36 St. Rep. 613 (1979).

Public Interest Finding — Application: The public interest finding mandated by 76-3-608 applies to "minor" subdivisions which qualify for review under this section. State ex rel. Florence-Carlton School District v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 180 M 285, 590 P2d 602 (1978).

Attorney General's Opinions

Original Property Boundary Established by United States Government Survey — Parcels Not Exempt From Subdivision and Platting Act: The sole fact that a parcel of land was described by references to boundaries established by a United States government survey does not exempt the parcel from the requirements of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Federal survey laws that were adopted to facilitate the conveyance of land in the public domain into private ownership are distinct from Montana subdivision laws that generally regulate divisions of land and conveyances of property among private landowners. Therefore, a property owner may not convey, without complying with Montana subdivision laws, component aliquot parts of sections and government lots that are described and identified in a deed on file with a County Clerk and Recorder and that are less than 160 acres in size. 47 A.G. Op. 10 (1997), clarifying 38 A.G. Op. 66 (1980).

Size Parcel Prohibited by Master Plan (now Growth Policy) — Certificate Filing Required — Conditional Issuance of Permit: A local government unit with self-governing powers may not refuse to file a certificate of survey simply because the parcel encompasses less than 40 but equal to or greater than 20 acres, even if its master plan (now growth policy) prohibits divisions of land of such size. However, the local government may condition issuance of permits for construction, alteration, or enlargement of structures upon compliance with the master plan (now growth policy). 42 A.G. Op. 16 (1987).

Effect of Nonsuitability Determination on Services — Taxation: A nonsuitability determination with respect to access prohibits any political subdivision from providing those services specified by the governing body as inappropriate. In appropriate circumstances, the governing body may include certain services provided by sheriff's or police departments as "similar services" which will not be provided to a parcel of land with a nonsuitability determination. The owner of real property affected by a nonsuitability determination is not relieved of his obligation to tender all taxes required of property owners, including those which support governmental services he is prohibited from receiving by the nonsuitability determination. 41 A.G. Op. 86 (1986).

Nonsuitability Determination — Provision of Services — Tax Obligations: The provisions of this section relating to nonsuitability determinations (deleted, sec. 2, Ch. 256, L. 1987), with respect to an access or casement, prohibited any political subdivision from providing those services specified by the governing body as inappropriate and included, under appropriate circumstances, certain services provided by Sheriff's or police departments. An owner of real property affected by a nonsuitability determination was not relieved of his obligation to pay all taxes otherwise required of property owners, including taxes that supported governmental services prohibited by the determination. 41 A.G. Op. 86 (1986).

Suitability for Access — Landowner May Declare Unsuitability: If a landowner elects on his application to accept a written determination that access and easements are not suitable for the purposes of providing services to the divided parcels, the local governing body may attach this notation to the instrument of transference prior to the recordation and forego any review of access suitability. 41 A.G. Op. 43 (1986).

Suitability for Access Review Mandatory: In divisions of land consisting exclusively of parcels 20 acres or larger, the landowner must apply to the local governing body for a determination of whether appropriate access and easements are properly provided. 41 A.G. Op. 43 (1986).

2011 Amendment: Chapter 252 in (1) near end of third sentence substituted "a mutually agreed-upon period of time" for "no more than 1 calendar year, except that the governing body may extend its approval for a period of more than 1 year if that approval period is included as a specific condition of a written agreement between the governing body and the subdivider, according to 76-3-507" and inserted fourth and fifth sentences regarding written extensions. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 252, L. 2011, provided: "[This act] applies to subdivision applications and preliminary plats approved prior to [the effective date of this act] and to those approved on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective October 1, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 446 in (2) at beginning inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 298 in (1) in first sentence near beginning inserted "application and"; in (2) near beginning inserted "application and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 19, 2005.

Applicability: Section 19(1), Ch. 298, L. 2005, provided: "(1) [This act] applies to subdivision applications submitted on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 19, 2005.

1983 Amendment: In (1), changed the period of effectiveness of approval of a preliminary plat from not more than 1 calendar year to not more than 3 calendar years or less than 1 calendar year.

1981 Amendment: Added the exception for approval extension at the end of (1) following "for no more than 1 calendar year"; added "the original or extended approval period as provided in subsection (1)" at the end of (2).

Case Notes

No Error in Approval of Preliminary Plat Prior to Water and Sanitation Review and Approval of Final Plat: Plaintiffs contended that state approval of water and sanitation issues was required before a local government may approve a preliminary plat. The District Court disagreed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. In this case, in accordance with regulations and normal practice in the course of preliminary plat review, the Board of County Commissioners approved a preliminary plat with several conditions, including state approval of water and sanitation systems, and final plat approval was contingent on satisfaction of those conditions. Thus, the District Court correctly determined that the preliminary plat review stage did not end with approval of the preliminary plat, but only after the developer satisfied the mitigating conditions imposed on the preliminary plat approval. Fielder v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2007 MT 118, 337 M 256, 162 P3d 67 (2007). See also 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

Failure to Submit Application for Final Plat Approval and Meet Conditions Imposed on Preliminary Application for Plat Approval — No Protected Property Interest Supporting Federal Section 1983 Claim: Because the developer had not applied for final plat approval and had not met all the conditions imposed upon the preliminary plat approval, it did not have a protected property interest sufficient to support a claim under 42 U.S.C. 1983 that the city acted arbitrarily and capriciously in imposing conditions when the city conditionally approved the preliminary plat application. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Prevailing on State Claim but Not on Federal Section 1983 Claim — No Attorney Fees Under Federal Law Rule for Section 1983 Claim: The city approved a preliminary subdivision application, subject to 26 conditions imposed by the city, and the developer sued the city for imposing the conditions. Although the developer prevailed on its claims under state law, it did not prevail on its federal section 1983 claim that the city acted arbitrarily and capriciously in imposing conditions when the city conditionally approved the preliminary subdivision application. Therefore, the developer was not entitled to attorney fees under the rule that a prevailing section 1983 plaintiff should ordinarily recover attorney fees unless special circumstances would render an award unjust. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Shared Well Agreement Valid Despite Subdivision Requirement for Individual Wells When Approved by State and County Regulators: Despite conditions in the subdivision certificate that called for individual water wells on each tract, the predecessors in interest to the Williamses and the Schwagers entered a shared water well agreement that endured between the tract owners for about 20 years. The subdivision certificate was approved by both the state and county. A disagreement arose between the Williamses and the Schwagers regarding use of the shared well, and the Williamses sought to enjoin the Schwagers from interfering with the well. The Schwagers responded that the well was in violation of the subdivision certificate and that the shared water well agreement was thus void. The District Court concluded that the agreement was valid and enforceable, and granted the Williamses' injunction. The Schwagers appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The agreement was not void ab initio because the subdivision certificate was approved as required prior to installation of the water system, nor was the agreement illegal per se, because a county health department official testified that the parties could still obtain approval for a shared well, which was encouraged by the county in cases in which sufficient water existed, despite the requirement in the subdivision certificate that called for individual water systems. Further, the Schwagers could not attempt to benefit from repudiating the contract after previously accepting the benefits of the agreement in the form of water fees from the Williamses, and the District Court did not err in enforcing the agreement. Williams v. Schwager, 2002 MT 107, 309 M 455, 47 P3d 839 (2002).

Extension Within Reasonable Time of Expiration of Period: In October 1981, the Flathead County Commissioners gave preliminary 1-year approval to a subdivision plat. In December 1982, the developer requested an extension to the preliminary approval. On January 14, 1983, the Commissioners approved the extension. Plaintiff filed a complaint alleging 76-3-610 precluded the Commissioners from granting an extension to the preliminary approval after the original time period had run. The District Court dismissed the action. Plaintiff appealed, contending that the phrase "At the end of" in the statute meant by or before the period in question expires and not after the expiration. The Supreme Court held that the plain meaning of the statute was evident in the language used. The statute permits County Commissioners to grant an extension to a preliminary plat approval within a reasonable time of the expiration of that period. Oldenburg v. Flathead County, 208 M 128, 676 P2d 778, 41 St. Rep. 217 (1984).

Examining Surveyor's Fee — County With Charter Government: A county with a charter form of local government is not prohibited from establishing a fee for the examination of a plat or certificate of survey by the examining surveyor if the standards of the review are not inconsistent with this section under 7-1-113, because this section is silent in regard to fees and a charter form of government under Art. XI, sec. 6, Mont. Const., and 7-1-103 may exercise any power not expressly prohibited. State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100, 38 St. Rep. 71 (1981).

Title Insurance Insufficient to Satisfy Certificate of Title Requirement: A title insurance policy does not satisfy the certificate of title requirement of 76-3-612. The purpose of the certificate of title requirement is to inform the governing body of the status of the title. Title insurance is inadequate for this purpose since it does not purport to detail the status of the title but merely constitutes an agreement to defend title if defects should be alleged in the future. 38 A.G. Op. 48 (1979).

Section Impliedly Amended — Effect of Sunsetting of Board of Abstracters: The sunsetting of the Board of Abstracters does not relieve a subdivider of his duty to provide a certificate of title. However, by allowing the Board to "sunset", the Legislature impliedly amended this section, removing the requirement that the certificate be prepared by a "licensed" title abstracter (the term "licensed" was removed by express amendment in 1981). 38 A.G. Licensed Abstracter Certificate Not Required Unless Dedication: Abstract examination and certificate from licensed abstracter are not required when lands outside city are surveyed and certificate of survey or plot is prepared for one or more tracts with no dedication for streets, alleys, playgrounds, or other purposes ("licensed" deleted by 1981 amendment). 35 A.G. Complaint in Possession of Clerk of Court Within Thirty Days of Approval of Preliminary Subdivision Plat Considered Timely Despite Filing After Thirty Days: An aggrieved party may appeal the approval of a preliminary subdivision plat to the District Court within 30 days of the date when a governing body conditionally approves the plat. Sanders County Commissioners approved a preliminary plat on March 30, so a timely appeal was required on or before April 29, 2004. Plaintiffs' attorney delivered a complaint to UPS in Missoula on April 28 for overnight delivery. UPS tracking information showed that the complaint was delivered to the Sanders County Clerk of the District Court on April 29, but the clerk did not stamp the complaint as filed until May 3. Defendant asserted that the complaint was filed after the 30-day appeal period, and the District Court agreed but addressed the merits nevertheless. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that because the undisputed evidence showed that the clerk received the complaint on April 29, the appeal was timely regardless of the date that the complaint was stamped as filed. Fielder v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2007 MT 118, 337 M 256, 162 P3d 67 (2007). See also Cintron v. Union Pac. RR Co., 813 F2d 917 (9th Cir. 1987), and Sheviakov v. City Council Minutes and Testimony of Its Members Inadmissible to Show Cause for Denial of Subdivision Approval: Because the City Council violated this section by failing to issue a written statement of the reasons and evidence for denying a subdivision approval, it could not use the minutes of its meeting on the subject and the testimony of its members to explain the denial. (See 2005 amendment.) The minutes were not the equivalent of a written statement and evidence of them was properly excluded by the District Court. The testimony of the City Council members constituted after-the-fact opinions that were not properly part of the record. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Showing of Irrevocably Closed Mind as Proof of Prejudice by Administrative Decisionmaker: Madison River R.V. Ltd. (RV) sought to build a recreational vehicle park in Ennis. Prior to a hearing before the Ennis Town Council, RV requested in writing that one of the council members recuse himself, based on his alleged bias against the project. The request was denied without objection by the other council members, and RV's application for the park was also denied. On appeal, RV contended that the council member's participation in the council's deliberations was error, citing the principle that one who makes decisions in a judicial or quasi-judicial capacity must be free from bias. However, no authority was cited that the principle applies to elected members of a city council. Pursuant to Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Cement Institute, 333 US 683, 92 L Ed 1010, 68 S Ct 793 (1948), in order to prevail on a claim of prejudice or bias against an administrative decisionmaker, the petitioner must show that the decisionmaker had an irrevocably closed mind on the subject under investigation or adjudication. Here, RV failed to establish that the council member's mind was irrevocably closed. The District Court's determination that the town council was not required to disqualify the member from voting and that the council's decision should not be vacated because of its failure to disqualify the member in question was affirmed. Madison River R.V. Ltd. v. Ennis, 2000 MT 15, 298 M 91, 994 P2d 1098, 57 St. Rep. 84 (2000).

Town Council's Findings Timely Filed and Properly Part of Record for Court Review: Madison River R.V. Ltd. (RV) applied to build a recreational vehicle park in Ennis, but the application was denied by the Ennis Town Council. RV appealed to the District Court, but the council's findings were filed 15 days after RV filed the appeal, which RV contended was not timely. Under this section, a decision to deny a subdivision application must include a written statement giving the reason for the denial, but the 30 days allowed for appeal under 76-3-625 do not begin to run until the council members sign the written findings. The fact that RV's notice of appeal was filed prematurely did not render untimely the written statements of reasons for denial of the application for plat approval. Madison River R.V. Ltd. v. Ennis, 2000 MT 15, 298 M 91, 994 P2d 1098, 57 St. Rep. 84 (2000).

Applicability: Section 13, Ch. 468, L. 1995, provided: "Funds in a park fund that exceed $10,000 as of [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1995] must be used for park land acquisition and initial development. Funds in a park fund up to $10,000 as of [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1995] may be used for park maintenance in accordance with a formally adopted park plan."

Case Notes

Cash Donation in Lieu of Park Dedication Requirement Proper: This section allows a Board of County Commissioners to accept either a land or a cash donation to satisfy the park dedication requirement. Here, the Board proposed that a developer satisfy the park requirement with a cash-in-lieu payment because the land proposed by the developer was not suitable for use as parkland. Absent evidence to the contrary, the Board did not act arbitrarily or capriciously in requesting cash in lieu of a land donation. Fielder v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2007 MT 118, 337 M 256, 162 P3d 67 (2007).

Applicability: Section 25(1), Ch. 446, L. 2009, provided: "(1) [Sections 13, 20, and 22] [76-3-504, 76-3-620, and 76-3-625], concerning adoption of regulations and time references in the regulations, apply upon adoption of regulations under [section 13] [76-3-504] or on May 1, 2010, whichever occurs first."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 298 in (2) in first sentence near middle substituted "or deny an application and preliminary plat for a proposed subdivision or a final subdivision" for "or disapprove a proposed preliminary plat or final subdivision". Amendment effective April 19, 2005.

Applicability: Section 19(1), Ch. 298, L. 2005, provided: "(1) [This act] applies to subdivision applications submitted on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 19, 2005.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 468, L. 1995, provided: "It is the intent of the legislature that the department of commerce, local government assistance division, update its model subdivision rules to minimize the fiscal impacts to local governments in implementing this legislation."

Applicability: Section 13, Ch. 468, L. 1995, provided: "Funds in a park fund that exceed $10,000 as of [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1995] must be used for park land acquisition and initial development. Funds in a park fund up to $10,000 as of [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1995] may be used for park maintenance in accordance with a formally adopted park plan."

Case Notes

Requirements for Associational Standing Satisfied — Standing to Challenge City's Subdivision Approval: After the Missoula City Council approved a subdivision in the Rattlesnake watershed, three neighbors who were members of the North Duncan Drive Neighborhood Association sued to overturn the city's decision, alleging specific injuries as a basis for their petition. The Supreme Court, citing Geil v. Missoula Irrigation District, 2002 MT 269, 312 Mont. 320, 59 P.3d 398, and Mont. Envt'l. Information Center v. Dept. Of Environmental Quality, 1999 MT 248, 296 Mont. 207, 988 P.2d 1236, held that because the three members were injured and could have sued in their own right, the Neighborhood Association had "associational standing" to represent the Association and thereby give the Association standing as an aggrieved party. Heffernan v. Missoula City Council, 2011 MT 91, 360 Mont. 207, 255 P.3d 80.

Substantial Evidence for Upholding County Denial — Conflicts in Evidence Not Controlling: MM&I submitted an application to the Belgrade City-County Planning Board for approval of its subdivision plat, which the Planning Board approved. However, because of unmitigated impacts, the application was denied by the Gallatin County Board of County Commissioners (Board) and MM&I brought suit, claiming that the Board acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner. After reviewing the evidence before the District Court regarding various types of impacts, the Supreme Court upheld the District Court. Relying upon Hansen v. Granite County, 2010 MT 107, 356 Mont. 269, 232 P.3d 409, the Supreme Court held that as long as there was substantial evidence of unmitigated impacts before the Board, the fact that the evidence was conflicting did not mean that the commissioners acted in an arbitrary or capricious manner. MM&I, LLC v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2010 MT 274, 358 Mont. 420, 246 P.3d 1029.

Subdivision Application Not Arbitrary, Capricious, or Unlawful — Denial of Application Affirmed: Granite County denied plaintiffs' subdivision application on the basis that there were significant and unmitigable adverse impacts to agriculture, local schools, traffic, and the public health and safety. Plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court considered the potential impacts of each of the factors and affirmed. The county's decision to deny the application was not arbitrary, capricious, or unlawful, and the District Court properly affirmed the application denial. Hansen v. Granite County, 2010 MT 107, 356 Mont. 269, 232 P.3d 409.

Sufficient Showing of Alleged Injury to Confer Standing by Adjacent Landowner to Challenge Subdivision Plat: A subdivision developer claimed that landowners with property in the area of the proposed subdivision lacked standing to challenge the City Commission's approval of the subdivision plat. The District Court disagreed, and on appeal the Supreme Court affirmed. The parties conceded that one landowner's property was contiguous to the proposed subdivision, and that landowner averred that the subdivision would affect the enjoyment of his property, given that: (1) the area of the subdivision was prone to flooding and had potential to change the channel of a nearby stream; (2) dense development and accompanying storm water runoff would potentially disturb natural recharge of the aquifer and could adversely impact his water supply; and (3) alleged impacts to wildlife habitat and wetlands and increased noise, traffic, and light pollution would result in a decrease in his property values. The landowner's allegations of potential injury were sufficiently distinguishable from potential injury to the general public to confer standing. Additionally, the standing of any one of the landowners allowed the suit to go forward because all the landowners sought to void the preliminary plat. Aspen Trails Ranch, LLC v. Simmons, 2010 MT 79, 356 Mont. 41, 230 P.3d 808. See also Clinton v. City of N.Y., 524 US 417 (1998), and Mont. Envtl. Information Center v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 1999 MT 248, 296 Mont. 207, 988 P.2d 1236.

Application of Proper Standard of Review of Summary Judgment on Subdivision Decision: The District Court granted defendants summary judgment absent a material fact regarding whether plaintiff's subdivision review was properly denied. Plaintiff contended that the court applied an abuse of discretion standard rather than the arbitrary or capricious standard required under 76-3-625. The Supreme Court disagreed. The District Court provided a wealth of reasoning for its decision and noted that clear and convincing evidence supported the decision to deny plaintiff's subdivision proposal. Overwhelming evidence and the absence of disputed fact entitled defendants to summary judgment on the issue, and the District Court was affirmed. Richards v. Missoula County, 2009 MT 453, 354 M 334, 223 P3d 878 (2009).

Inapplicability of Appeal Period Absent Application for Subdivision Review: The 30-day period for appealing a governing body's approval or denial of a subdivision does not apply to a party that never applied for subdivision review. The act of recording and filing certificates of survey with the County Clerk and Recorder is not considered a decision by a governing body approving or denying a subdivision. Mills v. Alta Vista Ranch, LLC, 2008 MT 214, 344 M 212, 187 P3d 627 (2008).

Complaint in Possession of Clerk of Court Within Thirty Days of Approval of Preliminary Subdivision Plat Considered Timely Despite Filing After Thirty Days: An aggrieved party may appeal the approval of a preliminary subdivision plat to the District Court within 30 days of the date when a governing body conditionally approves the plat. Sanders County Commissioners approved a preliminary plat on March 30, so a timely appeal was required on or before April 29, 2004. Plaintiffs' attorney delivered a complaint to UPS in Missoula on April 28 for overnight delivery. UPS tracking information showed that the complaint was delivered to the Sanders County Clerk of the District Court on April 29, but the clerk did not stamp the complaint as filed until May 3. Defendant asserted that the complaint was filed after the 30-day appeal period, and the District Court agreed but addressed the merits nevertheless. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that because the undisputed evidence showed that the clerk received the complaint on April 29, the appeal was timely regardless of the date that the complaint was stamped as filed. Fielder v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2007 MT 118, 337 M 256, 162 P3d 67 (2007). See also Cintron v. Union Pac. RR Co., 813 F2d 917 (9th Cir. 1987), and Sheviakov v. I.N.S., 237 F3d 1144 (9th Cir. 2001).

City Council Minutes and Testimony of Its Members Inadmissible to Show Cause for Denial of Subdivision Approval: Because the City Council violated 76-3-620 by failing to issue a written statement of the reasons and evidence for denying a subdivision approval, it could not use the minutes of its meeting on the subject and the testimony of its members to explain the denial. The minutes were not the equivalent of a written statement and evidence of them was properly excluded by the District Court. The testimony of the City Council members constituted after-the-fact opinions that were not properly part of the record. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002), followed in MM&I, LLC v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2010 MT 274, 358 Mont. 420, 246 P.3d 1029.

Damages for City's Wrongful Delay in Approving Preliminary Subdivision Plat: Plaintiff subdivider's certified valuation analyst presented evidence that because of the city's delay of its decision on an application for preliminary plat approval, the subdivider lost investment value of funds, and the subdivider testified that its property was devalued because of a decline in market value and that the subdivider incurred costs from the delay and suffered lost future investment value. The city claimed that the damages award should be modified. The Supreme Court concluded that the conditional plat approval ordered by the court should not eliminate or reduce the damages award and that it was not error for the District Court to decline to adjust the award. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Evidence of Negotiation and Agreement Between Subdivider and City Offered for Purpose Other Than to Show Liability or Validity of Claim: In a suit by a developer over conditions that the City Council attached to its preliminary subdivision plat approval, Rule 408, M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10), did not bar testimony regarding settlement negotiations and the resulting subdivision improvement agreement because under 76-3-608, the City Council was required to consult with the developer and give due weight and consideration to the expressed preference of the developer and was thus required to negotiate. The Supreme Court also stated that Rule 408 excludes only evidence offered to prove liability or the validity of a claim or amount and does not require exclusion when the evidence is offered for another purpose and that, in this case, the evidence was offered to show the arbitrary and capricious nature of the City Council's decision. Thus, the evidence fell under the exception clause of the rule. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Immunity of Council Members From Suit Relating to Approval or Denial of Subdivision Plat Application by City Council: A legislative act is an action by a legislative body that results in the creation of law or declaration of public policy. An administrative act is an action taken in the execution of a law or public policy. The approval or denial of a subdivision plat application is an administrative act. Therefore, neither the governmental entity nor a member of it who acts for the entity is immune under 2-9-111 from suit based on the approval or denial. However, in this case, all the claims alleged by the developer suing over the conditions that the City Council attached to its approval of the preliminary plat application related to actions performed by City Council members acting as the City Council. Therefore, under 2-9-305, the individual Council members were immune from suit. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Retroactive Application of Ordinances to Application for Plat Approval: A provision of 76-3-501 stating that review and approval or disapproval of a subdivision may occur only under regulations in effect at the time of an application for preliminary plat approval expressly precluded the retroactive application of the city's development code to the developer's application for approval. (See 2005 amendments to 76-3-501 and 76-3-604.) The District Court properly ruled that the code could not be retroactively applied to the application and excluded evidence of the code in the developer's suit for attaching conditions to the preliminary approval. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Standard for Relief in District Court: This section's provision for appeal to the District Court by a party aggrieved by a governing body's decision to approve, conditionally approve, or disapprove a proposed preliminary plat or final plat is not rendered nugatory by the fact that the section does not specifically prescribe the relief that may be granted. The relief or disposition depends on the facts and circumstances of each case, and the plain language of the section grants the District Court the authority to fashion an appropriate remedy. The Supreme Court declined to fashion relief limits out of thin air. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's ruling that denial of the preliminary plat application be vacated and that the previous conditionally approved preliminary plat application be reinstated. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Standard of Review by Supreme Court — Test: The standard of review of a District Court ruling under this section's provision for appeal to the District Court by a party aggrieved by a governing body's decision to approve, conditionally approve, or disapprove a proposed preliminary plat or final plat is whether the record establishes that the governing body acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unlawfully. A reversal is not permitted merely because the record contains inconsistent evidence or evidence that might support a different result. The decision must appear to be random, unreasonable, or seemingly unmotivated, based on the record. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Unlawful Delay, Use of Out-of-Date Regulations, Imposition of Conditions, and Failure to Issue Written Findings Explaining Denial of Application: The city approved a preliminary application for plat approval, subject to 26 conditions imposed by the city, and the developer sued the city for imposing the conditions. The District Court did not err in determining that the city acted arbitrarily, capriciously, and unlawfully. The city did not timely act on the application for preliminary plat approval and used out-of-date regulations to approve the application subject to conditions, the conditions included unlawful conditions, and the city failed to issue written findings explaining the denial when it denied the application. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Zoning Requirements Irrelevant to Grant or Denial of Preliminary Plat Approval: Evidence of zoning requirements was not relevant to whether the City Council was arbitrary and capricious when it acted on a request for preliminary plat approval and was properly excluded in the developer's suit for attaching conditions to the approval. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Reversal of Denial of Preliminary Injunction — Consideration of Underlying Issues Precluded: On appeal of the merits of a preliminary injunction, plaintiff requested that the Supreme Court provide substantive guidance by addressing several underlying issues regarding interaction between injunction laws and subdivision statutes, as well as the likelihood of plaintiff to prevail on issues still pending in District Court. In determining the merits of a preliminary injunction on appeal, it is not the province of either the District Court or the Supreme Court to make final determinations on matters that might arise upon a trial on the merits. The request for substantive guidance was declined. Sweet Grass Farms, Ltd. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2000 MT 147, 300 M 66, 2 P3d 825, 57 St. Rep. 576 (2000). See also Porter v. K&S Partnership, 192 M 175, 627 P2d 836 (1981), and Dreyer v. Bd. of Trustees of Mid-Rivers Tel. Co-op, Inc., 193 M 95, 630 P2d 226 (1981).

Showing of Irrevocably Closed Mind as Proof of Prejudice by Administrative Decisionmaker: Madison River R.V. Ltd. (RV) sought to build a recreational vehicle park in Ennis. Prior to a hearing before the Ennis Town Council, RV requested in writing that one of the council members recuse himself, based on his alleged bias against the project. The request was denied without objection by the other council members, and RV's application for the park was also denied. On appeal, RV contended that the council member's participation in the council's deliberations was error, citing the principle that one who makes decisions in a judicial or quasi-judicial capacity must be free from bias. However, no authority was cited that the principle applies to elected members of a city council. Pursuant to Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Cement Institute, 333 US 683, 92 L Ed 1010, 68 S Ct 793 (1948), in order to prevail on a claim of prejudice or bias against an administrative decisionmaker, the petitioner must show that the decisionmaker had an irrevocably closed mind on the subject under investigation or adjudication. Here, RV failed to establish that the council member's mind was irrevocably closed. The District Court's determination that the town council was not required to disqualify the member from voting and that the council's decision should not be vacated because of its failure to disqualify the member in question was affirmed. Madison River R.V. Ltd. v. Ennis, 2000 MT 15, 298 M 91, 994 P2d 1098, 57 St. Rep. 84 (2000).

Standard of Review — Denial of Preliminary Subdivision Application Not Arbitrary, Capricious, or Unlawful: A preliminary plat of a proposed subdivision is subject to the review of the governing body to determine whether the plat conforms to the master growth plan (now growth policy) adopted for the area and the plat's effect on the public health, safety, and welfare. The standard of review applied as to whether the review was conducted correctly is whether the record establishes that the governing body acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unlawfully. Here, the record established that the Ennis Town Council heard evidence that a proposed recreational vehicle park did not conform to the goals of the Ennis comprehensive plan (now growth policy) and that the proposed park posed a threat to the health, safety, and welfare of the townspeople of Ennis. The decision to deny the preliminary subdivision application was not arbitrary, capricious, or unlawful and was properly affirmed. Madison River R.V. Ltd. v. Ennis, 2000 MT 15, 298 M 91, 994 P2d 1098, 57 St. Rep. 84 (2000). See also N. Fork Preservation Ass'n v. Dept. of State Lands, 238 M 451, 778 P2d 862 (1989).

Town Council's Findings Timely Filed and Properly Part of Record for Court Review: Madison River R.V. Ltd. (RV) applied to build a recreational vehicle park in Ennis, but the application was denied by the Ennis Town Council. RV appealed to the District Court, but the council's findings were filed 15 days after RV filed the appeal, which RV contended was not timely. Under 76-3-620, a decision to deny a subdivision application must include a written statement giving the reason for the denial, but the 30 days allowed for appeal under this section do not begin to run until the council members sign the written findings. The fact that RV's notice of appeal was filed prematurely did not render untimely the written statements of reasons for denial of the application for plat approval. Madison River R.V. Ltd. v. Ennis, 2000 MT 15, 298 M 91, 994 P2d 1098, 57 St. Rep. 84 (2000).

Unenforceability of Buy-Sell Agreement on Grounds of Impossibility or Impracticality of Performance — Requiring Performance of Contract With Potential for Environmental Degradation Unconstitutional: Cape-France Enterprises (Cape-France) entered a buy-sell agreement with Peed (now deceased) and Moore to purchase some property near Bozeman for a subdivision. Before the subdivision could be completed, water needed to be procured for the site. According to the agreement, as buyers, Peed and Moore were responsible to bring water to the property, but because city water was not available, a well needed to be drilled. However, the presence of a pollution plume was discovered near the land. After the subdivision process was commenced, the Department of Environmental Quality notified Cape-France that: (1) the plume may have advanced under the property; (2) a subdivision would not be approved unless a well was drilled and tested; (3) a well could be drilled, but if testing showed pollution in the water, treatment would be extensive; and (4) if drilling or pumping of the water caused expansion of the pollution, then Cape-France, as owner of the property, would be held liable for cleanup costs. On cross-motions for summary judgment, the District Court held that the buy-sell agreement could be rescinded on the basis of mutual mistake of fact and impossibility or impracticality of performance and that specific performance would not be granted. The Supreme Court affirmed. A court may determine that an act is impossible in legal contemplation when it is not practicable, when the act can be done only at an excessive, unreasonable, and unbargained-for cost. The doctrine of impossibility or impracticability is applied when, aside from the object of a contract being unlawful, the public policy underlying the strict performance of the contract is outweighed by the senselessness of requiring performance. The doctrine is not limited to cases of literal impossibility but may also be applied in cases that present a potential for substantial and unbargained-for damages. In this case, requiring Cape-France to go forward with the performance of the contract when there was a very real possibility of substantial environmental degradation and resultant financial liability for cleanup was not in the public interest or in the interests of the contracting parties and was not in accord with the guarantee of a clean and healthful environment in Art. II, sec. 3, Mont. Const., or the mandate to maintain and improve a clean and healthful environment for present and future generations in Art. IX, sec. 1, Mont. Const. Thus, rescission of the contract was proper. Cape-France Enterprises v. Estate of Peed, 2001 MT 139, 305 M 513, 29 P3d 1011 (2001). See also Smith v. Zepp, 173 M 358, 567 P2d 923 (1977), and Mont. Subsequent Sale of Parcel Originally Used as Lien Security — State and Local Regulation Inapplicable: The provisions of Title 76 relating to local and state regulation of subdivisions do not apply to the subsequent sale of an undivided parcel that was originally used as security for a construction lien pursuant to 76-3-201, and nothing in the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act requires that the parcel be reviewed or surveyed upon subsequent sale. 42 A.G. Clerk Under No Clear Duty to Record Deed — Mandamus Erroneously Granted: Where the plaintiff attempted to record a deed to a 5-acre parcel of land without the removal or approval of sanitary restrictions by the county health department (which the court held was estopped from withholding its approval of a disposal permit) but was refused by the Clerk and Recorder, the District Court erred in granting a Writ of Mandamus ordering the Clerk to file a certificate of survey and record the warranty deed. The Clerk and Recorder was statutorily required to refuse to file the survey and record the deed and lacked any discretion to accept a survey absent compliance with the requirements of 76-4-122. Huttinga v. Pringle, 205 M 482, 668 P2d 1068, 40 St. Rep. 1444 (1983).

Department Under No Clear Legal Duty to Approve Subdivision — Mandamus Erroneously Granted: Where the plaintiff applied to the county health department for a disposal permit and was not informed by the county for a period of 6 years whether the permit would be issued, the District Court erred in granting a Writ of Mandamus directing the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) to certify that the deeded property was not subject to sanitary restrictions. No application for such certification had ever been submitted to the Department, and it therefore had no official knowledge of the plaintiff's disposal system. Absent an appropriate application to the Department, there is no factual or statutory basis for holding that the Department had violated a clear legal duty. Huttinga v. Pringle, 205 M 482, 668 P2d 1068, 40 St. Rep. 1444 (1983).

Regulatory Powers Regarding Subdivision Control: The 1973 Montana Subdivision and Platting Act vests control of subdivisions in local government units. The Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) has no regulatory functions regarding subdivisions outside water supply, sewage, and solid waste disposal. Attorney General's Opinions

Local Government Required to Adopt Subdivision Water Supply and Sewage and Solid Waste Disposal That Conform to State Regulations: Unless a local governing body makes specific findings to support the conclusion that more stringent rules are required to protect public health, a local governing body must adopt subdivision regulations for water supply and sewage and solid waste disposal that are as stringent as the state standards adopted by the Department of Environmental Quality under Title 76, ch. 4, part 1. The local government may incorporate the state regulations by reference, but the actual method of adoption is up to the discretion of the local government. 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

Review When Intended Use Changes — Condominiums: The Department's authority to review condominiums includes condominiums to be built on parcels of land previously approved by the Department for uses not including condominiums. 39 A.G. Op. 28 (1981).

Condominiums as Subdivisions: The phrase "regardless of size, which provides permanent multiple space for recreational camping vehicles or mobile homes" only applies to the antecedent "area" and not "condominiums". Condominium is an independent class expressly included in the definition of subdivision whether or not constructed on a parcel of land containing 20 acres or more. Therefore, condominiums are subject to review by the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) under the provisions of this chapter. The clause "sale, rent, lease, or other conveyance of one or more parts of a building" in 76-3-204 refers to something other than condominiums and thus does not provide an exemption for condominiums. 39 A.G. Op. 28 (1981).

Case Notes

Condominiums as Subdivision — Unreasonable Reliance by Developers on County Opinion as to Review Requirements: The District Court awarded damages against the county in an action by condominium developers who claimed they reasonably relied to their detriment on the county's opinion that the condominiums would not be subject to subdivision review. The Supreme Court reversed after finding that the County Attorney's office maintained no confidential or professional relationship with the developers—therefore, the developers' reliance on the county's opinion was unreasonable in light of: (1) the state's determination that review would be necessary; (2) the fact that developers were represented by their own counsel; (3) the inclusion of condominiums in the definitions of "subdivision" in 76-3-103 and this section; and (4) the actual opposition to the lack of subdivision review expressed by opponents of the project, who ultimately filed suit. Young v. Flathead County, 232 M 274, 757 P2d 772, 45 St. Rep. 1047 (1988).

Clerk Under No Clear Duty to Record Deed — Mandamus Erroneously Granted: Where the plaintiff attempted to record a deed to a 5-acre parcel of land without the removal or approval of sanitary restrictions by the county health department (which the court held was estopped from withholding its approval of a disposal permit) but was refused by the Clerk and Recorder, the District Court erred in granting a Writ of Mandamus ordering the Clerk to file a certificate of survey and record the warranty deed. The Clerk and Recorder was statutorily required to refuse to file the survey and record the deed and lacked any discretion to accept a survey absent compliance with the requirements of 76-4-122. Huttinga v. Pringle, 205 M 482, 668 P2d 1068, 40 St. Rep. 1444 (1983).

Definition of "Plat" — Applicability: Whenever the meaning of a word or phrase is defined in any part of the code, such definition is applicable to the same word or phrase wherever it occurs, except where a contrary intention plainly appears. The definition of "plat" found in 76-3-103 of the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act is clearly applicable to Title 76, ch. 4, part 1, on sanitation in subdivisions. The Department of Health and Environmental Sciences' (now Department of Environmental Quality) contention that it has broad authority in defining the term "plat" by virtue of the lack of a statutory definition under the sanitation in subdivisions law is without merit. (Case considered under pre-1977 law.) State ex rel. Dept. of Health & Environmental Sciences v. Lasorte, 182 M 267, 596 P2d 477, 36 St. Rep. 1126 (1979).

Attorney General's Opinions

Review When Intended Use Changes — Condominiums: The Department's authority to review condominiums includes condominiums to be built on parcels of land previously approved by the Department for uses not including condominiums. 39 A.G. Op. 28 (1981).

Condominiums as Subdivisions: The phrase "regardless of size, which provides permanent multiple space for recreational camping vehicles or mobile homes" only applies to the antecedent "area" and not "condominiums". Condominium is an independent class expressly included in the definition of subdivision whether or not constructed on a parcel of land containing 20 acres or more. Therefore, condominiums are subject to review by the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) under the provisions of this chapter. The clause "sale, rent, lease, or other conveyance of one or more parts of a building" in 76-3-204 refers to something other than condominiums and thus does not provide an exemption for condominiums. 39 A.G. Op. 28 (1981).

Case Notes

Local Board of Health Not Considered Governing Body Despite Interlocal Agreement: Despite the fact that a county board of health was created by interlocal agreement, the District Court erred in concluding that a local board of health is considered a governing body by definition under 76-3-103. The Montana Subdivision and Platting Act does not, under 76-3-501 and 76-3-504, authorize local boards of health to adopt and enforce regulations governing sanitation in subdivisions, regardless of size. The authority of a local board of health to regulate subdivisions derives from 50-2-116, not from the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark County Bd. of Health, 286 M 256, 950 P2d 733, 54 St. Rep. 1398 (1997).

Review, Not Regulatory, Function Applicable to Local Board of Health Control of Minor Subdivision: Section 50-2-106, when read in conjunction with this section, does not authorize a local board of health to regulate sanitation in minor subdivisions containing five or fewer parcels. By its plain language, this section delegates to local boards of health the power to review select subdivisions but not the power to promulgate regulations. As a reviewing authority, the board's function is limited to reviewing the proposed water supply, sewage, and solid waste disposal facilities and advising the Department of Environmental Quality of its recommendation for approval or disapproval of the subdivision. However, 50-2-116 explicitly authorizes a local board of health to regulate sewage control and disposal that is not regulated by the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. The Act limits state sanitation regulation to subdivisions containing parcels of fewer than 20 acres each and precludes regulation of subdivisions in which each parcel of land contains more than 20 acres. Thus, the regulation of sanitation in subdivisions containing parcels of more than 20 acres each is clearly the responsibility of local boards of health. Nevertheless, 76-4-122 requires both state and local approval before filing a subdivision plat with the County Clerk and Recorder, and to hold that approval by the local board of health is a ministerial, nondiscretionary act would render 76-4-122 inoperative. Giving effect to the purpose of all the applicable statutes and examining the legislative history of 50-2-116, the Supreme Court held that the 1991 enactment of 50-2-116(1)(i) revealed a legislative intent to expand, rather than diminish, the authority of local boards of health to regulate subdivision sanitation. Thus, local boards of health have discretionary statutory authority to regulate all subdivisions, regardless of size, notwithstanding the state's authority to regulate certain subdivisions under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark County Bd. of Health, 286 M 256, 950 P2d 733, 54 St. Rep. 1398 (1997).

County Not Acting as State's Agent in Denial of Disposal Permit — Mandamus Erroneously Granted: Where the plaintiff applied to the county health department for a disposal permit but was not informed for a period of 6 years whether the permit would be granted, the District Court erred in holding that the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) was estopped from denying the permit by the county's failure to act. There were no statutes or decisions that made the county the agent of the Department at the time of the 1971 permit application. Under the rationale of St. v. District Court, 170 M 15, 550 P2d 382 (1976), the record and statutes show that the county did not act as an agent for the state in the denial of the 1971 application. Huttinga v. Pringle, 205 M 482, 668 P2d 1068, 40 St. Rep. 1444 (1983).

Attorney General's Opinions

Local Government Required to Adopt Subdivision Water Supply and Sewage and Solid Waste Disposal That Conform to State Regulations: Unless a local governing body makes specific findings to support the conclusion that more stringent rules are required to protect public health, a local governing body must adopt subdivision regulations for water supply and sewage and solid waste disposal that are as stringent as the state standards adopted by the Department of Environmental Quality under Title 76, ch. 4, part 1. The local government may incorporate the state regulations by reference, but the actual method of adoption is up to the discretion of the local government. 49 A.G. Op. 7 (2001).

County Commissioners Authorized to Impose Stricter Standards: County Commissioners may adopt reasonably stricter sanitation regulations for subdivisions than those adopted by the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality). 35 A.G. Op. 39 (1973).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 280 in (1) in first sentence of introductory clause after "actual costs" substituted "for reviewing plats and subdivisions, conducting inspections pursuant to 76-4-107, and conducting enforcement activities pursuant to 76-4-108" for "to the department in reviewing plats and subdivisions", in second sentence after "applicant" deleted "for plat or subdivision review", and after "department" deleted "for deposit in the state special revenue fund", and at end of third sentence inserted "conducting inspections pursuant to 76-4-107, and conducting enforcement activities pursuant to 76-4-108"; in (2) after "local" substituted "reviewing authority for reviews conducted pursuant to 76-4-104, inspections conducted pursuant to 76-4-107, and enforcement activities conducted pursuant to 76-4-108" for "governing body, as provided in 76-4-128"; deleted former (3) and (4) that read: "(3) A fee as described in this section is not required for the review of subdivisions in which divisions are made for the purpose of relocating common boundary lines unless the division will result in the installation of additional water supply or sewage disposal facilities.

(4) Fees collected by the department under this section must be deposited in the account in the state special revenue fund provided for in 76-4-132"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 2001.

Applicability: Section 18(1), Ch. 280, L. 2001, provided that [this act] applies to subdivision applications submitted to the reviewing authority after [the effective date of this act]. Effective April 20, 2001.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 514 in (1), in second sentence before "fund", substituted "special revenue" for "general"; in (2), after "fees", substituted "to" for "between" and after "body" deleted "and the state general fund" and deleted former second sentence that read: "When a subdivision is reviewed under the provisions of 76-4-124, the local governing body shall, within 20 days after receiving preliminary plat approval under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, distribute the lot fees according to the fee schedule adopted under this section"; deleted former (3) that read: "When a local department or board of health conducts a review under the provisions of 76-4-104, it shall submit to the department, along with its approval statement, a fee of $5 per reviewed lot, for purposes of offsetting costs incurred in providing certification to a local reviewing authority and other administrative costs"; inserted (4) requiring fees to be deposited in state special revenue fund; deleted (5) that read: "(5) Costs of implementing this part must be paid from the state general fund as provided by legislative appropriation"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 514, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] applies to all lot fees received by the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of environmental quality] on or after July 1, 1993."

1991 Amendment: In (1), in first sentence after "exceed", substituted "actual costs to the department in reviewing" for "$48 per parcel, for services rendered in the review of"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 645, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is provided for this bill because rulemaking authority is delegated to the board of health and environmental sciences [now department of environmental quality] to prescribe procedures for administrative enforcement actions undertaken by the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of environmental quality] in administering the public water supply laws, as provided in Title 75, chapter 6, and to develop a fee schedule to enable the department to recover costs in administering these laws. Rulemaking authority is also delegated to the department to develop fees to pay for costs of reviewing plats and subdivisions under the laws related to sanitation in subdivisions, as provided in Title 76, chapter 4. It is the intent of the legislature that the rules establish a reasonable fee schedule that approximates the department's actual and necessary costs.

The legislature anticipates that the department will expand its enforcement activity in order to address ongoing and increasing health problems with public water supply systems and public sewage systems in Montana. In undertaking this effort, the legislature expects that the department will have the option to pursue administrative enforcement as a means of expediting and encouraging compliance with Title 75, chapter 6. Nonetheless, it is the department's duty to clearly inform each violator of:

(1) the nature of the action taken against it;

(2) what the department requires to resolve the matter; and

(3) what legal avenues are available to the violator if he desires to contest the matter.

The legislature recognizes that an economic hardship may be imposed on a public water supply system in order for that system to be brought into compliance with state and federal public water supply laws and that this hardship may be further increased by the levying of administrative and civil penalties for noncompliance. It is the intention of the legislature that the department adopt rules that establish a procedure for the progressive enforcement of this act in which the levying of administrative and civil penalties is a final action. The department may adopt rules that allow for the bypass of the enforcement procedures and the immediate assessment of penalties if specific circumstances warrant this action.

The rules also require the board of health and environmental sciences [now department of environmental quality] to develop fees for recovery of costs incurred by the department in delivering services to persons who own or operate or intend to own or operate a public water supply system or public sewage system. These costs include costs associated with review of engineering plans and specifications, inspections, and general assistance. To assist the board in developing these rules, the department shall prepare and submit to the board a detailed estimate of projected costs associated with these services for fiscal years 1992 and 1993. The board shall develop a fee schedule that will provide revenues that are commensurate with the projected costs. A similar approach should be used by the department in developing rules setting new fees for review of plats and subdivisions under 76-4-105."

1985 Amendments: Chapter 490 in (1) near middle of second sentence, after "state general fund", inserted remainder of sentence concerning deposit of lot fees in general fund of reviewing authority; in (2) near middle of first sentence, after "distribution of", deleted "lot" and in second sentence, near end after "lot fees", substituted remainder of sentence relating to adopted fee schedule for "as determined by this subsection"; and inserted (3) requiring local department or board of health conducting review to submit to Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) a $5-per-reviewed-lot fee to offset certification and administration costs.

Chapter 592 in (2) in second sentence, after "reviewed under the", deleted "master plan", and after "receiving", substituted "preliminary plat approval" for "an application".

Chapter 708 in (1) near beginning of first sentence, before "rules", deleted "reasonable", and at end of second sentence substituted "general fund" for "special revenue fund provided for in 17-2-102"; and in (2) in first sentence substituted "state general fund" for "department".

Subsection (5), requiring costs of implementing this part to be paid from state general fund, was enacted by Ch. 708, L. 1985, as a separate section but was codified as part of this section for logic and convenience.

Lot Fees Coordination Instruction: Section 19, Ch. 490, L. 1985, provided: "If House Bill No. 633 [Ch. 708, L. 1985], including the section of that bill that appropriates money to the department [Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (DHES)] (now Department of Environmental Quality) for subdivision review in fiscal years 1986 and 1987, is not passed and approved, section 3, subsection (3) [76-4-105(3)] of this act is amended to provide a fee of $10 per reviewed lot." As passed and approved, HB 633 (Ch. 708, L. 1985) included, in section 3, an appropriation to the DHES (now Department of Environmental Quality), but the appropriation was reduced from the amounts set forth in the introduced version of the bill as follows: for fiscal year 1986, from $202,595 to $136,787 and for fiscal year 1987, from $212,725 to $139,825. Because the conditions of sec. 19, Ch. 490, L. 1985, were not fulfilled in Ch. 708, the Code Commissioner did not amend 76-4-105(3) to increase the lot fee.

1983 Amendments: Chapter 281, in second sentence of (1), substituted "state special revenue fund" for "agency fund".

Chapter 696 changed fees in (1) from "$30" to "$48" per parcel.

1981 Amendment: Changed fees in (1) from "$25" to "$30" per parcel.

Nonseverability: Section 4, Ch. 553, L. 1981, provided: "It is the intent of the legislature that each part of this act is essentially dependent upon every other part; and if one part is held unconstitutional or invalid, all other parts are invalid."

Subdivision Covenant Containing One Hundred Foot Setback Restriction and One-Garage Restriction — Implied Consent to Trial of Garage Restriction — Amendment of Pleadings: Defendants constructed a building on their subdivision property. Plaintiffs sued because the building violated a 100-foot setback restriction. During trial, defendant testified that the building was intended to be used as a second garage. Plaintiffs sought to amend the pleadings to include a violation of a one-garage restriction that was also part of the covenants. The District Court did not rule on the motion to amend the pleadings, but nevertheless held in favor of plaintiffs, finding that defendants violated both the 100-foot restriction and the one-garage restriction, and ordered removal of the garage. On appeal, defendants contended that the trial court erred in addressing the garage issue because it was not included in the pleadings. The Supreme Court affirmed. Under former Rule 15(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), issues not raised by the pleadings may be tried by the express or implied consent of the parties, in which case the pleadings may be amended to conform to the issues actually litigated. Having raised the issue during direct examination, defendants impliedly consented to its subsequent litigation. Defendants' argument that the motion to amend the pleadings was not timely, because it was not made at trial, also failed. The rule allows amendment of the pleadings at any time, even after judgment. Clerk Under No Clear Duty to Record Deed — Mandamus Erroneously Granted: Where the plaintiff attempted to record a deed to a 5-acre parcel of land without the removal or approval of sanitary restrictions by the county health department (which the court held was estopped from withholding its approval of a disposal permit) but was refused by the Clerk and Recorder, the District Court erred in granting a Writ of Mandamus ordering the Clerk to file a certificate of survey and record the warranty deed. State Agency Review Under Sanitation in Subdivision Law Not Applicable to Certificate of Survey: Where after a series of real estate transactions, each denominated an "occasional sale" and evidenced by a certificate of survey, one 14-acre parcel of land became 13 separate and distinct parcels reconveyed to the original owner, the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Environmental Quality) had no authority under the sanitation in subdivisions law to review the certificates of survey. That act provides for Department review only of subdivision plats, and Department regulation which included certificate of survey within definition of plat was held void. (Case considered under pre-1977 law.) State ex rel. Dept. of Health & Environmental Sciences v. Lasorte, 182 M 267, 596 P2d 477, 36 St. Rep. 1126 (1979).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 471, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, the federal government frequently regulates areas that are also subject to state regulation; and

WHEREAS, differing state and federal policy goals and unique state prerogatives frequently result in different levels of regulation, different standards, and different requirements being imposed by state and federal programs covering the same subject matter; and

WHEREAS, Montana must simultaneously move toward reducing redundant and unnecessary regulation that dulls the state's competitive advantage while being ever vigilant in the protection of the public's health, safety, and welfare; and

WHEREAS, Montana's administrative agencies should consider applicable federal standards when adopting, readopting, or amending rules with analogous federal counterparts; and

WHEREAS, Montana's administrative agencies should analyze whether analogous federal standards sufficiently protect the health, safety, and welfare of Montana's citizens; and

WHEREAS, as part of the formal rulemaking process, the public should be advised of the agencies' conclusions about whether analogous federal standards sufficiently protect the health, safety, and welfare of Montana citizens."

The legislature intends that in addition to all requirements imposed by existing law and rules, the board or the department include as part of the initial publication and all subsequent publications of a rule a written finding if the rule in question contains any standards or requirements that exceed the standards or requirements imposed by comparable federal law.

If the rules are more stringent than comparable federal law, the written finding must include but is not limited to a discussion of the policy reasons and an analysis that supports the board's or department's decision that the proposed state standards or requirements protect public health or the environment of the state and that the state standards or requirements to be imposed can mitigate harm to the public health or the environment and are achievable under current technology. The department is not required to show that the federal regulation is inadequate to protect public health. Case Notes

Civil, Private, and Attractive Nuisance and Trespass Claims Against Shooting Range — Opportunity to Further Develop Certain Claims Allowed on Remand: After an individual defendant transferred property to defendant ranch company and helped the ranch develop a shooting range on the property, plaintiff neighbors brought multiple claims alleging that operation of the shooting range in close proximity to a subdivision and elementary school constituted a public nuisance, private nuisance, attractive nuisance, trespass, and a violation of various constitutional provisions. The District Court dismissed all claims and plaintiffs appealed. Citing Barnes v. Thompson Falls, 1999 MT 77, 294 Mont. 76, 979 P.2d 1275, the Supreme Court noted that the Legislature explicitly exempted shooting ranges from civil nuisance liability, so plaintiffs' public nuisance claims were properly dismissed. Regarding the private nuisance claims, the District Court should have focused on injury to specific plaintiffs rather than dismissing the claims as related to all plaintiffs. The trespass claims concerned noise from the shooting range invading plaintiffs' property and thus took the form of intangible trespass. The District Court prematurely dismissed the trespass claims by failing to recognize that an intangible invasion supported by actual damages may support a trespass action, and plaintiffs should have been allowed to develop evidence and facts demonstrating actual damages. Plaintiffs should also have been allowed to develop facts of an actual threat of irreparable injury in support of the attractive nuisance claims. Lastly, plaintiffs failed to show how common law or statutory remedies would not adequately address any potential damages or to demonstrate how the constitutional provisions in question directly addressed the conduct of private parties, so the constitutional claims were properly dismissed. The case was remanded to allow plaintiffs the opportunity to develop their trespass and public, private, and attractive nuisance claims. Tally Bissell Neighbors, Inc. v. The educational programs and expertise of the Montana state university [now Montana state university-Bozeman] forestry extension program are critical to the effectiveness and success of this approach. However, the forestry extension program requires the addition of a second extension forester to serve the needs of the state's commercial and 11,000 nonindustrial private forest landowners and to ensure protection of water quality and proper management of the state's forested lands.

The legislature believes that the extension service and the forest products industry should be equal partners in the continuation and the expansion of the forestry extension program. The forest products industry, as provided in 76-13-408 and 76-13-414, has committed $60,000 annually for the purpose of funding one additional extension forester position and one administrative position. Integration of 1989 Amendments: Although the amendments made to this section by Ch. 423, L. 1989, were not effective until January 1, 1990, the amendments were substantively identical to amendments made by Ch. 513, L. 1989, effective July 1, 1989. Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 409, L. 2007, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana's public forests are important environmental, economic, and recreational resources; and

WHEREAS, two-thirds of the forests in Montana are managed by the federal government and include some of the most important environmental, economic, and recreational resources in the state; and

WHEREAS, innovative partnerships between traditional adversaries in federal forest management demonstrate that consensus-based solutions can be reached on landscape level projects on federal lands that integrate active forest management, restoration, and stewardship; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation is uniquely situated to provide expertise and guidance on the management of public forests in Montana."

Extent of Conservation District Implementation of Land Use Regulations Regarding Coal Bed Methane Wastewater Operations: The Legislature did not intend that the listing in 76-15-706 of measures necessary to protect soil and water limit the flexibility of conservation districts to devise means to control the adverse effects of coal bed methane runoff. Thus, a conservation district has authority under 76-15-706, following a referendum by the voters, to implement land use regulations in order to implement reasonable measures to conserve soils, protect soil structure from coal bed methane water, and conserve the water resources of the conservation district. 50 A.G. Case Notes

Scope of Writ of Prohibition — Writ Inappropriate to Stop Conservation District From Making Initial Determination of Whether Body of Water Considered Natural Perennial Flowing Stream When Other Remedies Exist: After unsuccessfully attempting to have the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and the Department of Environmental Quality make the determination as to whether a slough east of Victor was a perennial flowing stream and thus subject to The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, the county conservation district decided to use a public hearing process to make the determination. Plaintiffs sought a writ of prohibition to stop the conservation district from determining the status of the slough. After the writ was denied in District Court, plaintiffs submitted it to the Supreme Court. A writ of prohibition serves to stop an entity exercising judicial functions from acting when the proceedings are beyond that entity's jurisdiction and are clearly unlawful, but should not replace an appeal or perform the function of a writ of review. A writ of prohibition is justified only by extreme necessity when the grievance cannot be redressed by ordinary proceedings at law, in equity, or by appeal. The existence of another remedy, even if inconvenient or indirect, prevents a party from seeking a writ of prohibition. In the interest of both judicial economy and agency efficiency, an exhaustion of administrative remedies allows a governmental agency to make a factual record and to correct its own errors within its specific expertise before a court interferes. After noting that the Act does not specifically authorize a conservation district or any other entity with the power to classify bodies of water as streams, the Supreme Court found that the conservation district was simply attempting to apply the Legislature's articulated requirement of a natural perennial flowing stream and declined to interfere with the conservation district's ability to initially determine the scope of its jurisdiction and exercise its expertise to decide whether the slough was in fact a stream. Further, once the status of the slough was determined, there was nothing to prevent plaintiffs from seeking judicial review of the conservation district's declaratory rulings. Because extreme necessity and lack of redress did not exist, a writ of prohibition was inappropriate to stop the conservation district from making the initial ruling on the status of the slough, so the writ was denied. Bitterroot River Protection Ass'n, Inc. v. Bitterroot Conserv. District, 2002 MT 66, 309 M 207, 45 P3d 24 (2002), followed in Paulson v. Flathead Conserv. Cost of Election — Conservation District Supervisor: Conservation District Supervisors were public officers within the meaning of 13-12-213 (now repealed). The county in which voting for a Conservation District Supervisor election occurs was responsible for paying the expenses incurred by the election. 38 A.G. Op. 25 (1979).

Conservation District Elections: Candidates for Supervisor must run at large in the entire district in both elections, each qualified elector voting for 10 candidates in the nominating election and five candidates in the general election when all five Supervisors will be elected. Ten candidates may be nominated to run in the general election when five Supervisors will be elected, and a reasonable method of determining recipients of 4-year terms must be chosen by the registrar and made available to candidates and electors prior to election. 37 A.G. Op. 137 (1978).

Election of Conservation District Supervisors to Be by Separate Ballot: Since there are no partisan designations in a Conservation District Supervisor election, a separate ballot is necessary if the nominating election is held in conjunction with the state primary election. A separate ballot would also be necessary in a general election if the registrar determines that within his jurisdiction some of the qualified electors in the general election are ineligible to vote in the Supervisor election. A Supervisor, incidentally, must reside in the district wherein he is nominated and elected. 37 A.G. Op. 131 (1978).

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 349 (Ch. 473, L. 1983) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority in section 17 [76-15-547] to conservation districts that elect to establish conservation practice loan programs.

The intent is to provide conservation districts with the authority to adopt those rules necessary to administer conservation practice loan programs. This authority is limited by section 17 [76-15-547] to adopting rules: prescribing the form and content of applications for loans and plans for the resource conservation practice; governing the application, implementation, and interpretation of the criteria and preferences for awarding loans; providing for the servicing of loans, including arrangements for obtaining security interests and the establishment of reasonable fees or charges; providing for the confidentiality of financial statements submitted; prescribing the conditions for making loans; establishing the interest rate for the loans; and determining the type and amount of security interest in real estate that will be accepted and any conditions to be made upon the security interest."

Part 7
Land Use Regulations

76-15-701. Adoption of land use regulations.

Attorney General's Opinions

Extent of Conservation District Implementation of Land Use Regulations Regarding Coal Bed Methane Wastewater Operations: The Legislature did not intend that the listing in 76-15-706 of measures necessary to protect soil and water limit the flexibility of conservation districts to devise means to control the adverse effects of coal bed methane runoff. Thus, a conservation district has authority under 76-15-706, following a referendum by the voters, to implement land use regulations in order to implement reasonable measures to conserve soils, protect soil structure from coal bed methane water, and conserve the water resources of the conservation district. 50 A.G. Op. 9 (2004).

Supervisors' Review of Impact on Land Between Stream Crossings: District Supervisors do not have authority under The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975 (Title 75, ch. 7, part 1) to review the route of a proposed pipeline within the county at places other than stream crossings. This is true even though a lawful review of several stream crossings may amount to a review of the land between the crossings, since the Act and the standards adopted by the Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (functions now transferred to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) make clear that the review applies only to the stream sites themselves. However, the Supervisors may formulate regulations under this section to address the issue of land use in their jurisdiction. 39 A.G. Op. 2 (1981).

Constitutionality:

This act is not in violation of the Due Process Clauses of the state or federal constitutions. Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

Reasonable regulation of the grazing of livestock is proper under the police power of the state. Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

This act is not a local or special law in violation of Art. V, sec. 26, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. V, sec. 12, 1972 Mont. Const.). Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

The privilege of grazing livestock on property not belonging to the owner of the cattle is not a vested property right but a revocable license. Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

This act does not treat nonmembers differently from members under like circumstances. Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

This act does not violate the 14th amendment to the United States Constitution by discriminating against small landowners, by denying equal protection of the laws to nonmembers owning land in the district, by denying equal protection of the laws to operators owning land outside the district, or in being unreasonably discriminatory in providing for the cost of constructing and maintaining fences. Case Notes

Grazing District Not Required to Purchase or Substitute Lands to Allow Full Exercise of Grazing Preferences: The statutory language authorizing a grazing district to purchase or substitute lands in order to provide sufficient land under district control upon which members can exercise their grazing preferences is clearly discretionary, and the failure of a district to do so does not in itself constitute an abuse of discretion or breach of a fiduciary duty. The proper method for remedying such a loss of land is found in 76-16-403. Prairie County Co-op St. Grazing District v. Kalfell Ranch, Inc., 269 M 117, 887 P2d 241, 51 St. Rep. 1488 (1994).

Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

Although the law permits three or more persons to initiate proceedings, the discretion to create the district rests in the Commission and there is no unconstitutional delegation of powers. Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

Part 3
Organization, Administration, and Operation

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Annual Corporate Report Not Required: A state grazing district organized under Title 76, ch. 16, is not required to file an annual corporation report with the Secretary of State. 36 A.G. Op. 15 (1975).

76-16-301. Powers and duties of directors.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 31 in six places throughout section before "district" inserted "state"; in (3) near middle before "preference" inserted "grazing"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 13, 2001.

Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Case Notes

Constitutionality: Even if membership in the district would confer special privileges or immunities over nonmembers, still no constitutional right is involved since small owners are privileged to become members of the district. Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

Attorney General's Opinions

Withdrawal of Membership: An individual shall withdraw from a grazing district if he is no longer eligible for membership. The directors of the district should then determine, with the approval of the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, the rights and interests involved. A member may withdraw from membership in a district if the district's articles of incorporation or bylaws provide conditions and procedures for voluntary withdrawal. If a member of a district continues to be engaged in the livestock business and owns or leases forage-producing land and the district's articles of incorporation and bylaws do not provide for voluntary withdrawal, a member may not unilaterally withdraw from the district. 42 A.G. Op. 127 (1988).

76-16-305. Acquisition and disposal of property.

Case Notes

Grazing District Not Required to Purchase or Substitute Lands to Allow Full Exercise of Grazing Preferences: The statutory language authorizing a grazing district to purchase or substitute lands in order to provide sufficient land under district control upon which members can exercise their grazing preferences is clearly discretionary, and the failure of a district to do so does not in itself constitute an abuse of discretion or breach of a fiduciary duty. The proper method for remedying such a loss of land is found in 76-16-403. Prairie County Co-op St. Grazing District v. Kalfell Ranch, Inc., 269 M 117, 887 P2d 241, 51 St. Rep. 1488 (1994).

76-16-306. Management of grazing lands.

Case Notes

Classification of Lands: For purposes of determining whether a grazing permittee has increased his commensurate rating by additions and improvements, a state grazing district may classify lands as self-furnished grazing lands, even though they are cultivated and not used for grazing. Burke v. S. Phillips County Co-op St. Grazing District, 135 M 209, 339 P2d 491 (1959).

Mandamus: Where the action of a grazing district in classifying owners of grazing preferences was a clear violation of the grazing act and no question of administrative discretion was involved, a proceeding in mandamus was proper as against contention that the court was taking over the duties of the district. State ex rel. Engle v. District Court, 119 M 319, 174 P2d 582 (1946).

76-16-307. Leasing of state lands.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 401 in first sentence after "under this chapter" substituted language regarding lease that is in accordance with laws and department regulations and second sentence authorizing board to assist members in acquiring and administering lease for former text that read: "and that is not otherwise disposed of by the department must be leased by the grazing district at a reasonable rental when offered for lease to the officers of the grazing district by the department. However, the officers of the grazing district may appear or submit evidence in writing before the department and show reason and cause for a change in the rental. If there is cause, the department may reappraise the land in question"; in last sentence substituted "commission" for "department"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in first, second, and third sentences, after "department", deleted "of state lands"; in fourth sentence, after "department", deleted "of natural resources and conservation"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Case Notes

State Grazing District Not Allowed Lease Preference Right for State Land: The exercise of a preference right, whereby lessees of state-owned land are preferred and may renew their leases by meeting the highest bid submitted, by a grazing district which does not use the land itself and thus cannot further the policy of sustained yield, is an unconstitutional application of the preference right statute. Grazing districts may obtain state leases only by pure competitive bidding. Jerke v. St. Dept. of Lands, 182 M 294, 597 P2d 49 (1979).

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 401 in (2) in second sentence increased allowable charge from 50 cents to $2 per animal unit per day; in (4) after "owners, or person in charge" deleted "thereof, by leaving said notice at his usual place of residence with some member of his family over the age of 14 years"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Case Notes

Assessments: In view of 76-16-321, grazing district was not limited to the remedies permitted by this section in case of trespassing livestock but could provide by its bylaws for assessments against its members controlling trespassing livestock. Appeal of Two Crow Ranch, Inc., 159 M 16, 494 P2d 915 (1972).

Constitutionality:

Contention that since statute makes no provision as to who shall determine sufficiency of bond it must of necessity be for the district to determine and that the statute is therefore unconstitutional cannot be raised by one who has not been adversely affected by the approval of the bond by the district. Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

This statute is not unconstitutional as denying due process in the matter of ascertaining the amount of damages and costs due and also in ascertaining whether the statute applies in a particular case since all these issues can be determined judicially by depositing bond as security in lieu of the livestock taken. Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

Land Not Controlled by District: Subsections (1) and (2) apply only when the grazing is done upon land owned or controlled by the district, without regard to whether or not the land is fenced or whether the animals merely stray thereon or are driven upon it; where animals trespass upon unfenced land of a nonmember or permittee of a grazing district and there is no evidence that they were herded upon the land or of overstocking of neighboring land and consequent trespass upon lands of others, the open range law applies. McKee v. Clark, 115 M 438, 144 P2d 1000 (1943).

76-16-312. Impoundment of trespassing livestock.

Case Notes

Impoundment Power: The owner of unfenced ranch lands located within the exterior boundaries of a state grazing district, who is neither a member nor a permittee of the district and upon whose property livestock trespassed, has no right to impound the animals or to recover damages for the trespass and compensation for their care and feed during the time impounded, in his action to foreclose the lien upon the animals granted by 81-4-217, this chapter giving the right to impound to the district, not to an individual placed as was plaintiff. McKee v. Clark, 115 M 438, 144 P2d 1000 (1943).

76-16-315. Procedure upon inability to locate person responsible for trespassing livestock.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 401 near middle inserted reference to 76-16-311, after "livestock was taken" inserted "into possession or to the nearest state livestock inspector", and at end substituted reference to 76-16-311 for "addition thereto, he shall mail, by prepaid registered or certified mail, a copy of said statement addressed to the nearest state livestock inspector"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Case Notes

Constitutionality: Whether or not this section is unconstitutional as denying due process of law to those owners who cannot be found cannot be raised by persons who do not fall in that class. Thompson v. Tobacco Root Co-op St. Grazing District, 121 M 445, 193 P2d 811 (1948).

Amendment effective March 13, 2001.

Case Notes

Discriminatory Action: Action of grazing district in classifying all owners of classes 1 and 2 grazing preferences as temporary permittees and issuing 1946 grazing permits on that basis, so that plaintiffs who had a class 1 preference appurtenant to their land for the grazing of 206 animal units were granted only a temporary permit for grazing of 152 animal units for 1946, was a clear violation of the grazing act. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Case Notes

Inability to Exercise Grazing Preference Because of District Loss of Land — Statutory Applicability: A grazing district lost control of about 50,000 acres upon which members could exercise assigned grazing preferences. The district tendered monetary compensation to the 26 affected permittees pursuant to 76-16-414, based on the loss of grazing preferences. Twenty-five of the members accepted the offer, but Kalfell Ranch did not, arguing that under this section, a proportionate reduction of all members' grazing rights was proper and that the district directors had breached their fiduciary duty by failing to purchase the land that was subsequently lost, failing to prohibit competitive bidding, and failing to collect the value of and compensate for improvements made to the land prior to sale. The Board of Natural Resources and Conservation found that the applicable statute was this section and that the district was thus required to proportionally reduce all grazing preferences, but rejected the claim that the district was required to purchase the land or other grazing land sufficient to meet the assigned grazing preferences. The District Court affirmed the Board's decision and determined that the Board's failure to address Kalfell's other claims constituted an implied denial of those issues, a denial that the court agreed with on the merits. On appeal, the Supreme Court found that under the plain language of 76-16-414, Kalfell did not lose any grazing preferences or permits, but rather merely became unable to exercise its preferences because the district lost access to the lands. Therefore, under this section, reductions in grazing privileges became necessary and should have been reduced proportionately. Kalfell's other claims were properly rejected based on clear statutory language and the district's discretionary powers. Prairie County Co-op St. Grazing District v. Kalfell Ranch, Inc., 269 M 117, 887 P2d 241, 51 St. Rep. 1488 (1994). (Kalfell I), followed in In re Kalfell Ranch, Inc. v. Discriminatory Action: Action of grazing district in classifying all owners of classes 1 and 2 grazing preferences as temporary permittees and issuing 1946 grazing permits on that basis, so that plaintiffs who had a class 1 preference appurtenant to their land for the grazing of 206 animal units were granted only a temporary permit for grazing of 152 animal units for 1946, was a clear violation of the grazing act. Case Notes

Competitive Bidding — Revocation of Grazing Preferences and Permit Cancellation Discretionary: Decisions to revoke grazing preferences or to cancel grazing permits are entirely discretionary with the grazing district. Case Notes

State Allowed Compensation for Hydroelectric Use of Riverbeds — No Preemption by Federal Law: Plaintiff PPL sought a declaratory judgment that the state was precluded from seeking compensation for the use of riverbeds at PPL's federally licensed hydroelectric dams on the Missouri, Clark Fork, and Madison Rivers. PPL asserted that the state law regulating the use of riverbeds was preempted by federal law and by the federal navigational servitude, which is the power of the U.S. Congress to ensure that navigable rivers remain open to interstate and foreign commerce. The state denied that federal law or the servitude preempted the state Hydroelectric Resources Act (HRA), Title 77, ch. 4, part 2, and counterclaimed for compensation for PPL's past and ongoing use of state riverbeds, as well as damages under theories of uncompensated use of state land, unjust enrichment, trespass, and negligence. The District Court agreed with the state, holding that the Federal Power Act (FPA) recognized the property rights of parties whose land is affected by federally licensed hydroelectric projects and specifically prohibits the use of private property without compensation, so the state was allowed to seek compensation. The court also concluded that the FPA explicitly permits the operation of state law regarding proprietary rights affected by a federally licensed facility, so the HRA was not preempted by the FPA. PPL Mont., LLC v. St., 2010 MT 64, 355 Mont. 402, 229 P.3d 421.

Department's Definition of Recreational Use and Application of Rule Prohibiting Travel Across State Land Rejected: The Weitzs owned a ranch, and within the boundaries of their land was state land that they leased. The Weitzs were using roads on their leased land to spot game and were traveling across the leased land on existing roads to get to their own property to hunt. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation concluded that the defendants were engaged in recreational use of state lands and were in violation of a Department rule prohibiting vehicle travel across state lands. The Supreme Court upheld the District Court's decision that noted that the hearings examiner had acknowledged that no elk or deer had been killed, shot at, or pursued on leased state land by the defendants and therefore reversed the hearings examiner's decision as being based upon faulty reasoning, conjecture, and speculation. The Supreme Court also upheld the lower court's ruling that the Department's application of the rule prohibiting travel across state lands by a lessee to conduct activity elsewhere was an overbroad and unlawful application of the rule. Weitz v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 284 M 130, 943 P2d 990, 54 St. Rep. 807 (1997).

Case Notes

Sanctions Not Applied Absent Finding of Bad Faith in State Timber Sale: Plaintiff sought sanctions against the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) under former Rule 11, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), for requesting an injunction bond pursuant to this section in relation to plaintiff's attempt to halt a timber sale. The District Court found that an injunction bond was not required, but also denied sanctions. On appeal, plaintiff contended that sanctions should apply because the DNRC's actions were intended solely to harass and cause needless increase in the cost of litigation. The Supreme Court agreed that the DNRC could not be said to have acted in bad faith by seeking to have a bond posted, so the District Court did not err in declining to impose sanctions under former Rule 11. Friends of the Wild Swan v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2000 MT 209, 301 M 1, 6 P3d 972, 57 St. Rep. 816 (2000).

Statute Inapplicable to Injunction Based on Inadequacy of Department EIS: Plaintiff sought an injunction against the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) to halt a timber sale based on inadequacy of the DNRC environmental impact statement (EIS). The DNRC contended that this section required plaintiff to post a postappeal injunction bond during the pendency of the appeal. The District Court concluded that because the timber sale was expected to lose money, it would be difficult to comprehend how damages might be incurred as a result of enjoining the project and that a bond was thus not required. The Supreme Court affirmed. This section pertains to actions enjoining a decision by the Board of Land Commissioners, but does not apply to cases that deal with an injunction against the DNRC based on the inadequacy of an EIS and that have no effect on any decision by the Board of Land Commissioners. Friends of the Wild Swan v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2000 MT 209, 301 M 1, 6 P3d 972, 57 St. Rep. 816 (2000).

Chapter 472 inserted (3) providing that use of a ford or crossing on a navigable river or stream may not be considered a trespass; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 6, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has asserted regulatory jurisdiction over the beds of various rivers and streams based on the premise that the streams are navigable and that the state therefore owns the riverbeds and streambeds; and

WHEREAS, very few Montana rivers or streams have been adjudicated as navigable, either in whole or in part; and

WHEREAS, it is not economically feasible for either the Department of Revenue or the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to obtain judicial determinations of riverbed or streambed ownership by statewide quiet title actions, yet that ownership determination may not be made legally by unilateral administrative decisions; and

WHEREAS, if the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation wishes to assert regulatory control over the bed of a river or stream that has not been adjudicated to be navigable and was not determined navigable at the time of the original federal government surveys of the public land as evidenced by the recorded and monumented surveys of the meander lines of the river, it is required to provide written notice of the claim of state ownership to the affected property owners; and

WHEREAS, because the present claims of state ownership of riverbeds and streambeds is contrary to longstanding administrative practice and because the test for navigability depends upon evidence concerning the log floating capability of a stream at the time of statehood, there is no presumption of correctness attached to a navigability claim made by any state agency."

Legislative Findings: Section 1, Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "The legislature finds that:

(1) for 120 years since the admission of Montana as a state in 1889, the department of revenue and its predecessor agencies have taxed some landowners whose property abuts a river or stream on the assumption that those riparian landowners owned the property to the middle of the river or stream;

(2) in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544 (1981), the United States supreme court recognized that if a river or stream is not navigable, the abutting riparian landowners own the land in the bed of the stream to the middle of the stream, but if a river or stream is navigable, the state owns the bed of the river or stream, having acquired ownership from the United States when the state was admitted to the union, and therefore Montana owns the bed of the Bighorn River where it flows through the Crow reservation;

(3) for the purpose of determining the ownership of a riverbed or streambed, the test of navigability is whether logs could be floated in the stream at the time of statehood as stated in Montana Coalition for Stream Access v. Curran, 210 Mont. 38, 682 P.2d 163 (1984), based upon The Montello, 87 U.S. 430 (1874), Sierra Pacific Power Co. v. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 681 F.2d 1134 (9th Cir. 1982), and State of Oregon v. Riverfront Protection Association, 672 F.2d 792 (9th Cir. 1982);

(4) beginning with tax assessments that were effective January 1, 2008, the lien date for real property taxes, the department of revenue reassessed the property of riparian landowners whose land abuts various rivers and streams by reducing the amount of land assessed based upon the premise that the landowners did not own to the middle of the river or stream because the river or stream was navigable and these reassessments, if correct, have enormous impact upon the riparian landowners because they affect land titles, acreage owned, qualification for various conservation and price support programs, and ownership of water diversion facilities and other structures that the riparian landowners have constructed for water usage;

(5) the 2008 reassessments were made by simply sending out tax bills without any notice that they were based upon a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds or streambeds and some riparian landowners have paid the first installment of 2008 real property taxes based upon the reassessments without realizing that a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds and streambeds was the basis for the reassessments;

(6) procedural due process requires that if a claim of change in ownership is involved, the state agency involved shall afford the affected property owners both notice of the claim and the opportunity to be heard;

(7) the 2008 real property tax assessments based upon claims of state ownership did not comply with the constitutional requirement for procedural due process and under that circumstance payment by the property owners of taxes based on the reassessment does not constitute acquiesence in the underlying state ownership claim;

(8) The department of revenue is required to provide written notice to the affected property owners of the state's claim of ownership so that the affected property owners have a fair opportunity to be heard and to dispute the government's claim."

Case Notes

Market Value of State Land Rights-of-Way Set by Statute at 1972 Levels — Unconstitutionality: The plain language of this section as it read prior to the 2001 amendments required that full market valuations of right-of-way acreage for historic deeds on state trust lands be based on the median values for the classifications of land at 1972 levels, leaving the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation no choice but to use those levels instead of current market value. The state argued that pursuant to 40 A.G. Op. 24 (1983), the figures in this section were merely a minimum above which the Department may charge full market value. However, the statutory language prior to amendment was mandatory rather than discretionary and violated the provisions of the Montana Constitution and The Enabling Act, which require the state to receive full market value for school trust lands, and thus is unconstitutional. Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999).

2011 Amendment: Chapter 359 in (1) in second sentence at beginning and in (2) inserted "Subject to 77-1-1112(10)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Severability: Section 15, Ch. 359, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has asserted regulatory jurisdiction over the beds of various rivers and streams based on the premise that the streams are navigable and that the state therefore owns the riverbeds and streambeds; and

WHEREAS, very few Montana rivers or streams have been adjudicated as navigable, either in whole or in part; and

WHEREAS, it is not economically feasible for either the Department of Revenue or the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to obtain judicial determinations of riverbed or streambed ownership by statewide quiet title actions, yet that ownership determination may not be made legally by unilateral administrative decisions; and

WHEREAS, if the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation wishes to assert regulatory control over the bed of a river or stream that has not been adjudicated to be navigable and was not determined navigable at the time of the original federal government surveys of the public land as evidenced by the recorded and monumented surveys of the meander lines of the river, it is required to provide written notice of the claim of state ownership to the affected property owners; and

WHEREAS, because the present claims of state ownership of riverbeds and streambeds is contrary to longstanding administrative practice and because the test for navigability depends upon evidence concerning the log floating capability of a stream at the time of statehood, there is no presumption of correctness attached to a navigability claim made by any state agency."

Legislative Findings: Section 1, Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "The legislature finds that:

(1) for 120 years since the admission of Montana as a state in 1889, the department of revenue and its predecessor agencies have taxed some landowners whose property abuts a river or stream on the assumption that those riparian landowners owned the property to the middle of the river or stream;

(2) in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544 (1981), the United States supreme court recognized that if a river or stream is not navigable, the abutting riparian landowners own the land in the bed of the stream to the middle of the stream, but if a river or stream is navigable, the state owns the bed of the river or stream, having acquired ownership from the United States when the state was admitted to the union, and therefore Montana owns the bed of the Bighorn River where it flows through the Crow reservation;

(3) for the purpose of determining the ownership of a riverbed or streambed, the test of navigability is whether logs could be floated in the stream at the time of statehood as stated in Montana Coalition for Stream Access v. Curran, 210 Mont. 38, 682 P.2d 163 (1984), based upon The Montello, 87 U.S. 430 (1874), Sierra Pacific Power Co. v. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 681 F.2d 1134 (9th Cir. 1982), and State of Oregon v. Riverfront Protection Association, 672 F.2d 792 (9th Cir. 1982);

(4) beginning with tax assessments that were effective January 1, 2008, the lien date for real property taxes, the department of revenue reassessed the property of riparian landowners whose land abuts various rivers and streams by reducing the amount of land assessed based upon the premise that the landowners did not own to the middle of the river or stream because the river or stream was navigable and these reassessments, if correct, have enormous impact upon the riparian landowners because they affect land titles, acreage owned, qualification for various conservation and price support programs, and ownership of water diversion facilities and other structures that the riparian landowners have constructed for water usage;

(5) the 2008 reassessments were made by simply sending out tax bills without any notice that they were based upon a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds or streambeds and some riparian landowners have paid the first installment of 2008 real property taxes based upon the reassessments without realizing that a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds and streambeds was the basis for the reassessments;

(6) procedural due process requires that if a claim of change in ownership is involved, the state agency involved shall afford the affected property owners both notice of the claim and the opportunity to be heard;

(7) the 2008 real property tax assessments based upon claims of state ownership did not comply with the constitutional requirement for procedural due process and under that circumstance payment by the property owners of taxes based on the reassessment does not constitute acquiesence in the underlying state ownership claim;

(8) The department of revenue is required to provide written notice to the affected property owners of the state's claim of ownership so that the affected property owners have a fair opportunity to be heard and to dispute the government's claim."

Effective Date: Section 18, Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval." Approved May 6, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 67, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, the state administers over 10,000 leases, licenses, permits, and agreements on state lands; and

State, 1999 MT 187, 983 P.2d 962 (1999), the determination of the date of delivery for the submission of documents and payments required by the terms of leases, licenses, permits, and agreements issued by the Board of Land Commissioners or the Department has been made less efficient; and

WHEREAS, there is a need to provide a uniform and exclusive method for determining the date of delivery of documents and payments to the state for uses of state lands."

Severability — Board to Bridge Gap: Section 122, Ch. 60, L. 1927, provided: "If any subdivision, section or part of section of this act should be found to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of this State, such finding of unconstitutionality shall not affect the remainder of the act but such remainder shall remain in full force and effect and shall be carried out, and the State Board of Land Commissioners is hereby specifically charged with the duty of bridging over as far as possible any gap which might result in case any portion or portions of this act should be found unconstitutional by exercising the general grant of powers given to it by the Constitution of the State."

1991 Amendment: Inserted (2) providing that the people are entitled to general recreational use of state lands to the extent that trusts are compensated for value of the recreation. Amendment effective March 1, 1992.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 609, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 13] [77-1-804] requires the board of land commissioners to adopt rules to implement the provisions for recreational use of state lands established by this bill. Consistent with the provisions of this bill, it is intended that public recreational use of state lands be accomplished to the fullest extent possible. It is acknowledged that certain state lands will merit closure from public recreational use due to certain considerations, including but not limited to the presence of growing crops and livestock and the proximity of dwellings and agricultural buildings. Nothing in this bill authorizes or purports to authorize trespass on private lands to reach state lands.

This bill requires the board to adopt rules governing the actions of the recreational user of state lands. These rules must address protection of the resource value, compensation for damage to improvements, criteria for closure, restrictions upon certain recreational activities, and, when state land is posted, provision for the recreational user to contact the lessee or his agent to provide prior notice of the type and extent of the recreational use contemplated.

[Section 18] [77-1-810] authorizes the department to adopt rules for weed control activities. It is the intent of the legislature that the board establish a procedure whereby weed infestations on state lands that are attributable to recreational access are controlled or eradicated. Examples of procedures that fulfill this intent include:

(1) a departmental weed control program;
(2) payments for weed control activities; and
(3) payments to county weed boards.

It is the intent of the legislature that the board evaluate the implementation of this bill, develop recommendations to address problems, if any, that arise through the course of rulemaking and implementation, and report its findings and recommendations to the 53rd legislature."

The department of state lands [now department of natural resources and conservation] and the department of fish, wildlife, and parks shall commence proceedings and arrangements necessary to establish a recreational use license to be effective March 1, 1992." Case Notes

Proper Application of Profitability Method of Determining Fair Market Value of Hydroelectric Facility's Damages Owed to State for Past Use of State-Owned Riverbeds — Future Lease Terms Left to Board of Land Commissioners: After holding that the state was entitled to compensation for use of state-owned riverbeds by plaintiff hydroelectric utility, the District Court applied a profitability methodology to determine the productive value of the land in order to arrive at a fair market value for plaintiff's use of the riverbeds. Plaintiff contested the methodology, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The state uses productive value of the land in determining lease rates, and nothing in Montana law barred an award of damages based on plaintiff's profits, so income-based leasing was an appropriate method to calculate past damages in this case. Use of the Hydroelectric Resources Act (HRA), Title 77, ch. 4, part 2, was a proper mechanism to assess past damages, and the District Court's findings in support of the award were not clearly erroneous. The District Court also correctly left to the discretion of the Board of Land Commissioners the terms of any future lease with plaintiff and properly held that the Board was not bound by the same method used to calculate past damages in developing future lease terms. PPL Mont., LLC v. St., 2010 MT 64, 355 Mont. 402, 229 P.3d 421, following State ex rel. Thompson v. Babcock, 147 Mont. 46, 409 P.2d 808 (1966).

Harvest-Level Accounting of Timber Sales Not Required: Plaintiff challenged the methodology used by the state Board of Land Commissioners in approving the harvest and sale of timber in state forests, asserting that this section required harvest-level accounting. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, ruling that the statute did not require the Board to reconcile timber sale costs and benefits at the harvest level. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that the statute, on its face, does not require accountings at all, but rather requires the Board to secure the largest measure of legitimate and reasonable advantage to the state. The court declined to insert what has been omitted from the statutory language, despite plaintiff's contention that a comprehensive economic evaluation was implicit in the statute. The court held that it could not be concluded that the Board has not secured or could not secure the largest measure of benefit from timber sales without harvest-level accounting, given the multiple purposes that the Board must fulfill with regard to school trust lands, the broad discretion and deference that the law provides to the Board in administering school trust lands, and current statutory accounting requirements. Thus, the Board is not legally required to conduct harvest-level review of timber sales and did not violate this section when it decided to forego harvest-level financial reconciliation in a timber sale. Summary judgment was affirmed. Friends of the Wild Swan v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2005 MT 351, 330 M 186, 127 P3d 394 (2005). See also State ex rel. Thompson v. Babcock, 147 M 46, 409 P2d 808 (1966), and Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800 (1999).

Repealed Statute Regarding Sale or Lease of School Trust Lands to School Districts — No Justiciable Controversy or Action Upon Which Relief Could Be Granted: Former 20-6-621(4) allowed the Board of Land Commissioners to sell, for appraised value, or to lease, for $1 a year, school trust lands to a school district. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation stipulated that the provision was unconstitutional because it made state lands available for less than full market value. The District Court agreed, noting that leasing school trust lands to some school districts would favor only some of the beneficiaries and not the school trust as a whole. The Legislature concurred and repealed the subsection in 1999. Plaintiff subsequently sued the Department, the Board, and the state, contending that the Department unlawfully determined that the provision was unconstitutional and failed to defend the constitutionality of the provision. The state moved to dismiss the complaint on grounds that no justiciable controversy existed and that the complaint alleged no cause of action upon which relief could be granted. The District Court granted summary judgment for the state, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Any determination that the Department exceeded its authority would have had no bearing on the existing rights or interests at issue, and a judgment granting the relief sought would not have effectively operated to resolve any issue in the case. Thus, there was no justiciable case or controversy, and the claim was properly dismissed. Advocates for Educ., Inc. v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2004 MT 230, 322 M 429, 97 P3d 553 (2004), following Mont.-Dak. Util. Co. v. Billings, 2003 MT 332, 318 M 862, 80 P3d 1247 (2003).

Standard of Review Applicable to Noncontested Cases — Approval of Plan for Drilling Exploratory Well: The District Court incorrectly applied the "clearly erroneous" standard set out in 2-4-704 when reviewing whether the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) properly approved a plan proposing drilling of an exploratory well on a leased tract near Glacier Park. The court found that shortcomings in the approval procedure, coupled with the fact that information gathered by the Department indicating that the well would generate a significant environmental impact, necessitated preparation of an environmental impact statement. However, 2-4-704 was inapplicable because the case was not truly contested. No hearing was requested or held before the Department, there was no action initiated until after the Department had approved the operating plan, and there was no evidentiary record against which to measure the Department's decision and determine whether it was clearly erroneous. Rather, the proper standard of review was whether the record established that the Department acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unlawfully. The fact that the Department conducted two preliminary environmental reviews, conditioned approval on 42 protective stipulations, and considered the concerns raised in the approval process and took significant steps to address them indicated that the decision to forego preparation of an environmental impact statement was not arbitrary, capricious, or illegal. Mont. 1985), and followed in Ravalli County Fish & Game Ass'n, Inc. v. Dept. of State Lands, 273 M 371, 903 P2d 1362, 52 St. Rep. 996 (1995), Mont. Envtl. Information Center, Inc. v. Dept. of Transportation, 2000 MT 5, 298 M 1, 994 P2d 676, 57 St. Rep. 18 (2000), and Friends of the Wild Swan v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2000 MT 209, 301 M 1, 6 P3d 972, 57 St. Rep. 816 (2000), in which omission of a cumulative impact analysis was directly related to the "unlawful" portion of the MEPA standard of review. See also Madison River R.V. Ltd. v. Ennis, 2000 MT 15, 298 M 91, 994 P2d 1098, 57 St. Rep. 84 (2000).

Lease Rental Affected by Land Reclassification — Writ of Prohibition Proper: Lessees developed a water spreading project on a portion of their state grazing lease, and the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) reclassified 32 acres of the lease as agricultural. Lessees later concluded that the project was inadequate for producing a profitable crop at the higher agricultural rental rates. They negotiated to pay back a loan for the project and reverted the land to grazing. After the loan was repaid, there were no other agreements supplementing the original lease. However, the Department subsequently determined that the 32 acres should retain the agricultural classification, sought rental at the agricultural rate, and canceled the lease upon nonpayment. The District Court properly filed a writ of prohibition restraining the Department from canceling the lease, re-leasing the property to other parties, and taking action against lessees for trespass after finding the Department was in excess of its jurisdiction for canceling the lease for nonpayment of agricultural rental when the property was leased for grazing only. Winchell v. Dept. of State Lands, 235 M 10, 764 P2d 1267, 45 St. Rep. 2121 (1988).

School Trust Land Water Rights Owned by State: In a case involving a dispute over ownership of water rights on state school trust lands, the Supreme Court ruled that title to the surface and ground water rights on school trust lands vests in the state and that the lessee, in making appropriations on and for school trust sections, is acting on behalf of the state. It is only through state action that the lessee is on the land, and Montana law expressly provides that the lessee must be reimbursed for all capital expenditures made in putting the water to beneficial use. The state is the beneficial user of the water, and its duty as trustee of the school trust lands prohibits it from alienating any interest in the land without receiving full compensation for it or from giving up control over the water rights. Dept. of State Lands v. Pettibone, 216 M 361, 702 P2d 948, 42 St. Rep. 869 (1985).

Board's Fiduciary Duty — Basis of Discretionary Power — No Mandamus to Compel Discretionary Action: The Board and the Department are under a fiduciary duty to manage the school lands according to the highest standards. Therefore, the Department's power when administering the trust is discretionary, and a Writ of Mandamus may not be issued to compel the Department to approve an assignment of a lease. Jeppeson v. St., 205 M 282, 667 P2d 428, 40 St. Rep. 1272 (1983).

Leasing State-Owned Land: State Board of Land Commissioners had discretion to award 10-year lease to bidder at 33 ⅓% crop share, rather than to another who bid 50%, especially where lessee had farmed the land before and the Board was taking less risk. State ex rel. Thompson v. Babcock, 147 M 46, 409 P2d 808 (1966).

Lapse of Time Not Confirming a Void Act: In a proceeding in mandamus, commenced in 1937, to compel the state Board of Land Commissioners to refund the purchase price of a tract of state land sold in 1910, in violation of Art. XVII, sec. 1, 2, 1889 Mont. Const. (similar to Art. X, sec. 11, 1972 Mont. Const.), the defenses of laches and Statute of Limitations may not be relied upon, lapse of time not confirming a void act. Under 77-1-303, the Board may refund money. State ex rel. Boorman v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 109 M 127, 94 P2d 201 (1939).

Protection of Interest of State: An arrangement whereby the state will share in all the natural gas brought to the surface on a certain unified area in proportion to the acreage owned by the state in that area fully protects the rights of the state in securing to it its full share of the gas underlying its lands. Toomey v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 106 M 547, 81 P2d 407 (1938).

Attorney General's Opinions

Diversion of School Lands: The state must actually compensate its school trust in money for the full appraised value of school trust lands designated as or exchanged for natural areas to prevent a breach of trust under The Enabling Act and the Montana Constitution. 36 A.G. Op. 92 (1976).

Harvest-Level Accounting of Timber Sales Not Required: Plaintiff challenged the methodology used by the state Board of Land Commissioners in approving the harvest and sale of timber in state forests, asserting that 77-1-202 required harvest-level accounting. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, ruling that the statute did not require the Board to reconcile timber sale costs and benefits at the harvest level. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that the statute, on its face, does not require accountings at all, but rather requires the Board to secure the largest measure of legitimate and reasonable advantage to the state. Thus, the Board is not legally required to conduct harvest-level review of timber sales and did not violate 77-1-202 when it decided to forego harvest-level financial reconciliation in a timber sale. Allowance of Change in Grazing Permit Not Ministerial Act — EIS Required: Shoberg transferred his grazing permit to Madden, and Madden changed from grazing cattle to grazing sheep. The Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) allowed the grazing of sheep to continue, notwithstanding that the Department had information indicating that the grazing of sheep would adversely impact upon bighorn sheep reintroduced into the area. The plaintiffs brought an action to require the completion of an environmental impact statement (EIS). The Supreme Court held that an EIS was required because the Department was allowing an action, grazing of sheep, to go forward that could have a significant effect upon the quality of the human environment, notwithstanding statutes requiring the Department to protect the best interests of the state, including consideration of consequences to environment and wildlife. Statutes Presumed Constitutional — Burden of Proof — Standard of Review: In deciding whether certain statutes violated the mandates of the Montana Constitution and The Enabling Act regarding use of school trust lands, the Supreme Court eschewed standards of review suggested by both parties, holding that the proper standard was whether the District Court's conclusions of law were correct. Statutes are presumed to be constitutional, and the Supreme Court will avoid an unconstitutional interpretation if possible. A party challenging the constitutionality of a statute has the burden of proving it unconstitutional beyond a reasonable doubt, and any doubt will be resolved in favor of the statute. Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999), following Steer, Inc. v. Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 459, L. 1983, provided: "WHEREAS, on February 13, 1981, the Board of Land Commissioners proposed to adopt rules concerning surface licenses and leases for the use of state forest lands for recreational cabin sites by private individuals, which rules would have established the market value of recreational cabin site licenses and leases by a system of competitive bidding; and

WHEREAS, the rules would have allowed out-of-state interests and other parties to increase by competitive bidding the cost of current cabin site licenses and leases and would thereby have worked a hardship on or dispossessed current licensees and lessees and were therefore subsequently withdrawn by the Board; and

WHEREAS, the policy of this state for the leasing of state lands as provided in 77-1-202 is that the guiding principle in the leasing of state lands is "that these lands and funds are held in trust for the support of education and for the attainment of other worthy objects helpful to the well-being of the people of this state"; and

WHEREAS, allowing current cabin site licensees and lessees to continue to enjoy the benefits of existing licenses and leases and the benefits of their labor is a worthy object helpful to the well-being of the people of this state in that it promotes continuity in the care of state lands, promotes use of state lands by the public by granting a minimal expectation of continuing enjoyment, and promotes satisfaction with governmental processes.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this bill to direct that if the Board of Land Commissioners adopts any rules under whatever existing rulemaking authority it may have to establish the market value of current cabin site licenses or leases, that the Board, in furtherance of the state policy expressed in 77-1-202, adopt a method of establishing the market values of cabin site licenses and leases which would not cause undue disruption to the lives and property of and useful enjoyment by current licensees and lessees."

Case Notes

State Land Cabin Site Renewal Policy Not Violative of Obligation to Obtain Full Market Value: Plaintiff contended that this section is facially invalid because the use of a cabin site renewal policy that did not employ competitive bidding was calculated to keep cabin site rental rates below full market value. However, nothing in the plain language of this section abrogates the mandate that full market value be obtained for school trust lands. Plaintiff failed to show that the statute violates the duty of undivided loyalty or that the preference accorded lessees on cabin site leases on state lands resulted in renewal rates below market value. The statute legislatively establishes a method by which full market value is obtained, which is allowed pursuant to Jerke v. Dept. of State Lands, 182 M 294, 597 P2d 49 (1979), but the language of this section nevertheless requires that full market value be obtained, by whatever method is used, and therefore on its face does not violate the trust. Thus, the District Court correctly held that the renewal preference in this section does not violate the school trust requirements of the Montana Constitution or The Enabling Act of 1889. Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999).

State Land Cabin Site Rental Policy Violative of School Trust Obligation to Obtain Fair Market Value: The policy employed by the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation in renting cabin sites on state lands, in a manner that resulted in below-market rentals, violated the state's school trust obligations under the Montana Constitution and The Enabling Act of 1889, even though this section is facially valid because it requires that full market value be obtained. Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999), following State ex rel. Thompson v. Harvest-Level Accounting of Timber Sales Not Required: Plaintiff challenged the methodology used by the state Board of Land Commissioners in approving the harvest and sale of timber in state forests, asserting that 77-1-202 required harvest-level accounting. The District Court granted summary judgment to defendants, ruling that the statute did not require the Board to reconcile timber sale costs and benefits at the harvest level. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that the statute, on its face, does not require accountings at all, but rather requires the Board to secure the largest measure of legitimate and reasonable advantage to the state. The court declined to insert what has been omitted from the statutory language, despite plaintiff's contention that a comprehensive economic evaluation was implicit in the statute. The court held that it could not be concluded that the Board has not secured or could not secure the largest measure of benefit from timber sales without harvest-level accounting, given the multiple purposes that the Board must fulfill with regard to school trust lands, the broad discretion and deference that the law provides to the Board in administering school trust lands, and current statutory accounting requirements. Thus, the Board is not legally required to conduct harvest-level review of timber sales and did not violate 77-1-202 when it decided to forego harvest-level financial reconciliation in a timber sale. Repealed Statute Regarding Sale or Lease of School Trust Lands to School Districts — No Justiciable Controversy or Action Upon Which Relief Could Be Granted: Former 20-6-621(4) allowed the Board of Land Commissioners to sell, for appraised value, or to lease, for $1 a year, school trust lands to a school district. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation stipulated that the provision was unconstitutional because it made state lands available for less than full market value. The District Court agreed, noting that leasing school trust lands to some school districts would favor only some of the beneficiaries and not the school trust as a whole. The Legislature concurred and repealed the subsection in 1999. Plaintiff subsequently sued the Department, the Board, and the state, contending that the Department unlawfully determined that the provision was unconstitutional and failed to defend the constitutionality of the provision. The state moved to dismiss the complaint on grounds that no justiciable controversy existed and that the complaint alleged no cause of action upon which relief could be granted. The District Court granted summary judgment for the state, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Any determination that the Department exceeded its authority would have had no bearing on the existing rights or interests at issue, and a judgment granting the relief sought would not have effectively operated to resolve any issue in the case. Thus, there was no justiciable case or controversy, and the claim was properly dismissed. Advocates for Educ., Inc. v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2004 MT 230, 322 M 429, 97 P3d 553 (2004), following Mont.-Dak. Util. Co. v. Billings, 2003 MT 332, 318 M 862, 80 P3d 1247 (2003).

Lease Rental Affected by Land Reclassification — Writ of Prohibition Proper: Lessees developed a water spreading project on a portion of their state grazing lease, and the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) reclassified 32 acres of the lease as agricultural. Lessees later concluded that the project was inadequate for producing a profitable crop at the higher agricultural rental rates. They negotiated to pay back a loan for the project and reverted the land to grazing. After the loan was repaid, there were no other agreements supplementing the original lease. However, the Department subsequently determined that the 32 acres should retain the agricultural classification, sought rental at the agricultural rate, and canceled the lease upon nonpayment. The District Court properly filed a writ of prohibition restraining the Department from canceling the lease, re-leasing the property to other parties, and taking action against lessees for trespass after finding the Department was in excess of its jurisdiction for canceling the lease for nonpayment of agricultural rental when the property was leased for grazing only. Winchell v. Dept. of State Lands, 235 M 10, 764 P2d 1267, 45 St. Rep. 2121 (1988).

Lack of Oil and Gas Production — Lease Properly Canceled: The Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) was entitled to a surrender of an oil and gas lease when the clear terms of the lease agreement provided the lease would end after 10 years if no commercial quantities were being produced and it was shown that commercial quantities were never produced. Gypsy-Highview Gathering System, Inc. v. Dept. of State Lands, 231 M 330, 753 P2d 317, 45 St. Rep. 657 (1988).

Department's Fiduciary Duty — Basis of Discretionary Power — No Mandamus to Compel Discretionary Action: The Department is under a fiduciary duty to manage the school lands according to the highest standards. Therefore, the Department's power when administering the trust is discretionary, and a Writ of Mandamus may not be issued to compel the Department to approve an assignment of a lease. Jeppeson v. St., 205 M 282, 667 P2d 428, 40 St. Rep. 1272 (1983).

77-1-303. Refunding of money paid by mistake.

Case Notes

Interest Paid State Refunded: Interest on installment payments plus principal paid the state on a sale of land for which the state could not produce title must be refunded. State ex rel. Wash. Phosphate & Silver Co. v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 113 M 298, 124 P2d 1001 (1942).

Mandamus to Compel Refund: Mandamus lies to compel state boards and officers to perform a clear legal duty, such as is imposed upon the state Board of Land Commissioners by this section to refund money erroneously paid to it on a contract of sale of state lands where the contract is invalid. State ex rel. Boorman v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 109 M 127, 94 P2d 201 (1939).

Money Never Becoming Part of State School Fund: Where the state Board of Land Commissioners received money erroneously paid to it on a void contract of sale of state lands, such money never becomes a part of the common School Fund; however, the Board, under 77-1-202, has control over the disposition thereof and, under this section, has authority to refund it to the purchaser. A legislative appropriation is not required for that purpose, "appropriation" applying to state funds with reference exclusively to the General Fund. State ex rel. Boorman v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 109 M 127, 94 P2d 201 (1939), distinguished in State ex rel. Wash. Phosphate & Silver Co. v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 113 M 298, 124 P2d 1001 (1942).

Classification of State Lands

Part Case Notes

School Trust Land Water Rights Owned by State: In a case involving a dispute over ownership of water rights on state school trust lands, the Supreme Court ruled that title to the surface and ground water rights on school trust lands vests in the state and that the lessee, in making appropriations on and for school trust sections, is acting on behalf of the state. It is only through state action that the lessee is on the land, and Montana law expressly provides that the lessee must be reimbursed for all capital expenditures made in putting the water to beneficial use. The state is the beneficial user of the water, and its duty as trustee of the school trust lands prohibits it from alienating any interest in the land without receiving full compensation for it or from giving up control over the water rights. Case Notes

Lease Rental Affected by Land Reclassification — Writ of Prohibition Proper: Lessees developed a water spreading project on a portion of their state grazing lease, and the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) reclassified 32 acres of the lease as agricultural. Lessees later concluded that the project was inadequate for producing a profitable crop at the higher agricultural rental rates. They negotiated to pay back a loan for the project and reverted the land to grazing. After the loan was repaid, there were no other agreements supplementing the original lease. However, the Department subsequently determined that the 32 acres should retain the agricultural classification, sought rental at the agricultural rate, and canceled the lease upon nonpayment. The District Court properly filed a writ of prohibition restraining the Department from canceling the lease, re-leasing the property to other parties, and taking action against lessees for trespass after finding the Department was in excess of its jurisdiction for canceling the lease for nonpayment of agricultural rental when the property was leased for grazing only. Winchell v. Dept. of State Lands, 235 M 10, 764 P2d 1267, 45 St. Rep. 2121 (1988).

Recreational Use of State Lands

Part Compiler's Comments

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 609, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 13] [77-1-804] requires the board of land commissioners to adopt rules to implement the provisions for recreational use of state lands established by this bill. Consistent with the provisions of this bill, it is intended that public recreational use of state lands be accomplished to the fullest extent possible. It is acknowledged that certain state lands will merit closure from public recreational use due to certain considerations, including but not limited to the presence of growing crops and livestock and the proximity of dwellings and agricultural buildings. Nothing in this bill authorizes or purports to authorize trespass on private lands to reach state lands.

This bill requires the board to adopt rules governing the actions of the recreational user of state lands. These rules must address protection of the resource value, compensation for damage to improvements, criteria for closure, restrictions upon certain recreational activities, and, when state land is posted, provision for the recreational user to contact the lessee or his agent to provide prior notice of the type and extent of the recreational use contemplated.

[Section 18] [77-1-810] authorizes the department to adopt rules for weed control activities. It is the intent of the legislature that the board establish a procedure whereby weed infestations on state lands that are attributable to recreational access are controlled or eradicated. Examples of procedures that fulfill this intent include:

(1) a departmental weed control program;
(2) payments for weed control activities; and
(3) payments to county weed boards.

It is the intent of the legislature that the board evaluate the implementation of this bill, develop recommendations to address problems, if any, that arise through the course of rulemaking and implementation, and report its findings and recommendations to the 53rd legislature."

WHEREAS, it is not economically feasible for either the Department of Revenue or the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to obtain judicial determinations of riverbed or streambed ownership by statewide quiet title actions, yet that ownership determination may not be made legally by unilateral administrative decisions; and

WHEREAS, if the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation wishes to assert regulatory control over the bed of a river or stream that has not been adjudicated to be navigable and was not determined navigable at the time of the original federal government surveys of the public land as evidenced by the recorded and monumented surveys of the meander lines of the river, it is required to provide written notice of the claim of state ownership to the affected property owners; and

WHEREAS, because the present claims of state ownership of riverbeds and streambeds is contrary to longstanding administrative practice and because the test for navigability depends upon evidence concerning the log floating capability of a stream at the time of statehood, there is no presumption of correctness attached to a navigability claim made by any state agency."

Legislative Findings: Section 1, Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "The legislature finds that:

(1) for 120 years since the admission of Montana as a state in 1889, the department of revenue and its predecessor agencies have taxed some landowners whose property abuts a river or stream on the assumption that those riparian landowners owned the property to the middle of the river or stream;

(2) in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544 (1981), the United States supreme court recognized that if a river or stream is not navigable, the abutting riparian landowners own the land in the bed of the stream to the middle of the stream, but if a river or stream is navigable, the state owns the bed of the river or stream, having acquired ownership from the United States when the state was admitted to the union, and therefore Montana owns the bed of the Bighorn River where it flows through the Crow reservation;

(3) for the purpose of determining the ownership of a riverbed or streambed, the test of navigability is whether logs could be floated in the stream at the time of statehood as stated in Montana Coalition for Stream Access v. Curran, 210 Mont. 38, 682 P.2d 163 (1984), based upon The Montello, 87 U.S. 430 (1874), Sierra Pacific Power Co. v. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 681 F.2d 1134 (9th Cir. 1982), and State of Oregon v. Riverfront Protection Association, 672 F.2d 792 (9th Cir. 1982);

(4) beginning with tax assessments that were effective January 1, 2008, the lien date for real property taxes, the department of revenue reassessed the property of riparian landowners whose land abuts various rivers and streams by reducing the amount of land assessed based upon the premise that the landowners did not own to the middle of the river or stream because the river or stream was navigable and these reassessments, if correct, have enormous impact upon the riparian landowners because they affect land titles, acreage owned, qualification for various conservation and price support programs, and ownership of water diversion facilities and other structures that the riparian landowners have constructed for water usage;

(5) the 2008 reassessments were made by simply sending out tax bills without any notice that they were based upon a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds or streambeds and some riparian landowners have paid the first installment of 2008 real property taxes based upon the reassessments without realizing that a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds and streambeds was the basis for the reassessments;

(6) procedural due process requires that if a claim of change in ownership is involved, the state agency involved shall afford the affected property owners both notice of the claim and the opportunity to be heard;

(7) the 2008 real property tax assessments based upon claims of state ownership did not comply with the constitutional requirement for procedural due process and under that circumstance payment by the property owners of taxes based on the reassessment does not constitute acquiesence in the underlying state ownership claim;

(8) The department of revenue is required to provide written notice to the affected property owners of the state's claim of ownership so that the affected property owners have a fair opportunity to be heard and to dispute the government's claim."

WHEREAS, in October 1997, Congress passed legislation providing $65 million to purchase the Crown Butte holdings and authorizing the transfer of $10 million of federal mineral properties or the federal mineral rights to the State of Montana as compensation for the economic opportunity lost to the people of Montana as a result of the Crown Butte agreement; and

WHEREAS, the State of Montana notified Secretary of the Interior Babbitt on February 24, 1999, of the State of Montana's selection of certain mineral tracts; and

WHEREAS, the federal government on April 10, 2002, transferred to the State of Montana the mineral title to certain mineral tracts containing 7,623 acres of federal minerals and 533 million tons of federal coal; and

WHEREAS, the property interests acquired from the federal government in the Crown Butte land exchange are a unique asset of the State of Montana, in that those assets represent a concentrated ownership of state mineral interests, rather than isolated properties; and

WHEREAS, the concentrated state mineral ownership dictates that the state take a proactive approach to the leasing and development of the property interests acquired from the federal government in the Crown Butte land exchange; and

WHEREAS, development of the property interests acquired from the federal government in the Crown Butte land exchange presents a tremendous opportunity to create hundreds of new high quality jobs, generate significant long-term sources of revenue for Montana schools, create additional electrical generation capacity to help meet the growing demand for electricity, and promote associated economic benefits and opportunities; and

WHEREAS, given the proximity of the property interests acquired from the federal government in the Crown Butte land exchange to the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation, the State of Montana should continue to work with the Northern Cheyenne in facilitating the development of the state coal interests acquired from the federal government in the Crown Butte land exchange; and

WHEREAS, the State of Montana recognizes the opportunities to export coal to coal-fueled generating plants in order to address Montana's current flat coal export market and the projected decline in coal severance tax revenue; and

WHEREAS, the State of Montana recognizes the need to develop new sources of electric power for Montana's consumers, industry, state institutions, rural cooperatives, and export to sustain economic stability and growth; and

WHEREAS, the State of Montana and the Northern Cheyenne have worked together and negotiated the Otter Creek Settlement Agreement, and the state recognizes the importance of involving the Northern Cheyenne in cultural resource inventories and assessments; and

WHEREAS, the State of Montana recognizes that developing coal-based electrical generation using the property interests in coal resources acquired from the federal government in the Crown Butte land exchange to serve the long-term power needs of both Montana and the western United States and recognizes that the development of coal-based electrical generation and necessary transmission infrastructure provide the opportunity for other development consistent with Montana's economic development policy."

The Montana Supreme Court made the following determination in the second issue of PPL Montana, LLC v. Montana, 2010 MT 64, 355 M 402, 229 P3d 421, (2010) at ¶ 117: "We reverse the District Court's determination that the riverbeds are school trust lands, and hold instead that they are public trust lands under Article X, Section 11(1) of the Montana Constitution. Although we conclude the riverbeds at issue are not school trust lands, the Land Board is still required to administer these lands in accordance with the trust obligations imposed by Article X, Section 11 of the Montana Constitution. As such, the riverbeds are held "in trust for the people" and shall not "ever be disposed of except in pursuance of general laws providing for such disposition, or until the full market value of the estate or interest disposed of, to be ascertained in such manner as may be provided by law, has been paid or safely secured to the state." Mont. Const. Art. X, §11(2); See Norman v. State, 182 Mont. 439, 444, 597 P.2d 715, 718 (1979)." In PPL Montana, LLC v. State of Montana, 2010 MT 64, the Montana Supreme Court held that the beds of navigable rivers are owned by the state of Montana, but are not school trust lands. Therefore, the contingency occurred.

Case Notes

Navigability for Title Test for Missouri, Clark Fork, and Madison Rivers — Equal Footing Doctrine — State Ownership of Riverbeds: The District Court granted the state's motion for summary judgment on the issue of whether the Missouri, Clark Fork, and Madison Rivers were navigable for determining whether title to the riverbeds resided with the state. The concept of navigability for title means that a river does not have to experience actual use at or before the time of statehood, as long as the river was susceptible of providing a channel for commerce. Commerce is very broadly construed, and emerging and newly discovered forms of commerce can be applied retroactively to considerations of navigability. Thus, present day use of a river may be probative of its status as a navigable river at the time of statehood. Under the navigability for title test, the state has held title to the riverbeds beginning at statehood in 1889, and according to the equal footing doctrine, the disposition, use, and ownership interests in the beds of the rivers in question have been governed by state law since that time. The evidence presented by the state was clearly sufficient to demonstrate navigability in fact, and the state was therefore entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The District Court was affirmed. Chapter Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 480, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, the State of Montana still owns the Montana Territorial Prison, more commonly known as the old Montana State Prison, in the city of Deer Lodge in Powell County, Montana; and

WHEREAS, since at least 1980, the Department of Corrections and Human Services [now Department of Corrections] has leased the old Montana State Prison to the city of Deer Lodge, which has, since 1980, assigned that lease to the Powell County Museum and Arts Foundation; and

WHEREAS, the Powell County Museum and Arts Foundation has maintained the old Montana State Prison as a museum and regional tourist attraction and has expended substantial sums of money for the operation and maintenance of the prison complex, all of which have benefited the prison structure and the economy of the Powell County area and have been made for the education and enjoyment of the public; and

WHEREAS, continued operation of the old Montana State Prison as a museum by the Powell County Museum and Arts Foundation will fulfill a substantial governmental purpose by contributing to the local economies of the city of Deer Lodge and of Powell County and by providing for the care and upkeep of the prison complex without public expense; and

WHEREAS, the city of Deer Lodge, Powell County, the Powell County Museum and Arts Foundation, and the Department of Corrections and Human Services [now Department of Corrections] desire to make the land available to the Foundation for museum purposes; and

WHEREAS, transfer of the prison complex to the Powell County Museum and Arts Foundation will recognize the consideration paid over the years by the Foundation in the form of the expenditure of funds for the maintenance and upkeep of the prison complex."

Disposition of Old Prison: Section 1, Ch. 480, L. 1993, provided: "(1) The department of corrections and human services [now department of corrections] is directed to transfer the interest of the state of Montana in the Montana territorial prison, commonly known as the old Montana state prison, which property is further described in subsection (2), by 99-year lease to the Powell County museum and arts foundation or its successor for operation as a museum. The lease must guarantee the rights of the Montana law enforcement museum that were established in the December 14, 1989, lease between the Powell County museum and arts foundation and the Montana law enforcement museum.

(2) The property is described as all the buildings comprising the Montana state prison complex, which constitutes blocks 52, 53, 61 (lots 5 through 10), 62, 63, 66, 67, and 68 (lots 1 through 10) of the original townsite of the city of Deer Lodge, all situated in the northwest quarter of section 4, township 6 north of the official plat thereof on file at the Powell County courthouse.

(3) The department of corrections and human services [now department of corrections] shall establish appropriate conditions to protect the interests of the state on the transfer of the property, including a provision for reversion should the property cease to be used for museum purposes. The commitment to expend sums of money, the past expenditure of money in the development of the property for use for museum purposes, and the dedication of the property as so developed for public use for the benefit of all Montanans may be considered as a part or all of the consideration necessary to constitute full market value if it is determined that the state cannot transfer the property without obtaining full market value for it.

(4) The provisions of Title 77, chapter 2, part 3, do not apply to the transfer of land directed by this section."

Case Notes

Summary Judgment Holding Board of Land Commissioners' Decision Approving Land Exchange Not Arbitrary, Capricious, or Unlawful Found Improper: The plaintiffs, various environmental groups, sought a preliminary injunction to prevent the exchange of certain properties during the pendency of their lawsuit challenging the action of the Board of Land Commissioners. The District Court denied the injunction and entered a summary judgment in favor of the Board, holding that the Board's decision to make the exchange was based on an adequate consideration of the requirements set forth in subsection (2) of this section and therefore was not arbitrary, capricious, or unlawful. The Supreme Court vacated and remanded the lower court's decision, finding that the plaintiffs had raised genuine issues of material fact, including whether the streams on the land to be given to the state have a significant public use value; whether a "potential to" provide significant public use value is equivalent to providing significant public use value; and the weight, if any, to be accorded an increase in stream mileage. The Supreme Court held that as a result of the material issues of fact raised by the plaintiffs, a material issue of fact also existed as to whether the Board's decision approving the proposed land exchange was arbitrary, capricious, or unlawful. No person shall be qualified to purchase state land who has not reached the age of 18 years. As far as possible to determine, the lands shall be sold only to actual settlers or to persons who will improve the same and not to persons who are likely to hold such lands for speculative purposes intending to resell the same at a higher price without having added anything to their value.

(2) State lands may be sold to any sovereign state of the United States or to any board of trustees or public corporation or agency of such state created by such state as an agency or political subdivision thereof. Said lands may be purchased in the quantities set forth in 77-2-307 for use by such state, board of trustees, public corporation, agency, or political subdivision for educational or scientific purposes.

Case Notes

Sale to Public Agencies: This section makes it possible for property to be sold to a public corporation or political subdivision, but nothing in the section permits the Board of Land Commissioners to restrict the sale to any such corporation or subdivision. 77-2-308. Approval or disapproval of sales.

Case Notes

Reason for Disapproval: Where the state Board of Land Commissioners rejected all bids and ordered another sale in order that lessee of state-owned armory building might meet the highest bid and be given preference of purchase, it was not required by this section that the Board set forth in their minutes why the original sale was disadvantageous to the state. State ex rel. Werner v. District Court, 142 M 145, 382 P2d 824 (1963).

Rejection of Sale: The Board of Land Commissioners was warranted in rejecting the sale of state land and in causing the property sold to petitioner to again be advertised for public auction where it was shown that competitive bidding was stifled and that the person who asked for the sale was erroneously notified as to the time for the holding of the sale. Because of this, the full market value of the land had not been obtained. State ex rel. Robbins v. Bonner, 128 M 45, 270 P2d 400 (1954).

1991 Amendment: Substituted (2) regarding when balance of purchase price is due for former (2) that read: "(2) The balance of the purchase price shall draw interest at the rate set by the board, but in no instance shall the rate be less than 5% per year, payable annually, and the balance of the purchase price itself shall be payable through a period of 33 years on the amortization plan. This plan is defined as being that plan under which part of the principal is required to be paid each time interest becomes due and payable and under which this part payment on the principal increases at each succeeding installment in the same amount that the interest payment decreases so that the combined amount due on principal and interest on each due date remains the same until the loan or bond is paid in full. However, the amount of the last installment may vary from the other installments to the extent resulting from disregarding fractional cents in the previous installments. The balance of the purchase price on town and city lots shall be payable on the amortization plan through a period of 20 years, but the board may at any time fix a shorter period than 20 years for the payment of the balance on town and city lots. Different periods of time may be established for different towns and cities as the best interests of the state demand. The board shall annually review the interest rate prior to December 31 of each year and may review the interest rate at any time the board determines such review is necessary. The interest rate fixed by the board applies to all contracts entered into until the board fixes a different interest rate".

1987 Amendment: Near end of (2) substituted clause allowing Board to review rate when necessary and last sentence allowing application of fixed rate to contracts entered into until Board fixes different rate for "fix the interest rate for all contracts to be entered into during the succeeding year".

Time for Exercise of Preferential Right to Renew: Since this section giving original lessee of mineral interest in state land preferential right to renew does not say when prior lessee shall exercise his right of preference, the matter of fixing the time is left open for action by the state Board of Land Commissioners. State ex rel. Handel Oil Co. v. St., 118 M 465, 167 P2d 844 (1946).

Loss of Preferential Right to Renew: Prior lessee of state oil lands lost its preferential right to renew lease when lessee's representatives who were present at the bidding on the land declined to make any decision as to whether lessee would match highest bid. Prior lessee made no effort to renew the lease until a personal check equal in amount to the bid of the highest bidder was presented at the Board of Land Commissioners' meeting 8 days later. Administrative Rules

ARM 36.25.215 Pooling agreements and unit agreements.

Case Notes

Constitutionality: The provisions of this section authorizing pooling agreements covering private and state school lands do not violate sec. 11 of The Enabling Act or Art. XVII, sec. 2, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. X, sec. 11, 1972 Mont. Const.). Section 11 of The Enabling Act has application only where the land as a whole is sold, and not where merely an interest or estate therein is disposed of. Provision in lease as to free use of gas by lessee in development work was not a donation under Art. XIII, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const. Toomey v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 106 M 547, 81 P2d 407 (1938).

Inclusion of Entire Geologic Structure Not Required: A pooling agreement authorized by this section is not required to include the entire geologic structure in such agreement. Toomey v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 106 M 547, 81 P2d 407 (1938).

Natural Gas as Ferae Naturae — No Ownership in Situ: The natural gas underlying state and other lands included in a proposed pooling agreement is considered ferae naturae and may be reduced to ownership by the party who captures it. It is highly fugitive in character, and a well drilled on either class of lands may drain the gas from land surrounding it. There is no actual ownership of gas in situ. Toomey v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 106 M 547, 81 P2d 407 (1938).

Protection of Interest of State: An arrangement whereby the state will share in all the natural gas brought to the surface on a certain unified area in proportion to the acreage owned by the state in that area fully protects the rights of the state in securing to it its full share of the gas underlying its lands. Toomey v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 106 M 547, 81 P2d 407 (1938).

Purpose of Pooling Agreements: The purpose of agreements for the pooling of acreage for unit operations for the production of oil or gas is to conserve the natural resources of an oil or gas area, to promote its development in an orderly and economical manner to meet market conditions, to avoid waste, and to ensure a more equitable distribution of the proceeds of production. Toomey v. St. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 106 M 547, 81 P2d 407 (1938).

1987 Amendment: At end of section inserted last sentence permitting state to share expenses of transporting oil to market in proportion to its royalty interest.

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 136, L. 1987, provided: "Section 1 [77-3-432] is applicable to state oil and gas leases existing on [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1987] and to state oil and gas leases entered into after [the effective date of this act] [October 1, 1987]; however, transportation charges paid before [the effective date] [October 1, 1987] shall not be refunded."

Administrative Rules

ARM 36.25.210 Royalties.

Case Notes

Royalty Rate: When oil lands are leased on a royalty basis with a cash bonus, the bonus constitutes rental for an estate or interest in the land. In leasing oil lands, the Legislature is under obligation to obtain the full market value of the estate or interest disposed of on a rental basis, as well as for the sale of the land itself. Compiler's Comments 1985 Amendment: In (4) after "credited", substituted "to the state general fund unless other disposition is provided by law" for "one-half to the state general fund and one-half to the state permanent revenue fund".

Case Notes

Royalties and Bonuses: The "royalties and bonuses" mentioned in this section are the same royalties and bonuses mentioned in 77-3-432 through 77-3-434 (formerly section 81-1704, R.C.M. 1947) and they become available only as and when the oil is produced and after "such oil . . . is run into any pipeline or storage tank to the credit of the lessee" (77-3-434). Thus the amount bid per acre for a lease, in excess of the minimum annual rental per acre, is not such a bonus but is part of the rental and is placed in the common School Interest and Income Fund to be apportioned and distributed annually to the several school districts as provided in Art. XI, sec. 5, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. X, sec. 2, 1972 Mont. Const.). State ex rel. Dickgraber v. Sheridan, 126 M 447, 254 P2d 390 (1953). 2009 Amendment: Chapter 472 in (1) at end of first sentence inserted "and the structures described in 77-1-134"; in (3) at beginning of first sentence and at beginning of third sentence inserted exception clauses; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 6, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has asserted regulatory jurisdiction over the beds of various rivers and streams based on the premise that the streams are navigable and that the state therefore owns the riverbeds and streambeds; and

WHEREAS, very few Montana rivers or streams have been adjudicated as navigable, either in whole or in part; and

WHEREAS, it is not economically feasible for either the Department of Revenue or the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to obtain judicial determinations of riverbed or streambed ownership by statewide quiet title actions, yet that ownership determination may not be made legally by unilateral administrative decisions; and

WHEREAS, if the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation wishes to assert regulatory control over the bed of a river or stream that has not been adjudicated to be navigable and was not determined navigable at the time of the original federal government surveys of the public land as evidenced by the recorded and monumented surveys of the meander lines of the river, it is required to provide written notice of the claim of state ownership to the affected property owners; and

WHEREAS, because the present claims of state ownership of riverbeds and streambeds is contrary to longstanding administrative practice and because the test for navigability depends upon evidence concerning the log floating capability of a stream at the time of statehood, there is no presumption of correctness attached to a navigability claim made by any state agency."

Legislative Findings: Section 1, Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "The legislature finds that:

(1) for 120 years since the admission of Montana as a state in 1889, the department of revenue and its predecessor agencies have taxed some landowners whose property abuts a river or stream on the assumption that those riparian landowners owned the property to the middle of the river or stream;

(2) in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544 (1981), the United States supreme court recognized that if a river or stream is not navigable, the abutting riparian landowners own the land in the bed of the stream to the middle of the stream, but if a river or stream is navigable, the state owns the bed of the river or stream, having acquired ownership from the United States when the state was admitted to the union, and therefore Montana owns the bed of the Bighorn River where it flows through the Crow reservation;

(3) for the purpose of determining the ownership of a riverbed or streambed, the test of navigability is whether logs could be floated in the stream at the time of statehood as stated in Montana Coalition for Stream Access v. Curran, 210 Mont. 38, 682 P.2d 163 (1984), based upon The Montello, 87 U.S. 430 (1874), Sierra Pacific Power Co. v. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 681 F.2d 1134 (9th Cir. 1982), and State of Oregon v. Riverfront Protection Association, 672 F.2d 792 (9th Cir. 1982);

(4) beginning with tax assessments that were effective January 1, 2008, the lien date for real property taxes, the department of revenue reassessed the property of riparian landowners whose land abuts various rivers and streams by reducing the amount of land assessed based upon the premise that the landowners did not own to the middle of the river or stream because the river or stream was navigable and these reassessments, if correct, have enormous impact upon the riparian landowners because they affect land titles, acreage owned, qualification for various conservation and price support programs, and ownership of water diversion facilities and other structures that the riparian landowners have constructed for water usage;

(5) the 2008 reassessments were made by simply sending out tax bills without any notice that they were based upon a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds or streambeds and some riparian landowners have paid the first installment of 2008 real property taxes based upon the reassessments without realizing that a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds and streambeds was the basis for the reassessments;

(6) procedural due process requires that if a claim of change in ownership is involved, the state agency involved shall afford the affected property owners both notice of the claim and the opportunity to be heard;

(7) the 2008 real property tax assessments based upon claims of state ownership did not comply with the constitutional requirement for procedural due process and under that circumstance payment by the property owners of taxes based on the reassessment does not constitute acquiesence in the underlying state ownership claim;

(8) The department of revenue is required to provide written notice to the affected property owners of the state's claim of ownership so that the affected property owners have a fair opportunity to be heard and to dispute the government's claim."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 34 in (2), in first sentence after "the succeeding lessee or", inserted "if there is no succeeding lessee" and after "state" deleted "as the case may be" and inserted second sentence regarding departmental appointment of an appraiser; in (3), at beginning of first sentence, inserted "Unless the department gives written authorization", after "may" inserted "not", and at end deleted "until the value of the casing, equipment, and apparatus which the succeeding lessee or the state desires to have left upon the premises is fixed in the manner provided in this section and has been paid to him in cash"; and made minor changes in style. The legislature intends that the rules be written broadly to cover all information that would legitimately be considered confidential by lessees, including, as appropriate, mineral quality and quantity, mineral location, mineral depth, cost of production, and the extent of the reserves. This information may include economic or engineering data. The legislature also intends that the rules establish a procedure whereby the lessee may notify the department of state lands [now department of natural resources and conservation] of information it considers to be confidential and to be notified whether the department agrees before the lessee submits the information. Furthermore, the legislature intends that the rules include a process to protect the lessee's interests if the department considers declassification of the information at a future date."

Part 2
Hydroelectric Resources

Navigability for Title Test for Missouri, Clark Fork, and Madison Rivers — Equal Footing Doctrine — State Ownership of Riverbeds: The District Court granted the state's motion for summary judgment on the issue of whether the Missouri, Clark Fork, and Madison Rivers were navigable for determining whether title to the riverbeds resided with the state. The concept of navigability for title means that a river does not have to experience actual use at or before the time of statehood, as long as the river was susceptible of providing a channel for commerce. Commerce is very broadly construed, and emerging and newly discovered forms of commerce can be applied retroactively to considerations of navigability. Thus, present day use of a river may be probative of its status as a navigable river at the time of statehood. Under the navigability for title test, the state has held title to the riverbeds beginning at statehood in 1889, and according to the equal footing doctrine, the disposition, use, and ownership interests in the beds of the rivers in question have been governed by state law since that time. The evidence presented by the state was clearly sufficient to demonstrate navigability in fact, and the state was therefore entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The District Court was affirmed. PPL Mont., LLC v. St., 2010 MT 64, 355 Mont. 402, 229 P.3d 421, following The Montello, 87 US 430 (1874), and U.S. v. Utah, 283 US 64 (1931). See also Alaska v. Ahtna, 891 F2d 1401 (9th Cir. 1989).

No Right of Hydroelectric Facility to Make Free Appropriation of Water on State-Owned Land: A hydroelectric facility does not have the right to make free appropriation of water on and within state-owned land without paying compensation to the state. PPL Mont., LLC v. St., 2010 MT 64, 355 Mont. 402, 229 P.3d 421, distinguishing Smith v. Deniff, 24 Mont. 20, 60 P 398 (1900), U.S. v. Conrad Invest. Co., 156 F 123 (D.C. Mont. 1907), and Mattson v. Following the Montana Supreme Court's decision, PPL appealed to the United States Supreme Court. The United States Supreme Court reversed the Montana court's ruling, holding that the Montana court had not properly considered the rivers in question on a segment-by-segment basis and had not determined whether they were navigable in fact at the time of statehood. The United States Supreme Court remanded the case for proceedings consistent with its opinion. PPL Montana, LLC v. Montana, 565 US __, 132 S Ct 1215, 182 L Ed 2d 77 (2012).

State Allowed Compensation for Hydroelectric Use of Riverbeds — No Preemption by Federal Law: Plaintiff PPL sought a declaratory judgment that the state was precluded from seeking compensation for the use of riverbeds at PPL's federally licensed hydroelectric dams on the Missouri, Clark Fork, and Madison Rivers. PPL asserted that the state law regulating the use of riverbeds was preempted by federal law and by the federal navigational servitude, which is the power of the U.S. Congress to ensure that navigable rivers remain open to interstate and foreign commerce. The state denied that federal law or the servitude preempted the state Hydroelectric Resources Act (HRA), Title 77, ch. 4, part 2, and counterclaimed for compensation for PPL's past and ongoing use of state riverbeds, as well as damages under theories of uncompensated use of state land, unjust enrichment, trespass, and negligence. The District Court agreed with the state, holding that the Federal Power Act (FPA) recognized the property rights of parties whose land is affected by federally licensed hydroelectric projects and specifically prohibits the use of private property without compensation, so the state was allowed to seek compensation. The court also concluded that the FPA explicitly permits the operation of state law regarding proprietary rights affected by a federally licensed facility, so the HRA was not preempted by the FPA. Proper Application of Profitability Method of Determining Fair Market Value of Hydroelectric Facility's Damages Owed to State for Past Use of State-Owned Riverbeds — Future Lease Terms Left to Board of Land Commissioners: After holding that the state was entitled to compensation for use of state-owned riverbeds by plaintiff hydroelectric utility, the District Court applied a profitability methodology to determine the productive value of the land in order to arrive at a fair market value for plaintiff's use of the riverbeds. Plaintiff contested the methodology, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The state uses productive value of the land in determining lease rates, and nothing in Montana law barred an award of damages based on plaintiff's profits, so income-based leasing was an appropriate method to calculate past damages in this case. Use of the Hydroelectric Resources Act (HRA), Title 77, ch. 4, part 2, was a proper mechanism to assess past damages, and the District Court's findings in support of the award were not clearly erroneous. The District Court also correctly left to the discretion of the Board of Land Commissioners the terms of any future lease with plaintiff and properly held that the Board was not bound by the same method used to calculate past damages in developing future lease terms. PPL Mont., LLC v. St., 2010 MT 64, 355 Mont. 402, 229 P.3d 421, following State ex rel. Thompson v. Babcock, 147 Mont. 46, 409 P.2d 808 (1966).

Timber Sales and Removal

Part Case Notes

Failure to Distinguish Between Commercially Valuable and Nonvaluable Timber as Firewood on State Lands Violative of Trust Duty of Undivided Loyalty: Pursuant to 77-5-211 (now repealed), the state discretionarily issued free permits for the gathering of dead, down, or inferior wood from school trust lands for use as firewood. The District Court concluded that 77-5-211 (now repealed) authorized the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to act in violation of the school trust by allowing the Department to give away commercially valuable timber, in violation of its trust duty of undivided loyalty. The state argued on appeal that the District Court's conclusions were incorrect because the Department retained discretion to issue permits and because plaintiff failed to show that dead wood had commercial value in all instances. The Supreme Court affirmed, citing Wild W. Motors, Inc. v. Lingle, 224 M 76, 728 P2d 412, 43 St. Rep. 2030 (1986), in considering the state's duty of undivided loyalty as trustee of school trust lands, noting that a trustee must act with the utmost good faith toward the beneficiary and may not act in the trustee's own interest or in the interest of a third party. In failing to distinguish between commercially valuable timber and timber that lacks commercial value, the statute allows the Department to issue permits to third parties without charging them for any commercially valuable wood that they collect, violating both the mandate that full market value be obtained for school trust lands and the state's trust duty of undivided loyalty. Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999).

Case Notes

Failure to Include Adequate Cumulative Impacts Analysis — Insufficient Environmental Impact Statement: The District Court held that the environmental impact statement (EIS) prepared for the Middle Soup Creek logging project was insufficient because it did not adequately analyze and discuss the cumulative impacts of the project in accordance with the definitions of cumulative impact and human environment in ARM 36.2.522 or include discussion of reconciliation of the proposed project with the state forest land management plan (SFLMP). The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) argued on appeal that the court failed to comprehend that a new course filter ecological analysis took into account all of the prevailing conditions of the affected lands and therefore incorporated a cumulative effects analysis into the EIS. The DNRC also contended that even though ARM 36.2.529 requires a cumulative impacts analysis, the rule does not dictate a particular methodology. The Supreme Court disagreed. ARM 36.2.529 clearly states that the EIS must contain a description of the cumulative impacts and does not allow a mere analysis implicit within the EIS. The public is not benefited by reviewing an EIS that does not explicitly set forth the actual cumulative impacts analysis and the facts that form the basis for the analysis. Further, ARM 36.2.524 requires consideration of potential conflicts with formal plans, such as the SFLMP. Here, the EIS discussed old growth and fragmentation as concerns, but did not discuss the SFLMP objective to preserve old growth, reduce fragmentation, and protect unique habitat. The District Court did not err when it held that the DNRC violated MEPA as a result of its failure to include an adequate cumulative impacts analysis in the EIS. Friends of the Wild Swan v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2000 MT 209, 301 M 1, 6 P3d 972, 57 St. Rep. 816 (2000).

Substantial Economic Change as Basis for Supplemental EIS: The District Court held that a supplemental environmental impact statement (EIS) was required for the Middle Soup Creek logging project in light of changed economic circumstances of the sale. The sale was originally proposed as a revenue source for the school trust, before revenue reestimation revealed that the sale would actually cost the state about $150,000. The state contended that a supplemental EIS was not required absent proof that a reduction in the total timber sale revenue would result in physical impact to the environment, arguing that ARM 36.2.522 does not compel preparation of a supplemental EIS based on economic impacts alone. The Supreme Court disagreed, noting that nothing in ARM 36.2.533 requires that a substantial change must result in additional environmental impact before a supplemental EIS is required, nor is there a limitation on what may be considered a substantial change. Thus, a substantial economic change in a project can serve as the basis for requiring a supplemental EIS. Here, a timber sale that would ultimately cost the state money rather than raise revenue as originally anticipated was considered a substantial change sufficient to warrant a supplemental EIS, and the state erred in not preparing one. Part 3
Streamside Management Zones

Part Compiler's Comments

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 608, L. 1991, provided: "It is the intent of the legislature that the streamside management zone be an area of closely managed activity, but not a zone where timber harvest is excluded. Timber harvest activities must be managed within the zone to achieve objectives relating to water quality, beneficial water uses, management of wildlife habitat, and the long-term stability of the stream system, in addition to timber harvest objectives.

It is the intent of the legislature that the department of state lands [now department of natural resources and conservation] adopt rules to implement the management standards provided for in [section 3] [77-5-303] as enforceable standards for streamside management zones. These standards are to be coordinated with the objectives and guidelines contained in the existing system of voluntary best management practices, which will still guide forest practices outside of the streamside management zone. The department shall adopt rules governing the harvest of timber in streamside management zones to ensure the retention of merchantable and submerchantable timber necessary to maintain the integrity of the streamside management zone. The department shall also adopt rules under which owners and operators may receive approval for alternative practices for the standards provided in [section 3] [77-5-303].

It is the intent of the legislature that the department develop voluntary, nonenforceable guidelines concerning the selection and retention of trees and vegetation, including snags, for wildlife habitat within the streamside management zone.

It is the intent of the legislature that the department establish an interdisciplinary technical committee to assist the department in adopting rules, developing voluntary guidelines for the management of wildlife habitat, and monitoring the implementation of this bill. The members of the committee should have technical knowledge or expertise in water quality, wildlife management, or forest management and include representatives from the U.S. forest service; U.S. bureau of land management; the Montana departments of health and environmental sciences [now department of environmental quality] and fish, wildlife, and parks; conservation districts; the Montana state university [now Montana state university-Bozeman] extension forestry program; the Montana forest and conservation experiment station; the forest products industry; and the conservation community.

To the extent practical, the department should conduct onsite consultations under [section 4] [77-5-304] in conjunction with consultations or inspections conducted pursuant to Title 76, chapter 13, parts 1 and 4. It is also the intent of the legislature that whenever department personnel in the field notice a probable water quality or 310 permit violation that they notify the appropriate authority.

It is the intent of the legislature that the department, with the assistance of the technical committee, evaluate the implementation of this bill, develop recommendations to address problems, if any, that arise, and report its findings and recommendations to the environmental quality council.

Finally, the legislature recognizes that appropriate limitations on activities in streamside zones, which comprise only a very small percentage of Montana forests, can achieve substantial watershed and wildlife benefits."

Chapter Administrative Rules

Title 36, chapter 25, subchapter 1, ARM Surface management rules.

Chapter Case Notes

School Trust Land Water Rights Owned by State: In a case involving a dispute over ownership of water rights on state school trust lands, the Supreme Court ruled that title to the surface and ground water rights on school trust lands vests in the state and that the lessee, in making appropriations on and for school trust sections, is acting on behalf of the state. It is only through state action that the lessee is on the land, and Montana law expressly provides that the lessee must be reimbursed for all capital expenditures made in putting the water to beneficial use. The state is the beneficial user of the water, and its duty as trustee of the school trust lands prohibits it from alienating any interest in the land without receiving full compensation for it or from giving up control over the water rights. No Proscription That Previously Canceled Lessee May Not Bid or May Not Lease State Lands — Written Findings Required When High Bid Rejected: Winchell's state land lease was canceled for gross mismanagement of the leased property. The lease was subsequently reclassified and advertised for bids, and Winchell submitted the high bid. Rather than make written findings as to why the bid was not in the best interests of the state, the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) relied on ARM 26.3.142(6) (now 36.25.115) to dismiss Winchell's bid out-of-hand. This administrative rule, which purports to give the Department the ability to refuse to even consider a bid, is in derogation of law because there is no statutory proscription disallowing the bid or ability to lease of a person whose lease has been previously canceled. Absent written findings that the high bid was too high for community standards, would cause damage to the land, or would impair long-term productivity, the automatic refusal to consider the bid, based on an overbroad and unlawful administrative regulation, was in excess of the Department's jurisdiction and an abuse of its discretion. Winchell v. Dept. of State Lands, 262 M 328, 865 P2d 249, 50 St. Rep. 1580 (1993).

Unincorporated Association Not Considered Legal Entity Capable of Having Title to Real Property — Lease of State Land Precluded: Montana recognizes two types of associations as legal entities: cooperative associations and agricultural associations. Both of these entities have the statutory authorization to hold real property interests. However, at common law, an unincorporated association is not considered a legal entity capable of acquiring or holding title to real property in the association's name. Therefore, an unincorporated association may not lease state lands in its own name. Winchell v. Dept. of State Lands, 262 M 328, 865 P2d 249, 50 St. Rep. 1580 (1993). See also Edwards v. 2009 Amendment: Chapter 472 inserted (3) concerning right of property owner to control weeds on land adjacent to a navigable river or stream; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 6, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has asserted regulatory jurisdiction over the beds of various rivers and streams based on the premise that the streams are navigable and that the state therefore owns the riverbeds and streambeds; and

WHEREAS, very few Montana rivers or streams have been adjudicated as navigable, either in whole or in part; and

WHEREAS, it is not economically feasible for either the Department of Revenue or the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to obtain judicial determinations of riverbed or streambed ownership by statewide quiet title actions, yet that ownership determination may not be made legally by unilateral administrative decisions; and

WHEREAS, if the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation wishes to assert regulatory control over the bed of a river or stream that has not been adjudicated to be navigable and was not determined navigable at the time of the original federal government surveys of the public land as evidenced by the recorded and monumented surveys of the meander lines of the river, it is required to provide written notice of the claim of state ownership to the affected property owners; and

WHEREAS, because the present claims of state ownership of riverbeds and streambeds is contrary to longstanding administrative practice and because the test for navigability depends upon evidence concerning the log floating capability of a stream at the time of statehood, there is no presumption of correctness attached to a navigability claim made by any state agency."

Legislative Findings: Section 1, Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "The legislature finds that:

(1) for 120 years since the admission of Montana as a state in 1889, the department of revenue and its predecessor agencies have taxed some landowners whose property abuts a river or stream on the assumption that those riparian landowners owned the property to the middle of the river or stream;

(2) in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544 (1981), the United States supreme court recognized that if a river or stream is not navigable, the abutting riparian landowners own the land in the bed of the stream to the middle of the stream, but if a river or stream is navigable, the state owns the bed of the river or stream, having acquired ownership from the United States when the state was admitted to the union, and therefore Montana owns the bed of the Bighorn River where it flows through the Crow reservation;

(3) for the purpose of determining the ownership of a riverbed or streambed, the test of navigability is whether logs could be floated in the stream at the time of statehood as stated in Montana Coalition for Stream Access v. Curran, 210 Mont. 38, 682 P.2d 163 (1984), based upon The Montello, 87 U.S. 430 (1874), Sierra Pacific Power Co. v. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 681 F.2d 1134 (9th Cir. 1982), and State of Oregon v. Riverfront Protection Association, 672 F.2d 792 (9th Cir. 1982);

(4) beginning with tax assessments that were effective January 1, 2008, the lien date for real property taxes, the department of revenue reassessed the property of riparian landowners whose land abuts various rivers and streams by reducing the amount of land assessed based upon the premise that the landowners did not own to the middle of the river or stream because the river or stream was navigable and these reassessments, if correct, have enormous impact upon the riparian landowners because they affect land titles, acreage owned, qualification for various conservation and price support programs, and ownership of water diversion facilities and other structures that the riparian landowners have constructed for water usage;

(5) the 2008 reassessments were made by simply sending out tax bills without any notice that they were based upon a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds or streambeds and some riparian landowners have paid the first installment of 2008 real property taxes based upon the reassessments without realizing that a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds and streambeds was the basis for the reassessments;

(6) procedural due process requires that if a claim of change in ownership is involved, the state agency involved shall afford the affected property owners both notice of the claim and the opportunity to be heard;

Lease Canceled Due to Overgrazing: The plaintiffs had a land lease with the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation). The Supreme Court held that there was sufficient evidence of overgrazing that mandated the cancellation of the lease and that the cancellation was necessary to do justice to all parties concerned and to protect the interests of the state. 2009 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Chapter 472 in (1) at beginning of first sentence and in (2) at beginning inserted "Subject to subsection (4)"; inserted (4) providing that a water right acquired under this section may not interfere with a water right used in conjunction with a structure described in 77-1-134; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 6, 2009.

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose appropriate text.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has asserted regulatory jurisdiction over the beds of various rivers and streams based on the premise that the streams are navigable and that the state therefore owns the riverbeds and streambeds; and

WHEREAS, very few Montana rivers or streams have been adjudicated as navigable, either in whole or in part; and

WHEREAS, it is not economically feasible for either the Department of Revenue or the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to obtain judicial determinations of riverbed or streambed ownership by statewide quiet title actions, yet that ownership determination may not be made legally by unilateral administrative decisions; and

WHEREAS, if the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation wishes to assert regulatory control over the bed of a river or stream that has not been adjudicated to be navigable and was not determined navigable at the time of the original federal government surveys of the public land as evidenced by the recorded and monumented surveys of the meander lines of the river, it is required to provide written notice of the claim of state ownership to the affected property owners; and

WHEREAS, because the present claims of state ownership of riverbeds and streambeds is contrary to longstanding administrative practice and because the test for navigability depends upon evidence concerning the log floating capability of a stream at the time of statehood, there is no presumption of correctness attached to a navigability claim made by any state agency."

Legislative Findings: Section 1, Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "The legislature finds that:

(1) for 120 years since the admission of Montana as a state in 1889, the department of revenue and its predecessor agencies have taxed some landowners whose property abuts a river or stream on the assumption that those riparian landowners owned the property to the middle of the river or stream;

(2) in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544 (1981), the United States supreme court recognized that if a river or stream is not navigable, the abutting riparian landowners own the land in the bed of the stream to the middle of the stream, but if a river or stream is navigable, the state owns the bed of the river or stream, having acquired ownership from the United States when the state was admitted to the union, and therefore Montana owns the bed of the Bighorn River where it flows through the Crow reservation;

(3) for the purpose of determining the ownership of a riverbed or streambed, the test of navigability is whether logs could be floated in the stream at the time of statehood as stated in Montana Coalition for Stream Access v. Curran, 210 Mont. 38, 682 P.2d 163 (1984), based upon The Montello, 87 U.S. 430 (1874), Sierra Pacific Power Co. v. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 681 F.2d 1134 (9th Cir. 1982), and State of Oregon v. Riverfront Protection Association, 672 F.2d 792 (9th Cir. 1982);

(4) beginning with tax assessments that were effective January 1, 2008, the lien date for real property taxes, the department of revenue reassessed the property of riparian landowners whose land abuts various rivers and streams by reducing the amount of land assessed based upon the premise that the landowners did not own to the middle of the river or stream because the river or stream was navigable and these reassessments, if correct, have enormous impact upon the riparian landowners because they affect land titles, acreage owned, qualification for various conservation and price support programs, and ownership of water diversion facilities and other structures that the riparian landowners have constructed for water usage;

(5) the 2008 reassessments were made by simply sending out tax bills without any notice that they were based upon a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds or streambeds and some riparian landowners have paid the first installment of 2008 real property taxes based upon the reassessments without realizing that a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds and streambeds was the basis for the reassessments;

(6) procedural due process requires that if a claim of change in ownership is involved, the state agency involved shall afford the affected property owners both notice of the claim and the opportunity to be heard;

(7) the 2008 real property tax assessments based upon claims of state ownership did not comply with the constitutional requirement for procedural due process and under that circumstance payment by the property owners of taxes based on the reassessment does not constitute acquiesence in the underlying state ownership claim;

(8) The department of revenue is required to provide written notice to the affected property owners of the state's claim of ownership so that the affected property owners have a fair opportunity to be heard and to dispute the government's claim."

ARM 36.25.134 Water rights.

Case Notes

No Implied Severance of Water From School Trust Lands: Neither this section, nor the principles of the Water Use Act set forth in 85-2-101, nor the prior appropriation doctrine gives rise to an implied severance of water from land in the school trust land leases or estops the state from claiming title to the water rights on school trust land. Dept. of State Lands v. Pettibone, 216 M 361, 702 P2d 948, 42 St. Rep. 869 (1985).

School Trust Land Water Rights Owned by State: In a case involving a dispute over ownership of water rights on state school trust lands, the Supreme Court ruled that title to the surface and ground water rights on school trust lands vests in the state and that the lessee, in making appropriations on and for school trust sections, is acting on behalf of the state. It is only through state action that the lessee is on the land, and Montana law expressly provides that the lessee must be reimbursed for all capital expenditures made in putting the water to beneficial use. The state is the beneficial user of the water, and its duty as trustee of the school trust lands prohibits it from alienating any interest in the land without receiving full compensation for it or from giving up control over the water rights. Dept. of State Lands v. Pettibone, 216 M 361, 702 P2d 948, 42 St. Rep. 869 (1985).

Allowance of Change in Grazing Permit Not Ministerial Act — EIS Required: Shoberg transferred his grazing permit to Madden, and Madden changed from grazing cattle to grazing sheep. The Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) allowed the grazing of sheep to continue, notwithstanding that the Department had information indicating that the grazing of sheep would adversely impact upon bighorn sheep reintroduced into the area. The plaintiffs brought an action to require the completion of an environmental impact statement (EIS). The Supreme Court held that an EIS was required because the Department was allowing an action, grazing of sheep, to go forward that could have a significant effect upon the quality of the human environment, notwithstanding statutes requiring the Department to protect the best interests of the state, including consideration of consequences to environment and wildlife. Ravalli County Fish & Game Ass'n, Inc. v. Dept. of State Lands, 273 M 371, 903 P2d 1362, 52 St. Rep. 996 (1995).

Market Value of State Land Rights-of-Way Set by Statute at 1972 Levels — Unconstitutionality: The plain language of 77-1-130 requires that full market valuations of right-of-way acreage for historic deeds on state trust lands be based on the median values for the classifications of land at 1972 levels, leaving the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation no choice but to use those levels instead of current market value. The state argued that pursuant to 40 A.G. Op. 24 (1983), the figures in 77-1-130 are merely a minimum above which the Department may charge full market value. However, the statutory language is mandatory rather than discretionary and violates the provisions of the Montana Constitution and The Enabling Act, which require the state to receive full market value for school trust lands, and thus is unconstitutional. Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999).

No Proscription That Previously Canceled Lessee May Not Bid or May Not Lease State Lands — Written Findings Required When High Bid Rejected: Winchell's state land lease was canceled for gross mismanagement of the leased property. The lease was subsequently reclassified and advertised for bids, and Winchell submitted the high bid. Rather than make written findings as to why the bid was not in the best interests of the state, the Department of State Lands (now department of natural resources and conservation) relied on ARM 26.3.142(6) (now 36.25.115) to dismiss Winchell's bid out-of-hand. This administrative rule, which purports to give the Department the ability to refuse to even consider a bid, is in derogation of law because there is no statutory proscription disallowing the bid or ability to lease of a person whose lease has been previously canceled. Absent written findings that the high bid was too high for community standards, would cause damage to the land, or would impair long-term productivity, the automatic refusal to consider the bid, based on an overbroad and unlawful administrative regulation, was in excess of the Department's jurisdiction and an abuse of its discretion. Winchell v. Dept. of State Lands, 262 M 328, 865 P2d 249, 50 St. Rep. 1580 (1993).

Grazing District — Preference Right Denied to Sublessor: A preference right under 77-6-205 allows a lessee contracting with the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) to renew his lease by meeting the high bid of other applicants upon expiration of his lease. However, this preference right was held unconstitutionally applied when exercised by a grazing district which did not use the land itself but instead subleased to whomever it wished. The only way full market value can be obtained in such a situation is by pure competitive bidding. Jerke v. Dept. of St. Lands, 182 M 294, 597 P2d 49 (1979).

1985 Amendment: Near end of second sentence of (2) inserted "bona fide" before "bidders", inserted last two sentences of (2) providing for forfeiture of bid deposits in some cases; in (3), after "forfeited", deleted "and deposited by the department to the credit of the proper interest and income account in the agency fund"; and inserted (4) providing for crediting of forfeited deposits to the proper trust.

Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1991 Amendment: At end of third sentence of (2), after "best interest", deleted "and must be accompanied by a deposit equal to 20% of the competitive bid in the case of grazing lands and $1 per acre in the case of agricultural lands"; and made minor changes in style.

1989 Amendment: In first sentence of (1), after "state", inserted "or who has voluntarily terminated a lease under 77-6-116" and in two places inserted "or within 30 days following voluntary termination"; inserted (4) relating to voluntary termination of leases under 77-6-116; and made minor change in phraseology. Case Notes

State Land Cabin Site Renewal Policy Not Violative of Obligation to Obtain Full Market Value: Plaintiff contended that 77-1-208 is facially invalid because the use of a cabin site renewal policy that did not employ competitive bidding was calculated to keep cabin site rental rates below full market value. However, nothing in the plain language of 77-1-208 abrogates the mandate that full market value be obtained for school trust lands. Plaintiff failed to show that the statute violates the duty of undivided loyalty or that the preference accorded lessees on cabin site leases on state lands resulted in renewal rates below market value. The statute legislatively establishes a method by which full market value is obtained, which is allowed pursuant to Jerke v. Dept. of State Lands, 182 M 294, 597 P2d 49 (1979), but the language of 77-1-208 nevertheless requires that full market value be obtained, by whatever method is used, and therefore on its face does not violate the trust. Thus, the District Court correctly held that the renewal preference in 77-1-208 does not violate the school trust requirements of the Montana Constitution or The Enabling Act of 1889. Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999).

State Land Cabin Site Rental Policy Violative of School Trust Obligation to Obtain Fair Market Value: The policy employed by the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation in renting cabin sites on state lands, in a manner that resulted in below-market rentals, violated the state's school trust obligations under the Montana Constitution and The Enabling Act of 1889, even though 77-1-208 is facially valid because it requires that full market value be obtained. Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999), following State ex rel. Thompson v. Babcock, 147 M 46, 409 P2d 808 (1966), and Jerke v. Dept. of State Lands, 182 M 294, 597 P2d 49 (1979).

Ravalli County Fish & Game Ass'n, Inc. v. Dept. of State Lands, 273 M 371, 903 P2d 1362, 52 St. Rep. 996 (1995).

No Obligation of State to Third Parties in Lease of State Lands: Plaintiffs sued the state for negligence based on the Department of State Lands' management of a parcel of leased land, claiming that this section imposed upon the state a duty to the public to investigate potential lessees. The Supreme Court held that the statutory duty is to secure the maximum return to the state with the least injury to the land, but there is no statutorily created obligation to third parties. Sebena v. St., 267 M 359, 883 P2d 1263, 51 St. Rep. 1101 (1994). See also Jeppeson v. Dept. of State Lands, 205 M 282, 667 P2d 428 (1983).

Evidentiary Hearing Allowed on Renewal Lease but Not on New Lease: The only provision for a hearing after a bid is rejected is in the case of the renewal of leases. In that case, the prior leaseholder may exercise the preferential right and request a hearing if the high bid is felt to be excessive. However, when a prior lease was canceled, the former lessee lost the preferential right and the option to request an evidentiary hearing. Winchell v. Dept. of State Lands, 262 M 328, 865 P2d 249, 50 St. Rep. 1580 (1993).

No Proscription That Previously Canceled Lessee May Not Bid or May Not Lease State Lands — Written Findings Required When High Bid Rejected: Winchell's state land lease was canceled for gross mismanagement of the leased property. The lease was subsequently reclassified and advertised for bids, and Winchell submitted the high bid. Winchell v. Dept. of State Lands, 262 M 328, 865 P2d 249, 50 St. Rep. 1580 (1993).

Sublessor Entitled to Preference Right: When a sublessor retained significant responsibility and control over leased land throughout the sublease period, the Supreme Court ruled that he was entitled to his preference right to meet any competitive bid and renew his lease. Steffen v. Dept. of State Lands, 223 M 176, 724 P2d 713, 43 St. Rep. 1636 (1986).

No Preference — Sublease Form Not Filed: Foster held a state lease of grazing land. He applied to renew his lease at $7.50 per AUM (animal unit month), and Skillman applied to lease the land at $18.75 per AUM. Foster, as the current lessee, was entitled to meet the other bid, which he did. It was discovered that Foster had subleased the land without filing a sublease form with the Board of Land Commissioners. The District Court held that Foster was not entitled to a preference and directed the Board of Land Commissioners to cancel the Foster lease and lease the land without a preference right, citing Jerke v. St. Dept. of Lands, 182 M 294, 597 P2d 49 (1979). On appeal, the judgment of the District Court was affirmed. Skillman v. Dept. of State Lands, 188 M 383, 613 P2d 1389, 37 St. Rep. 1320 (1980).

Grazing District — Preference Right Denied to Sublessor: A preference right allows a lessee contracting with the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) to renew his lease by meeting the high bid of other applicants upon expiration of his lease. Discretion as to Risk: Board of Land Commissioners had discretion to award a 10-year lease to bidder at 33 ⅓% crop share, rather than to another who bid 50%, especially where lessee had farmed the land before and the Board was taking less risk. State ex rel. Thompson v. Babcock, 147 M 46, 409 P2d 808 (1966).

Attorney General's Opinions

Grazing Leases — Duty of Board to Seek Fair Market Value in Establishing Grazing Fees: The Board of Land Commissioners has an affirmative duty under section 10 of The Enabling Act of 1889 and under Art. X, sec. 11, Mont. Const., to obtain the full market value for any grazing lease it enters into. The Legislature may establish a formula for calculating the lease price of state lands where application of the formula results in obtaining fair market value. The formula established by statute based upon the price of beef therefore establishes a minimum lease price, and any interpretation of that statute by the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) so as to prevent the procurance of fair market value for a lease could result in the statutory formula being held unconstitutional. 40 A.G. Op. 24 (1983). However, see Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999), wherein the Supreme Court held that statutory provisions leaving the Department no discretion but to charge less than full market value for certain uses of state lands were unconstitutional.

Right of Lease Violator and Lease Assignee to Preference Right Renewal: Because the language of this section allowing a lessee who has paid his rent and not violated the terms of the lease to renew that lease applies both to renewal by simple renewal and to renewal by preference right, a lessee who has violated the terms of the lease is ineligible for preference right renewal. However, the board may determine that the violation is not serious enough to warrant cancellation and thereby preserve the preference right. As a lawful assignment of a lease under 77-6-208 also transfers the preference right of renewal, an assignee may renew by exercising the preference right as long as the assignee himself has not violated the terms of the lease. 39 A.G. Op. 1 (1981).

Right of Sublessee of State Lands to Exercise Renewal Preference Right — Application to Current Leases: A sublessee of state lands who subleases less than all of the land of the lessee for all or a portion of the term of the original lease is entitled to exercise the renewal preference granted to a lessee only if it can be shown that the renewal by the sublessee is not violative of the purposes of this section, as announced in Jerke v. Dept. of State Lands, 182 M 294, 597 P2d 49 (1979), that purpose being to further the state policy of sustained yield. Whether the sublease furthers the state policy can only be determined on a case-by-case review of the facts and terms of the lease. This test to determine compliance with the purposes of 77-6-205 must be applied by the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) to all subleases at the time of expiration of the primary lease. 39 A.G. Op. 1 (1981).

Measure of Damages in Eminent Domain Proceeding for Loss of Use of Land Leased From State: In an eminent domain proceeding, the landowner was entitled to compensation for loss of use of land leased from the state only in the amount of her lease payments to the state. This section provides that any sublease of state leased lands may not be upon terms less advantageous to the sublessee than the terms given by the state. Since the landowner herself was not using the land, the only possible compensable loss she suffered was the amount for which she could have subleased the land. St. v. Failure to File Sublease — Knowledge Controls: Aye, the holder of a lease of state lands, executed a sublease to Fix, along with an unenforceable oral promise to assign the lease. Aye then assigned the same lease to Bruski. Section 81-419, R.C.M. 1947 (now this section), at the time of the sublease, provided that a sublease of state land was illegal unless a copy of the sublease had been filed in the state land office and approved by the Commissioner. This statute did not override 70-21-102, which provides that an unrecorded instrument is valid as between the parties and those who have notice thereof. The purpose of this section is to facilitate the management of state lands, but it does not abrogate general principles of property law. The Bruskis were aware of the sublease, as Fix was farming the leased land at the time the lease was assigned to them. Because of this knowledge, the Bruskis had notice and the sublease was valid. Aye v. Fix, 192 M 141, 626 P2d 1259, 38 St. Rep. 578A (1981), remanded on other grounds.

Sharecropping: A sublease providing for a share of crops to a lessee of state lands is not a sublease to another on terms less advantageous to the sublessee than terms given by the state to the lessee. Schneider v. Nelson, 111 M 377, 110 P2d 972 (1940).

Right of Lease Violator and Lease Assignee to Preference Right Renewal: Because the language of 77-6-205 allowing a lessee who has paid his rent and not violated the terms of the lease to renew that lease applies both to renewal by simple renewal and to renewal by preference right, a lessee who has violated the terms of the lease is ineligible for preference right renewal. However, the board may determine that the violation is not serious enough to warrant cancellation and thereby preserve the preference right. As a lawful assignment of a lease under this section also transfers the preference right of renewal, an assignee may renew by exercising the preference right as long as the assignee himself has not violated the terms of the lease. 39 A.G. Op. 1 (1981).

Case Notes

Allowance of Change in Grazing Permit Not Ministerial Act — EIS Required: Shoberg transferred his grazing permit to Madden, and Madden changed from grazing cattle to grazing sheep. The Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) allowed the grazing of sheep to continue, notwithstanding that the Department had information indicating that the grazing of sheep would adversely impact upon bighorn sheep reintroduced into the area. The plaintiffs brought an action to require the completion of an environmental impact statement (EIS). The Supreme Court held that an EIS was required because the Department was allowing an action, grazing of sheep, to go forward that could have a significant effect upon the quality of the human environment, notwithstanding statutes requiring the Department to protect the best interests of the state, including consideration of consequences to environment and wildlife. Ravalli County Fish & Game Ass'n, Inc. v. Dept. of State Lands, 273 M 371, 903 P2d 1362, 52 St. Rep. 996 (1995).

Cancellation of Lease for Nonpayment of Rent — Assignment Ineffective: Pursuant to the clear terms of a state land lease, on April 1, 1992, the state automatically terminated a land lease for nonpayment of rent. A purported assignment of the lease in November 1992 was ineffective because the lease had already been canceled. Sebena v. St., 267 M 359, 883 P2d 1263, 51 St. Rep. 1101 (1994).

Lease Canceled Due to Overgrazing: The plaintiffs had a land lease with the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation). The Supreme Court held that there was sufficient evidence of overgrazing that mandated the cancellation of the lease and that the cancellation was necessary to do justice to all parties concerned and to protect the interests of the state. Cancellation of State Agricultural Lease for Nonpayment — Hearing Not Required — District Court Jurisdiction to Review Cancellation: There is no provision in 77-6-506 requiring the Department to conduct a hearing when canceling a state land lease for nonpayment, nor is a hearing required pursuant to the due process clause of Art. II, sec. 17, Mont. Const. The District Court thus has no jurisdiction to review a lease cancellation for nonpayment under contested case procedures because lease cancellation for nonpayment does not constitute a contested case. However, the District Court does retain inherent jurisdiction to review administrative decisions and erred in deciding that it did not have jurisdiction. The standard of review is whether the agency acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unlawfully. Johansen v. St., 1998 MT 51, 288 M 39, 955 P2d 653, 55 St. Rep. 211 (1998), following N. Fork Preservation Ass'n v. Dept. of State Lands, 238 M 451, 778 P2d 862 (1989).

Improvements

Part Administrative Rules

ARM 36.25.125 Improvements.

Part Case Notes

Department Approval of Movable Improvement — Immaterial for Purposes of Payment by Subsequent Lessee: Pursuant to administrative rules implementing this part, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (Department) approves or disapproves the installation of improvements on leased land to ensure that any improvements that a lessee seeks to install relate to the purposes of the lease. The fact that a movable improvement was approved by the Department does not constitute a requirement that a subsequent lessee who does not wish to purchase the movable improvement must nonetheless pay the prior lessee compensation for the improvement. Grenz v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2011 MT 17, 359 Mont. 154, 248 P.3d 785.

Valuation of Improvements — Standard of Review — All Factors Including Decision of Arbitrators to Be Reviewed De Novo by Department — Arbitration Act Inapplicable: After the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) awarded a lease to Hagemeister, a three-person panel of arbitrators was appointed by the DNRC to appraise the value of improvements made by the previous lessee, Winchell. Two arbitrators agreed to a value in excess of $20,000, while a third valued the improvements at $1,407.35. The DNRC then conducted its own appraisal, set aside the higher values, and established a value of $1,564 for the improvements. The Winchells appealed the valuation to the District Court pursuant to 77-6-306(4), and the District Court granted summary judgment for the DNRC. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that: (1) the correct standard for a de novo review of the District Court's judgment is the standard applicable to the review of a case that is not a "contested" case under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act, the standard applicable in this case being whether the DNRC exceeded its statutory authority under 77-6-306(3) or whether its decision is wholly unsupported by the evidence; (2) even though the District Court applied the wrong standard of review, the standard applicable to a contested case, the District Court reached the correct result; (3) the language in 77-6-303 and 77-6-306(3) and (4), which are to be read together, indicate that the Legislature intended that the DNRC do more than review the paper records of the arbitrators in order to "fix" the value of the improvements, and the DNRC was therefore correct in using an independent valuation procedure conducted by its own appraiser in addition to considering the work of the three arbitrators; and (4) the Uniform Arbitration Act does not apply to this case because that Act establishes a District Court's standard of review in an appellate procedure. Winchell v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 1999 MT 11, 293 M 89, 972 P2d 1132, 56 St. Rep. 48 (1999).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 472 in (1) at beginning of first and third sentences inserted exception clauses; in (2) near end of fourth sentence after "improvements" inserted "except those described in 77-1-134"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 6, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has asserted regulatory jurisdiction over the beds of various rivers and streams based on the premise that the streams are navigable and that the state therefore owns the riverbeds and streambeds; and

WHEREAS, very few Montana rivers or streams have been adjudicated as navigable, either in whole or in part; and

WHEREAS, it is not economically feasible for either the Department of Revenue or the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to obtain judicial determinations of riverbed or streambed ownership by statewide quiet title actions, yet that ownership determination may not be made legally by unilateral administrative decisions; and

WHEREAS, if the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation wishes to assert regulatory control over the bed of a river or stream that has not been adjudicated to be navigable and was not determined navigable at the time of the original federal government surveys of the public land as evidenced by the recorded and monumented surveys of the meander lines of the river, it is required to provide written notice of the claim of state ownership to the affected property owners; and

WHEREAS, because the present claims of state ownership of riverbeds and streambeds is contrary to longstanding administrative practice and because the test for navigability depends upon evidence concerning the log floating capability of a stream at the time of statehood, there is no presumption of correctness attached to a navigability claim made by any state agency."

Legislative Findings: Section 1, Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "The legislature finds that:

(1) for 120 years since the admission of Montana as a state in 1889, the department of revenue and its predecessor agencies have taxed some landowners whose property abuts a river or stream on the assumption that those riparian landowners owned the property to the middle of the river or stream;

(2) in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544 (1981), the United States supreme court recognized that if a river or stream is not navigable, the abutting riparian landowners own the land in the bed of the stream to the middle of the stream, but if a river or stream is navigable, the state owns the bed of the river or stream, having acquired ownership from the United States when the state was admitted to the union, and therefore Montana owns the bed of the Bighorn River where it flows through the Crow reservation;

(3) for the purpose of determining the ownership of a riverbed or streambed, the test of navigability is whether logs could be floated in the stream at the time of statehood as stated in Montana Coalition for Stream Access v. Curran, 210 Mont. 38, 682 P.2d 163 (1984), based upon The Montello, 87 U.S. 430 (1874), Sierra Pacific Power Co. v. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 681 F.2d 1134 (9th Cir. 1982), and State of Oregon v. Riverfront Protection Association, 672 F.2d 792 (9th Cir. 1982);

(4) beginning with tax assessments that were effective January 1, 2008, the lien date for real property taxes, the department of revenue reassessed the property of riparian landowners whose land abuts various rivers and streams by reducing the amount of land assessed based upon the premise that the landowners did not own to the middle of the river or stream because the river or stream was navigable and these reassessments, if correct, have enormous impact upon the riparian landowners because they affect land titles, acreage owned, qualification for various conservation and price support programs, and ownership of water diversion facilities and other structures that the riparian landowners have constructed for water usage;

(5) the 2008 reassessments were made by simply sending out tax bills without any notice that they were based upon a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds or streambeds and some riparian landowners have paid the first installment of 2008 real property taxes based upon the reassessments without realizing that a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds and streambeds was the basis for the reassessments;

(6) procedural due process requires that if a claim of change in ownership is involved, the state agency involved shall afford the affected property owners both notice of the claim and the opportunity to be heard;

(7) the 2008 real property tax assessments based upon claims of state ownership did not comply with the constitutional requirement for procedural due process and under that circumstance payment by the property owners of taxes based on the reassessment does not constitute acquiesence in the underlying state ownership claim;

(8) The department of revenue is required to provide written notice to the affected property owners of the state's claim of ownership so that the affected property owners have a fair opportunity to be heard and to dispute the government's claim."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 476 in (1) inserted first two sentences relating to the lessee providing a list of improvements on the land before a lease is renewed and allowing a party bidding on the lease to get the information; and in (2) inserted third sentence requiring the notification to include an explanation of the requirements in 77-6-306. Amendment effective April 28, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 270 in (1) at end of first sentence after "the improvements" deleted "at the time the new lessee takes possession"; in (2) inserted second and third sentences regarding initiation of valuation process; inserted (3) regarding removable of movable improvements; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 2001.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 586 in (1) inserted second sentence concerning reasonable value as full market value of improvements; in (2), after "lessee", inserted "is unable to produce records establishing the reasonable value or if the former lessee"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Case Notes

Administrative Rules Valid Relating to Purchase of Certain Movable Improvements: The Supreme Court determined that the administrative rules implementing 77-6-302 and 77-6-303, relating to limiting compensation for movable improvements to just those that a lessee decides to purchase, were valid and did not contradict those sections as provided in 2-4-305. The Supreme Court made the determination by reading the statutes in their entirety, examining the legislative history of amendments to 77-6-302 and 77-6-303, considering prior case law, and recognizing that the rules were in effect during the time the sections were amended. Grenz v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2011 MT 17, 359 Mont. 154, 248 P.3d 785.

Applicability to Movable Improvements: Compensation for improvements provided under 77-6-302 and 77-6-303 applies only to permanent improvements and to movable improvements that the new lessee decides to purchase as provided under the administrative rules implementing these sections. Grenz v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2011 MT 17, 359 Mont. 154, 248 P.3d 785.

Statute Allowing State Lands to Remain Idle While Lessees Determine Value of Improvements — Unconstitutionality: Under 77-6-305 (now repealed), the value of improvements placed on the leasehold by a former lessee is required to be paid by the new lessee before the new lease may be issued if the former lessee chose not to remove the improvements. The District Court found the provision constitutional even though it might result in less revenue because of delay caused by lease delays, concluding that the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation must have latitude to administer school trust lands. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that portion of 77-6-305 (now repealed) unconstitutional on its face. The state's discretion to administer the trust is broad, but not unlimited, and must conform to the requirements of the trust. The statute allows trust lands to idle indefinitely while former and new lessees determine the value of the improvements, which is inconsistent with the trust mandate that full market value be received for the lands. Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 472 in (3) at beginning inserted "Subject to 77-1-134"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 6, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has asserted regulatory jurisdiction over the beds of various rivers and streams based on the premise that the streams are navigable and that the state therefore owns the riverbeds and streambeds; and

WHEREAS, very few Montana rivers or streams have been adjudicated as navigable, either in whole or in part; and

WHEREAS, it is not economically feasible for either the Department of Revenue or the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to obtain judicial determinations of riverbed or streambed ownership by statewide quiet title actions, yet that ownership determination may not be made legally by unilateral administrative decisions; and

WHEREAS, if the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation wishes to assert regulatory control over the bed of a river or stream that has not been adjudicated to be navigable and was not determined navigable at the time of the original federal government surveys of the public land as evidenced by the recorded and monumented surveys of the meander lines of the river, it is required to provide written notice of the claim of state ownership to the affected property owners; and

WHEREAS, because the present claims of state ownership of riverbeds and streambeds is contrary to longstanding administrative practice and because the test for navigability depends upon evidence concerning the log floating capability of a stream at the time of statehood, there is no presumption of correctness attached to a navigability claim made by any state agency."

Legislative Findings: Section 1, Ch. 472, L. 2009, provided: "The legislature finds that:

(1) for 120 years since the admission of Montana as a state in 1889, the department of revenue and its predecessor agencies have taxed some landowners whose property abuts a river or stream on the assumption that those riparian landowners owned the property to the middle of the river or stream;

(2) in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544 (1981), the United States supreme court recognized that if a river or stream is not navigable, the abutting riparian landowners own the land in the bed of the stream to the middle of the stream, but if a river or stream is navigable, the state owns the bed of the river or stream, having acquired ownership from the United States when the state was admitted to the union, and therefore Montana owns the bed of the Bighorn River where it flows through the Crow reservation;

(3) for the purpose of determining the ownership of a riverbed or streambed, the test of navigability is whether logs could be floated in the stream at the time of statehood as stated in Montana Coalition for Stream Access v. Curran, 210 Mont. 38, 682 P.2d 163 (1984), based upon The Montello, 87 U.S. 430 (1874), Sierra Pacific Power Co. v. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 681 F.2d 1134 (9th Cir. 1982), and State of Oregon v. Riverfront Protection Association, 672 F.2d 792 (9th Cir. 1982);

(4) beginning with tax assessments that were effective January 1, 2008, the lien date for real property taxes, the department of revenue reassessed the property of riparian landowners whose land abuts various rivers and streams by reducing the amount of land assessed based upon the premise that the landowners did not own to the middle of the river or stream because the river or stream was navigable and these reassessments, if correct, have enormous impact upon the riparian landowners because they affect land titles, acreage owned, qualification for various conservation and price support programs, and ownership of water diversion facilities and other structures that the riparian landowners have constructed for water usage;

(5) the 2008 reassessments were made by simply sending out tax bills without any notice that they were based upon a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds or streambeds and some riparian landowners have paid the first installment of 2008 real property taxes based upon the reassessments without realizing that a claim of state ownership of the riverbeds and streambeds was the basis for the reassessments;

(6) procedural due process requires that if a claim of change in ownership is involved, the state agency involved shall afford the affected property owners both notice of the claim and the opportunity to be heard;

(7) the 2008 real property tax assessments based upon claims of state ownership did not comply with the constitutional requirement for procedural due process and under that circumstance payment by the property owners of taxes based on the reassessment does not constitute acquiesence in the underlying state ownership claim;

(8) The department of revenue is required to provide written notice to the affected property owners of the state's claim of ownership so that the affected property owners have a fair opportunity to be heard and to dispute the government's claim."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 5 inserted (4) requiring a minimum annual guarantee on a competitive bid greater than a one-third crop share; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 3, Ch. 5, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 5(1), Ch. 5, L. 1999, provided: "[Section 1] [amending 77-6-501] applies to all agricultural leases made or renewed on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective July 1, 1999.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 168 near beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; at beginning of (2) inserted exception clause; inserted (3) authorizing cash lease renewal in cases in which lessee has made substantial irrigation improvements at lessee's own expense; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (1) at end of second sentence, inserted "or for high production cost methods when these methods would result in more income to the state"; and in (2) at beginning of sentence, substituted "If it is in the best interests of the state" for "In unusual cases", near middle of sentence, before "cases", deleted "unusual", near end of sentence, after "district", inserted "under similar circumstances", and before "conditions of the case" deleted "unusual".

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 70 (Ch. 54, L. 1985) provided: "The purpose of the extension of rulemaking authority contained in section 2 is to allow the department of state lands [now department of natural resources and conservation] and board of land commissioners to amend their surface leasing rules, specifically ARM 26.3.112 [repealed 1987], to reflect the statutory amendments made by this bill."

Cancellation of State Agricultural Lease for Nonpayment — Hearing Not Required — District Court Jurisdiction to Review Cancellation: There is no provision in 77-6-506 requiring the Department to conduct a hearing when canceling a state land lease for nonpayment, nor is a hearing required pursuant to the due process clause of Art. II, sec. 17, Mont. Const. The District Court thus has no jurisdiction to review a lease cancellation for nonpayment under contested case procedures because lease cancellation for nonpayment does not constitute a contested case. However, the District Court does retain inherent jurisdiction to review administrative decisions and erred in deciding that it did not have jurisdiction. The standard of review is whether the agency acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unlawfully. Johansen v. St., 1998 MT 51, 288 M 39, 955 P2d 653, 55 St. Rep. 211 (1998), following N. No Genuine Issue of Fact Regarding State Land Lessee's Rental of Property in Contravention of Zoning Regulations — Summary Judgment Proper: Stewart leased a parcel of state land for a residence in an area that was zoned for single-family dwellings. The state commenced a civil action challenging Stewart's use of a single-family unit as a multiple-family unit and seeking injunctive relief. The District Court granted the state's motion for summary judgment and issued an injunction against Stewart, and Stewart appealed. Stewart maintained that the residence had not been modified in any way following approval of architectural plans, so the residence was still in compliance with zoning restrictions. The state responded that it was not the structure itself but Stewart's use of the structure that violated zoning regulations. The Supreme Court agreed with the state. Testimony of former residents confirmed that Stewart's home was being used as a multiple-family residence, and Stewart offered no proof other than mere denial and speculation that a material question of fact existed regarding use of the structure as a multiple-family residence. Thus, summary judgment for the state was proper, and the grant of injunctive relief against Stewart was affirmed. St. v. Stewart, 2003 MT 108, 315 M 335, 68 P3d 712 (2003).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 5 in (1) near beginning of third sentence inserted "after July 1, 1999"; in (5) deleted former second sentence that read: "The land is then open for lease to applicants"; inserted (6) allowing the department to reinstate a lease under certain conditions; inserted (7) regarding availability of a canceled lease that is not reinstated; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 3, Ch. 5, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 5(2), Ch. 5, L. 1999, provided: "[Section 2] [amending 77-6-506] applies to all rentals due on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective July 1, 1999.

1991 Amendment: Inserted (3) extending the $25 penalty for failure to make timely rental payment to all state land leases and licenses not currently subject to the penalty.

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 140, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to state land lease and license payments due after December 31, 1991."

1989 Amendment: In (1), at end, substituted "before March 1. If the rental is not paid before March 1, a $25 penalty shall be imposed on the lessee. If the full rental and the $25 penalty are not paid by April 1, the entire lease is canceled" for "before March 1, and if not paid by April 1 the entire lease is canceled"; in (2) inserted second sentence relating to rental payment before November 15, in third sentence substituted "full rental and the $25 penalty are" for "rental is", and inserted last sentence relating to rental payments made after November 15; in (3) inserted "and the $25 penalty are"; inserted (5) providing for deposit of penalties; and made minor change in grammar.

1985 Amendment: In (1), at beginning inserted "For grazing leases, the grazing portion of leases containing both agricultural and grazing land, and agricultural leases not based on a crop share", near end before "lease", inserted "entire", and at end deleted "The department shall notify the lessee by letter addressed to the post-office address given in the lease of the cancellation, and the land is then open for lease to other applicants"; inserted (2) providing for cancellation of agricultural leases and the agricultural portion of leases containing both grazing and agricultural land due to nonpayment of rental; inserted (3) requiring notice of impending cancellation to lessee; and inserted (4) requiring notice to lessee of actual cancellation, whereupon the land is open for lease to applicants.

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 473, L. 1985, provided: "This act applies to all leases of state agricultural lands in effect on the effective date of this act and to all future leases of state agricultural lands."

Severability Clause: Section 3, Ch. 473, L. 1985, was a severability clause.

ARM 36.25.112 Payment due dates.

Case Notes

Payment of State Lease Authorized on Day After Holiday: Johansen's rental payment on a state agricultural lease was due on or before December 31. Johansen placed the payment in his rural mailbox on December 29, but for various reasons, the carrier left the payment in the mailbox on the 29th and 30th. There was no mail service on Sunday the 31st, and the post office was closed January 1 for the holiday. On January 2, Johansen took the letter to the post office for mailing, as evidenced by affidavit of the postmaster, but it did not receive a postmark until January 3. The Department canceled the lease for nonpayment. Although the letter did not receive a postmark until January 3, the Department had uncontroverted evidence that Johansen had timely mailed the rental payment. The Department's decision to cancel the lease was arbitrary and capricious, and the District Court's holding that the payment was timely made was affirmed. Johansen v. St., 1999 MT 187, 295 M 339, 983 P2d 962, 56 St. Rep. 731 (1999).

Cancellation of State Agricultural Lease for Nonpayment — Hearing Not Required — District Court Jurisdiction to Review Cancellation: There is no provision in this section requiring the Department to conduct a hearing when canceling a state land lease for nonpayment, nor is a hearing required pursuant to the due process clause of Art. II, sec. 17, Mont. Const. The District Court thus has no jurisdiction to review a lease cancellation for nonpayment under contested case procedures because lease cancellation for nonpayment does not constitute a contested case. However, the District Court does retain inherent jurisdiction to review administrative decisions and erred in deciding that it did not have jurisdiction. The standard of review is whether the agency acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unlawfully. Johansen v. St., 1998 MT 51, 288 M 39, 955 P2d 653, 55 St. Rep. 211 (1998), following N. Fork Preservation Ass'n v. Dept. of State Lands, 238 M 451, 778 P2d 862 (1989).

Lease Rental Affected by Land Reclassification — Writ of Prohibition Proper: Lessees developed a water spreading project on a portion of their state grazing lease, and the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) reclassified 32 acres of the lease as agricultural. Lessees later concluded that the project was inadequate for producing a profitable crop at the higher agricultural rental rates. They negotiated to pay back a loan for the project and reverted the land to grazing. After the loan was repaid, there were no other agreements supplementing the original lease. However, the Department subsequently determined that the 32 acres should retain the agricultural classification, sought rental at the agricultural rate, and canceled the lease upon nonpayment. The District Court properly filed a writ of prohibition restraining the Department from canceling the lease, re-leasing the property to other parties, and taking action against lessees for trespass after finding the Department was in excess of its jurisdiction for canceling the lease for nonpayment of agricultural rental when the property was leased for grazing only. Winchell v. Dept. of State Lands, 235 M 10, 764 P2d 1267, 45 St. Rep. 2121 (1988).

Improper to Enjoin Department From Complying With This Section: The Department canceled a lease for nonpayment pursuant to this section. Because of the restrictions on issuance of injunctions set forth in 27-19-103, a court may not issue an injunction to prevent the Department from re-leasing the land. Jeppeson v. St., 205 M 282, 667 P2d 428, 40 St. Rep. 1272 (1983).

Applicability: Section 16(3), Ch. 586, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 8 and 12] [77-6-502 and 77-6-507] apply to leases issued or renewed after July 1, 1993."

1991 Amendment: Near beginning of (2), before "per annum", inserted "minimum" and after "state" deleted "upon the animal-unit-month basis as provided in this section"; deleted introduction to former (3) regarding fixing of a formula for annual rental per section; deleted former (3)(b) through (3)(d) that established minimum annual rental rates for grazing lands; and made minor changes in style.

Grazing Leases — Duty of Board to Seek Fair Market Value in Establishing Grazing Fees: The Board of Land Commissioners has an affirmative duty under section 10 of The Enabling Act of 1889 and under Art. X, sec. 11, Mont. Const., to obtain the full market value for any grazing lease it enters into. The Legislature may establish a formula for calculating the lease price of state lands where application of the formula results in obtaining fair market value. The formula established by statute based upon the price of beef therefore establishes a minimum lease price, and any interpretation of that statute by the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) so as to prevent the procurance of fair market value for a lease could result in the statutory formula being held unconstitutional. 40 A.G. Op. 24 (1983). However, see Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999), wherein the Supreme Court held that statutory provisions leaving the Department no discretion but to charge less than full market value for certain uses of state lands were unconstitutional.

Crop Adjusters as Employees, Not Independent Contractors — Administrative Findings Improperly Reversed: The Unemployment Insurance Division of the Department of Labor and Industry, a Department hearings office, and the Board of Labor Appeals successively determined that crop adjusters were employees of American Agrijusters Co. (American) for unemployment insurance tax purposes. The District Court reversed, holding that the crop adjusters were independent contractors. The Supreme Court applied the four-part test used in Sharp v. Hoerner Waldorf Corp., 178 M 419, 584 P2d 1298 (1978), to determine whether a right of control existed sufficient to give rise to an employer-employee relationship. The factors do not constitute a balancing test, however, so employee status may be established on the strength of evidence under one of the factors standing alone. Here, American exercised a right of control over the means and methods by which crop adjusters completed their job assignments through training, supervision, and review of completed job assignments. Further, payment by a unit of time and the right to terminate the work relationship without liability also evidenced employment status. The District Court erred in finding that crop adjusters were independent contractors, and the Supreme Court reversed. Am. Agrijusters Co. v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 1999 MT 241, 296 M 176, 988 P2d 782, 56 St. Rep. 948 (1999). See also 3 Larson & Larson, Larson's Workers' Compensation Law §§61.04, 61.06, 61.07 (1999).

State Auditor as Member of Hail Board — No Conflict of Interest: The State Auditor as ex officio Commissioner of Insurance is required to approve the form of all hail insurance policies issued in Montana and at the same time is required by law to sit as a member of the Board of Hail Insurance (Hail Board). The State Auditor is not compensated for service on the Hail Board, nor is there any compensation from any source for such duties. Thus, the Supreme Court held that the State Auditor as ex officio Commissioner of Insurance is not financially interested in the Hail Board within the meaning of 2-2-102. Mtn. States Ins. Co. v. St., 218 M 365, 708 P2d 564, 42 St. Rep. 1657 (1985).

State Auditor as Member of Hail Board — Not Dual Office Holding: The State Auditor is a constitutional office with "such duties as are provided by law" (Art. VI, sec. 4, Mont. Const.). One of these prescribed duties is being a member of the Board of Hail Insurance established under 2-15-3003. The State Auditor does not hold dual offices by carrying out legislatively imposed duties. The only limitation on the Legislature in prescribing such duties is that the duties may not pertain to the Legislative or Judicial Branch of government. Mtn. States Ins. Co. v. St., 218 M 365, 708 P2d 564, 42 St. Rep. 1657 (1985).

Amendment effective July 1, 2001. The amendment by Ch. 574 rendered the amendment by Ch. 257 void. 1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 553, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the following sections extend additional rulemaking authority to the department of agriculture's present authority to regulate horticulture and farm produce:

(1) The definition of "produce" in [section 2] [80-3-302] is intended to allow the department to establish by rule what products constitute produce and are subject to the Montana Produce Act.

(2) [Section 6(3)] [80-3-306(3)] is intended to allow the department to establish a penalty matrix that sets out the kinds of administrative penalties applicable to violations of the Montana Produce Act and delineate the degrees of penalty that may be assessed for initial and subsequent administrative violations.

(3) [Section 10(1)] [80-3-314(1)] is intended to grant the department the discretion to set and adjust the produce assessment fee, within the statutory range, to cover the department's assessment costs."

Title 4, chapter 12, subchapter 10, ARM Grain rules.
Title 4, chapter 13, subchapter 10, ARM Grain rules.

Chapter Case Notes

Distribution of Bond Proceeds — Two Separate Grain Purchasing Businesses Conducted by Same Entity: In 1980, a grain purchasing company was determined by the state to be conducting two separate and independent grain purchasing businesses in Montana. In 1981, the company was required to execute two bonds under the provisions of Title 80, ch. 4, part 2. One bond secured a group of farmers under a $195,000 grain dealer-public warehouse operator bond. The second bond secured a group of independent grain dealers under a $20,000 grain merchandiser-track buyer bond. Upon subsequent bankruptcy of the company, the District Court properly distributed the bond proceeds by determining the intention of the parties when the bonds were purchased. In affirming the lower court, the Supreme Court noted that the statutory provisions under which the bonds were issued were ambiguous, illogical, and antiquated, leading both to this case and to repeal of the statutes in 1983. St. v. A.B.N. Ranch, 230 M 449, 750 P2d 1079, 45 St. Rep. 343 (1988).

Judicial Notice: The law presumed that the Commissioner of Agriculture (now the Department of Agriculture) performed his official duty as required by 80-4-224 (prior to repeal in 1983) and that the form of warehouse receipt used and issued by plaintiff was in the form prescribed by law and the rules of the Commissioner of Agriculture of which law and official acts this court may take judicial notice. N. Mont. Mustard Growers' Co-op v. Britton, 128 M 553, 280 P2d 1078 (1955).

Mustard Seed as Grain: Mustard seed is a grain and was subject to the provisions of 80-4-229 and 80-4-230 (both repealed in 1983). N. Mont. Mustard Growers' Co-op v. Britton, 128 M 553, 280 P2d 1078 (1955).

Waiver of Storage: Plaintiff delivered a quantity of grain to an elevator. Three months later he sold it to the elevator company; at that time, while section 3-217, R.C.M. 1947 (80-4-223, MCA, repealed in 1983), required the warehouse operator to charge storage and 80-4-222 (repealed in 1983) prescribed the penalty for failure to do so, none was charged when the sale was made. In an action to recover the balance of the sale price due, the buyer contended that no storage having been charged, the contract of sale was invalid as against public policy. The court held that the contract of storage, one of bailment, and the contract of sale were separate and distinct contracts, and in the absence of proof that the waiver of storage was an inducement for the sale, the latter transaction was valid. Spurgeon v. Imperial Elevator Co., 99 M 432, 43 P2d 891 (1935).

Bailment: An operator of a grain elevator is a public warehouse operator; delivery of grain for storage constitutes a bailment, and as bailee the operator must, under the Montana law, at all times keep on hand in bonded warehouses sufficient grain to make redelivery on all storage receipts and may not sell or deliver it out of storage except as provided by law. The operator may not use it for purposes of speculation on the market. Whorley v. Patton-Kjose Co., Inc., 90 M 461, 5 P2d 210 (1931).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Exemption — Out-of-State "Annex": A grain merchandising facility located 900 feet within the Montana border could not be classified as an "annex" of a North Dakota operation and exempted from licensing and grain storage obligations under 80-4-202 (repealed in 1983). 36 A.G. Op. 89 (1976).

Bonding Requirement Exemption: A warehouse operator licensed under the United States Warehouse Act could not be required to execute a warehouse operator's bond under 80-4-205 (repealed in 1983). 36 A.G. Op. 36 (1975).

Federal Act Exempt From State Law: The charges for grain storage that a warehouse operator, licensed under the United States Warehouse Act, may impose cannot be regulated by state law. However, state law remains effective as to persons licensed under the United States Warehouse Act in those areas that are not regulated by the act, i.e., those activities not confined to the storage of grain. 36 A.G. Op. 36 (1975).

Lack of State Power to Initiate Suit on Behalf of a Citizen Absent Some Specially Conferred Standing: Section 80-4-234 (repealed in 1983) requiring intervention by the Montana Department of Agriculture on behalf of grain producers was not applicable where the injury was caused by a person licensed under the United States Warehouse Act. 36 A.G. Op. 36 (1975).

Construction of Bond: In construing a mustard seed contractor bond, it was necessary to consider 80-4-311 (repealed in 1983) as part of the bond itself. Kohles v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 144 M 395, 396 P2d 724 (1964).

Purpose: The purpose of 80-4-311 (repealed in 1983) was to benefit those farmers who have sold their crops "in advance of harvest". Kohles v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 144 M 395, 396 P2d 724 (1964).

Recovery on Bond: Plaintiff who, prior to the repeal of 80-4-311 in 1983, sold and delivered mustard seed to company which went bankrupt could not recover on a mustard seed contractor bond when he had the seed on hand and in storage when he contracted for sale. The seed was not planted or harvested in such year nor was it a growing crop during that year. Kohles v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 144 M 395, 396 P2d 724 (1964).

Case Notes

Waiver of Storage: Plaintiff delivered a quantity of grain to an elevator. Three months later he sold it to the elevator company; at that time, while section 3-217, R.C.M. 1947 (80-4-223, MCA, repealed in 1983), required the warehouse operator to charge storage and 80-4-222, MCA (repealed in 1983), prescribed the penalty for failure to do so, none was charged when the sale was made. In an action to recover the balance of the sale price due, the buyer contended that no storage having been charged, the contract of sale was invalid as against public policy. The court held that the contract of storage, one of bailment, and the contract of sale were separate and distinct contracts, and in the absence of proof that the waiver of storage was an inducement for the sale, the latter transaction was valid. Spurgeon v. Imperial Elevator Co., 99 M 432, 43 P2d 891 (1935).

Attorney General's Opinions

However, state law remains effective as to persons licensed under the United States Warehouse Act in those areas that are not regulated by the act, i.e., those activities not confined to the storage of grain. 36 A.G. It is the intent of the legislature that the department establish rules for prohibited or restricted noxious weed seeds for the purpose of implementing Title 80, chapter 7, part 8, and Title 7, chapter 22, part 21. The legislature intends that noxious weed seeds be classified into two categories, prohibited noxious weed seeds and restricted noxious weed seeds. The characteristics of the two categories are as follows:

(1) "Prohibited noxious weed seeds" means seeds of perennial plants that not only reproduce by seed but also may spread by underground roots, stems, and other reproductive parts and which, when well established, are highly destructive and difficult to control in this state by ordinary good cultural practice.

(2) "Restricted noxious weed seeds" are seeds of weeds that are very objectionable in fields, lawns, and gardens of this state that can be controlled by good cultural practices.

The legislature intends that seeds designated as noxious weed seeds under current statutes need not be identical to seeds classified as noxious weed seeds under rules adopted by the department. However, the department shall include the seeds of leafy spurge and Russian knapweed in the prohibited noxious weed seeds category. In addition, the department shall designate the seeds of spotted knapweed and dyers woad as restricted noxious weed seeds. Thus, except as otherwise provided under this act, the Montana department of agriculture shall determine which noxious weed seeds must be prohibited and which noxious weed seeds should be restricted and at what levels."

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 373, L. 1987, provided: "This bill requires a statement of intent because section 1 [80-5-120] and 80-5-105 [renumbered 80-5-134], as amended, require the department of agriculture to adopt rules defining noxious weed seeds.

It is the intent of the legislature that the department establish rules for prohibited or restricted noxious weed seeds for the purpose of implementing Title 80, chapter 7, part 8, and Title 7, chapter 22, part 21. The legislature intends that noxious weed seeds be classified into two categories, prohibited noxious weed seeds and restricted noxious weed seeds. The characteristics of the two categories are as follows:

(1) "Prohibited noxious weed seeds" means seeds of perennial plants that not only reproduce by seed but also may spread by underground roots, stems, and other reproductive parts and which, when well established, are highly destructive and difficult to control in this state by ordinary good cultural practice.

(2) "Restricted noxious weed seeds" are seeds of weeds that are very objectionable in fields, lawns, and gardens of this state that can be controlled by good cultural practices.

The legislature intends that seeds designated as noxious weed seeds under current statutes need not be identical to seeds classified as noxious weed seeds under rules adopted by the department. However, the department shall include the seeds of leafy spurge and Russian knapweed in the prohibited noxious weed seeds category. In addition, the department shall designate the seeds of spotted knapweed and dyers woad as restricted noxious weed seeds. Thus, except as otherwise provided under this act, the Montana department of agriculture shall determine which noxious weed seeds must be prohibited and which noxious weed seeds should be restricted and at what levels."

It is the intent of the legislature that the department establish rules for the detection of pest honeybees by using the most efficient, scientifically acceptable method of identifying pests.

It is further the intent of the legislature that the department establish by rule a fee structure for laboratory services. The department should set fees to correspond with the costs of providing services. These costs include both direct and indirect costs, plus expenses associated with operation of the laboratory authorized under section 9 [80-6-311].

In setting fees, the department may take into consideration the economic difficulties of the apiary industry and may reduce fees as may be necessary to promote increased use of services. The department may provide services at less than cost if alternative funding is available or if the economic conditions of the industry require the reduction of charges.

In addition, it is the intent of the legislature that the department establish by rule an effective method for conducting quarantines to prevent the entry and spread of harmful honeybee pests and diseases, such as Africanized honeybees and honeybee mites. It is contemplated that the department quarantine any apiary where pest honeybees or any contagious or infectious diseases are present and, during the quarantine, prevent the removal from the apiary of any bees or equipment."

It is the intent of the legislature that the department establish rules for the detection of pest honeybees by using the most efficient, scientifically acceptable method of identifying pests.

It is further the intent of the legislature that the department establish by rule a fee structure for laboratory services. The department should set fees to correspond with the costs of providing services. These costs include both direct and indirect costs, plus expenses associated with operation of the laboratory authorized under section 9 [80-6-311].

In setting fees, the department may take into consideration the economic difficulties of the apiary industry and may reduce fees as may be necessary to promote increased use of services. The department may provide services at less than cost if alternative funding is available or if the economic conditions of the industry require the reduction of charges.

In addition, it is the intent of the legislature that the department establish by rule an effective method for conducting quarantines to prevent the entry and spread of harmful honeybee pests and diseases, such as Africanized honeybees and honeybee mites. It is contemplated that the department quarantine any apiary where pest honeybees or any contagious or infectious diseases are present and, during the quarantine, prevent the removal from the apiary of any bees or equipment."

Noxious Weed Management Funding

Part Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 639, L. 1987, provided: "WHEREAS, noxious weeds infest 6.5 million acres of rangeland and are costing the State of Montana an estimated $47 million annually; and

WHEREAS, vehicles have been shown to be one of the major contributors to the spread of noxious weeds in Montana, and county and state funds are inadequate for stopping the spread of these weeds from roadsides and trails into adjacent rangeland; and

WHEREAS, the amount of $125,000 in annual revenue generated by the herbicide surcharge to fund weed control projects through the noxious weed management trust fund is inadequate to address the current weed problem; and interest income from the permanent account of the noxious weed management trust fund cannot be used to fund weed management projects in Montana until the fund reaches $2.5 million; and

WHEREAS, during this period, the spread of noxious weeds will continue at the rate of about 27% annually; and

WHEREAS, current weed management projects prove the success of well-planned, organized, and cooperative programs."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 577, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is required by this bill because rulemaking authority is granted to the Montana department of agriculture in section 8 [80-7-802].

It is the intent of the legislature that the department of agriculture adopt rules for the orderly administration of the noxious weed management trust fund and collection and administration of revenue as provided in the bill. The department, through reports required of herbicide registrants, shall establish a collection system for the surcharge imposed in section 3 [80-7-812, now repealed], giving notice to the registrant and providing a procedure for the payment of the surcharge.

It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt rules relating to the disbursement of funds generated by this act. Specifically, the department shall use the criteria stated in sections 5 and 6 [80-7-814 and 80-7-815] as the basis for the distribution of the funds. The legislature intends that the money given in the form of grants and contracts be primarily on a cost-share basis. The department shall determine the ratio of cost sharing by considering the entity being given the money, its ability to find other sources of funding, the need for the project for which it receives the money, and the amount of benefit it bestows on the area involved. The legislature intends that projects involving greater community action and benefit receive increased priority.

It is the intent of the legislature that if the trust fund should be terminated by the legislature, the funds to be distributed to the counties must be distributed in an equitable manner, taking into consideration the population of the counties, the participation in the program, and the needs of the counties with respect to noxious weed management.

The legislature intends that the department adopt rules identifying any weed which constitutes a new and potentially harmful noxious weed. The department shall take into consideration the possible harm the newly introduced weed will have on the Montana economy, the damage the weed will cause to the existing foliage and environment, and the likelihood that the noxious weed will spread throughout the state. The department shall also establish rules for verifying the existence of the weed. These rules shall take into consideration the scientific methods for verification and proper sampling techniques for determining the extent of the weed outbreak.

It is the intent of the legislature that the decision for the disbursement of the funds for the projects be made by the director of the department of agriculture upon the advice of the noxious weed management advisory council. The directives of the director must be implemented by a noxious weed management coordinator, who shall serve the director. The noxious weed management coordinator shall maintain records on the disbursement of the funds and the progress of the funded projects. He shall make determinations as to the effectiveness of the previously funded projects and provide the director and the advisory council all relevant information necessary to make decisions for future disbursements of funds. He shall also work with and assist county weed districts."

Aquatic Invasive Species

Part Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 429, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, invasive species can wreak damage on the economy, environment, recreational opportunities, and human health; and

WHEREAS, aquatic invasive species, including Eurasian watermilfoil, the quagga mussel, and the zebra mussel, pose new and imminent threats, which if left unchecked could cost millions of dollars not only in damage to Montana waterways, rivers, and lakes, to water storage, delivery, and irrigation systems, to hydroelectric power structures and systems, and to aquatic ecosystems, but also to the entire state economy; and

WHEREAS, the enormous impact caused by the zebra mussel is clearly demonstrated in the eastern United States where the species was first observed in Lake Ontario in 1988 and spread to Lake Michigan and the Finger Lakes Region in New York State by the following year; and

WHEREAS, the United States Geological Survey estimates that $5 billion has been spent thus far in the Great Lakes Basin alone for damages caused by and control efforts for the zebra mussel; and

WHEREAS, the zebra mussel was first discovered in Lake Mead in January 2007 and has now spread to Lakes Mojave and Havasu and the Colorado River, impacting the states of Arizona, Nevada, and California, as well as to Pueblo Reservoir in Colorado, San Justo Reservoir in California, and Electric Lake in Utah; and

WHEREAS, Eurasian watermilfoil, the zebra mussel, and the quagga mussel are easily carried on vessels used in infested water and then transported to another body of water if the vessel has not been properly cleaned; and

WHEREAS, Eurasian watermilfoil is already present in Montana and unless Montana takes action now to prevent the infestation of its waters with the zebra mussel and quagga mussel it is only a matter of time before their introduction in this state occurs; and

WHEREAS, the most cost-effective way of dealing with an aquatic invasive species is preventing an infestation from occurring."

Appropriations — Legislative Control Over Marketing Assessment Funds: Although the control of the Legislature over appropriations to state agencies is based upon broad constitutional provisions, certain money may either be exempt from the appropriation process or the purposes for which that money may be appropriated may be limited by statute. Thus, the Legislature may control appropriations from the Wheat Marketing and Research Account (now Wheat and Barley Account), but those appropriations are subject to the statutorily stated purposes of the Account. Attorney General's Opinions

Role of Montana Wheat Research and Marketing Committee (now Montana Wheat and Barley Committee) in Political Action and Legal Action: "Marketing" is to be interpreted in its broadest sense to include the transportation of goods, including transportation rates. The committee may take action to assure reasonable transportation rates if it is in the best interest of the wheat and barley growers of Montana as a whole. Political action, not legal action, is prohibited. Although in some situations lawsuits against purchasers or growers of wheat or barley for violation of the wheat research and marketing statutes must be brought by the Department of Agriculture, that requirement did not govern a situation when the litigation in question was brought not merely to enforce the procedural requirements of the wheat research and marketing statutes but also to assure reasonable transportation rates. Actual use of committee funds for permissible legal action is impermissible if the use of the funds is not under state control. The committee also is prohibited from contributing to a legal fund over which it has no control; however, the committee is not prohibited from engaging indirectly in litigation by funding research if it controls the expenditure of the funds for the studies by way of contract or agreement. 39 A.G. 1993 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 51 near beginning of (2)(b), after "program", inserted "other than the commodity credit corporation"; inserted (2)(c) regarding collection of the assessment on wheat or barley pledged under the federal commodity credit corporation; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Appropriation of Specially Assessed Funds — Due Process of Law: The Legislature may appropriate wheat research and marketing funds, which are funds derived from a special tax on the growers of wheat and barley, to the Centralized Services Division of the Department of Agriculture in order to pay for administrative services used by the Wheat Research and Marketing Committee (now Montana Wheat and Barley Committee) because the Committee is required by law to use the services of the Division and that requirement implies a duty to pay for the services. Because the money appropriated is taxed to the grower for a specific purpose, the amount appropriated to the Centralized Services Division must be for a purpose substantially related to the purposes of the tax. 39 A.G. MONTANA AGRICULTURAL LOAN AUTHORITY ACT

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble to SB 316 (Ch. 580, L. 1983) provided:

"WHEREAS, obtaining sufficient financing to begin a farm or ranch operation in Montana is increasingly difficult; and

WHEREAS, beginning farmers experience great difficulty in repaying loans under high interest rates and with low market prices for agricultural products; and

WHEREAS, the agricultural loan programs administered by the Montana Department of Agriculture are inadequate to meet the real needs of the state; and

WHEREAS, the federal Farmers Home Administration's farm ownership loan program is also inadequate to the real needs of the state; and

WHEREAS, low interest rate financing for beginning farmers is not available in the private sector; and

WHEREAS, the value of family farms to the economic, social, and political well-being of the state is worthy of legislative action and support.

THEREFORE, it is the purpose of this act to assist beginning farmers with financial support and encouragement by making low interest rate loans available to eligible farmers and by providing incentives to retiring farmers who sell their land to eligible beginning farmers."

1985 Amendment: Inserted (6) allowing the loan authority to procure insurance or guaranties from any party against any loss in connection with its loan agreements.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 316 (Ch. 580, L. 1983) provided: "Section 1. It is the specific intent of the Legislature that the Montana Agricultural Loan Authority should operate in the same manner that the Iowa Loan Authority has operated for the last 13 months in the state of Iowa. Each loan is processed individually by a bank or other financial institution. The loans can be for farmland acquisition or for purchase or construction of depreciable property (farm equipment or farm buildings). The bank or other financial institution initially approves the loan and agrees to accept the credit risk. It then sends an application to the Montana Agricultural Loan Authority in the exact amount and the money is made available to fund the loan.

Thus, the entire transaction is treated identically with any other bank loan to a farmer except that the bank or other financial institution is able to obtain municipal bond tax exemption for the interest income. The bank or other financial institution loan is, in effect, converted to a municipal bond and held in the bank's municipal bond tax-exempt portfolio.

Section 2. It is the intent of the Legislature that the Montana Agricultural Loan Authority created by this bill will not make direct loans. It will acquire existing loans already made and approved by a local financial institution only. It is also the specific intent of the Legislature that the state of Montana would have no financial risk on any of these loans. Whoever purchases the bonds will take the full risk that the loan that secures payment of each bond will be repaid.

Section 3. It is the specific intent of the Legislature that the Montana Agricultural Loan Authority would charge a one-time fee for issuing the bonds which fee shall not exceed the maximum amount authorized by the federal internal revenue code with regard to tax-exempt bond issues. It is the intent of the Legislature that the fee would be sufficient to pay the cost of bond counsel to review and approve each bond issue and all other administrative costs of the Montana Agricultural Loan Authority.

Section 4. This Statement of Intent is required by the rulemaking authority granted to the Montana Agricultural Loan Authority in section 4 [80-12-103] and section 8 [80-12-204]. Further, rules are contemplated for determining the procedure for granting approval by the Montana Agricultural Loan Authority and the procedure for verification by the Department of Revenue under section 23 [80-12-211].

Section 5. It is the intent of the Legislature that the Montana Agricultural Loan Authority adopt rules for the orderly handling and processing of applications under the authority granted in this Act to issue bonds secured by farm loans. The rules under section 8 [80-12-204] are intended to be sufficiently specific to allow for an objective determination by the Montana Agricultural Loan Authority of which applicants should receive approval of farm acquisition bonds from the authority. The same criteria should be established by rule for depreciable property loans with special emphasis on the need of the applicant and the applicant's possible prospects for success.

Section 6. The criteria for determining a bona fide beginning farmer in connection with the approval of the tax credit application by retiring farmers as provided in section 23 [80-12-211] shall be established by rule. The same requirements for establishing eligibility under section 8 [80-12-204] should be used under section 23 [80-12-211]."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 448, L. 1985, provided:

"Section 1. A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates authority to the agricultural loan authority to adopt rules concerning loan guaranties. The legislature intends that in adopting rules the authority look to existing rules established by the Montana economic development board [abolished and functions transferred to the Board of Investments by Ch. 581, L. 1987], on which the authority contained in this bill is patterned.

Section 2. It is the intent of the legislature that the agricultural loan authority prepare rules to establish the loan guaranty program authorized in Senate Bill 208 by addressing and providing for the following terms and conditions:

(1) Banks and other financial institutions should be required to participate in any guaranty program. It is suggested that the normal participation would be a minimum of 20% by the bank or other financial institution and 80% affected by the state guaranty authorized under Senate Bill 208.

(2) A program for guaranteeing existing operating loans made by existing banks and other financial institutions should be considered, provided all other conditions are met, including: (a) an equity in real estate or other comparable property is obtained; (b) the guaranty does not extend beyond 10 years; and (c) the bank or other financial institution agrees to reduce the interest rate to at least no higher than the rate on federal obligations for comparable maturities.

(3) Any loan guaranteed under the provisions of Senate Bill 208 should be supported by a mortgage on real estate or a lien on other comparable property.

(4) An appraisal by a qualified appraiser should be required. The loan or guaranty secured by mortgage on real estate or other comparable property should not exceed, when taken in conjunction with any prior mortgages or obligations on the real estate, 65% of the appraised value of the property pledged as security.

(5) Before any loan can be guaranteed pursuant to Senate Bill 208, the applicant should provide the agricultural loan authority with sufficient information to show that he can reasonably expect a positive cash flow from the normal operation of the agriculture enterprise. The agricultural loan authority may require a surplus cash flow by rules properly adopted.

(6) The agricultural loan authority should not guarantee loans that exist for more than 10 years.

(7) The guaranties provided in Senate Bill 208 should be targeted primarily for existing farmers and ranchers who own agricultural land on which their farming and ranching is located and whose total debt from that agricultural operation equals between 40% and 60% of their total farm and ranch assets.

(8) The department of agriculture and the agricultural loan authority should retain persons with sufficient experience in agricultural credit to adequately review all applications made for guaranty under Senate Bill 208. They shall take such time in implementing this program as may be necessary to guarantee that it will operate smoothly and properly without undue exposure or risk of loss. Experienced lenders who know and understand the Montana agricultural situation are absolutely critical to the success of this program.

(9) The bank or financial institution that originated the guaranteed loan must initiate the appropriate action to liquidate the property pledged as security. The costs of liquidation should be shared pro rata at the same rate as participation in the guaranty program."

MONTANA AGRICULTURAL CHEMICAL GROUND WATER PROTECTION ACT

Chapter Compiler's Comments

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 668, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in order to provide guidance to the department of agriculture and the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of environmental quality] concerning the administration of the provisions of the bill and the adoption of rules.

Because the departments share responsibility for certain duties established by the bill, the departments shall coordinate their rulemaking efforts and whenever possible adopt identical rules for the areas of shared responsibility, including:

(1) ground water monitoring as authorized by [sections 10 and 11] [80-15-202 and 80-15-203];

(2) field and laboratory operational quality assurance, quality control, and confirmatory procedures as authorized by [sections 7, 10, and 11] [80-15-107, 80-15-202, and 80-15-203];

(3) maintenance of confidentiality of certain data as required by [section 8] [80-15-108]; and

(4) administrative civil penalties as authorized by [section 22] [80-15-412].

The board of health and environmental sciences [now board of environmental review] is responsible for adoption of certain ground water quality standards for agricultural chemicals as required by [section 9] [80-15-201]. The board shall adopt appropriate rules as necessary to comply with the special requirements and considerations that apply to the adoption of these standards as specified in [section 9] [80-15-201], including acquisition of current and scientifically valid data from the United States environmental protection agency (EPA) and other sources and communications with EPA concerning the content and status of promulgated federal standards, nonpromulgated federal standards, and other relevant EPA regulations and materials.

The department of agriculture is responsible for the development of agricultural chemical ground water management plans. The department shall adopt appropriate rules to ensure compliance with the requirements of [section 12] [80-15-211 through 80-15-218], including procedures for the development of the plans, communication with sources of information needed for the plans, communication with citizens who may be affected by the plans, and criteria for ensuring that the content of the plans meets the objectives of preventing ground water impairment, minimizing the presence of agricultural chemicals in ground water, and protecting present and future beneficial uses of ground water as specified in [section 12] [80-15-211 through 80-15-218]. The department of agriculture shall also adopt rules specifying procedures for obtaining comments on agricultural chemical ground water management plans from the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of environmental quality], for adoption of completed plans, and for making modifications to adopted plans."

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 471, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in order to provide guidance to the board of health and environmental sciences [now board of environmental review], the department of health and environmental sciences [now department of environmental quality], and local units of government in complying with [this act].

The legislature intends that in addition to all requirements imposed by existing law and rules, the board or the department include as part of the initial publication and all subsequent publications of a rule a written finding if the rule in question contains any standards or requirements that exceed the standards or requirements imposed by comparable federal law.

If the rules are more stringent than comparable federal law, the written finding must include but is not limited to a discussion of the policy reasons and an analysis that supports the board's or department's decision that the proposed state standards or requirements protect public health or the environment of the state and that the state standards or requirements to be imposed can mitigate harm to the public health or the environment and are achievable under current technology. The department is not required to show that the federal regulation is inadequate to protect public health. The written finding must also include information from the hearing record regarding the costs to the regulated community directly attributable to the proposed state standard or requirement."

The Legislature intends that the fees be set in an amount sufficient to provide funds to administer the function for which the fee is charged. Fees shall not be set so high as to generate revenue in excess of expenses. The Legislature intends that a penalty be established by rule for failure to apply for renewal of a license required by 81-22-208. The penalty should be sufficient to encourage renewal of licenses.

The Department is required by law to process estrays at livestock markets. Section 12 [amending 81-4-605] specifically grants the Department authority to establish rules for the handling of estrays. It is the intent of the Legislature that the rules provide for collecting, holding, advertising, and selling of estrays in an expeditious manner while facilitating the movement of livestock and also protecting the property interests of the owner of the livestock."

Case Notes

Livestock Markets — Necessity and Convenience: In the regulation of livestock markets under section 46-907, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the Livestock Commission (now Board of Livestock) had the power to determine whether or not a showing of convenience and necessity had been made. Baker Sales Barn, Inc. v. Mont. Livestock Comm'n, 140 M 1, 367 P2d 775 (1962).

Power of Representing Attorney: An attorney who represented the State Board of Stock Commissioners (now Board of Livestock) had the right to appear in aid of the prosecution of one accused of grand larceny in having stolen livestock. St. v. Biggs, 45 M 400, 123 P 410 (1912).

Attorney General's Opinions

Change of Policy: A gratuitous service by a state agency, not required by statute, provided for 40 years, did not create a legal duty to continue to provide the service, absent the applicability of estoppel principles to specific cases. There was no statutory or constitutional impediment to the adoption of a new policy, provided the policy adopted conformed to the statute to be implemented and was adopted in compliance with the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. 38 A.G. Op. 69 (1980).

Authority of Department Legal Counsel in Issuing Opinions: Although certain agencies such as the Department of Livestock have been given authority by the Legislature to employ legal counsel to assist in the accomplishment of the agency's statutory duties, only the Attorney General has the specific authority to issue legal opinions to County Attorneys or other agencies of state and county government, and conflicting opinions on the same subject issued by other state officers and agencies should be disregarded. 35 A.G. Case Notes

Purpose of Alternative Livestock Transfer Regulations — Quarantine Exception to Commerce Clause Applicable: The Wallaces, licensed alternative livestock ranchers, sought to reduce the size of their elk herd by transferring about 500 elk to the Crow Indian Reservation for release into the wild. The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks requested and received an injunction prohibiting any transfer of elk to tribal lands, and the Wallaces appealed, asserting that the injunction violated Art. I, sec. 8, clause 3, of the U.S. Constitution, known as the commerce clause. The Wallaces contended that prohibiting the transfer of alternative livestock to a recipient that is not licensed by the state constituted extraterritorial application of Montana's regulatory scheme to foreign nations, other states, and Indian nations in violation of federal law. The Supreme Court found that this case falls within the quarantine exception to the traditional commerce clause analysis. The quarantine exception recognizes that states may have a local interest in protecting public safety as a competing value when reviewing state burdens on interstate commerce. With the alarming spread of serious wildlife diseases throughout the country, the state has a compelling interest to enact regulations to ensure that alternative livestock cannot simply roam into Montana and threaten native populations. Because elk released on the Crow Indian Reservation could migrate back into Montana, the restrictions regarding transfer of alternative livestock in 87-4-414 fall squarely within the quarantine exception to the commerce clause. Thus, the permanent injunction was affirmed. Hagener v. Wallace, 2002 MT 109, 309 M 473, 47 P3d 847 (2002). See also Bowman v. Chicago & NW. Ry. Co., 125 US 465 (1888).

Transfer of Alternative Livestock to Unlicensed Tribal Lands Illegal: The Wallaces, licensed alternative livestock ranchers, sought to reduce the size of their elk herd by transferring about 500 elk to the Crow Indian Reservation for subsequent release into the wild. The elk had been certified as free of tuberculosis, brucellosis, and elk-red deer hybridization by the Department of Livestock (DOL). Despite notification by the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks (DFWP) that such an act violated state law, the Wallaces transferred 68 elk to the tribe. DFWP requested and received a permanent injunction prohibiting any further transfer of elk to the tribe, and the Wallaces appealed, questioning DFWP jurisdiction. The Supreme Court noted that DFWP has a statutory basis for its jurisdiction over the Wallaces as licensees. Based on DFWP jurisdiction over exterior fencing, and the Department's knowledge that the elk would not be contained behind a game-proof fence upon delivery to the tribe, DFWP had statutory authority to seek the permanent injunction to prevent the transfer. Also, the introduction or transplantation of any wildlife into the wild, including game farm elk, requires the approval of DFWP. Further, 87-4-414 provides that alternative livestock may be kept only on a licensed alternative livestock ranch, and because the tribe is not a licensed facility under Montana law, neither DFWP nor DOL had authority to permit the transfer. The Wallaces knew that the elk were destined for an unlicensed location where they would be released into the wild and could migrate back into Montana, so the transfer violated the Wallaces' duty as licensees to act in accordance with law, and the District Court correctly enjoined the transportation of the elk. Hagener v. Wallace, 2002 MT 109, 309 M 473, 47 P3d 847 (2002).

81-2-103. Adoption of rules.

Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendment: Changed "test" to "testing" throughout the section; added "or other animals" after "disposition of livestock" in the middle of the section.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 107 (Ch. 110, L. 1981) provided: "A Statement of Intent is required for this bill because it grants rulemaking authority to the Department of Livestock.

Under the present law, the Department of Livestock may adopt rules for the inspection, testing, and treatment of certain diseases in livestock. The diseases in question can sometimes affect animals which are not normally categorized as livestock and can spread from those animals to livestock. The intent of this legislation is to allow the Department to adopt rules for the inspection, testing, and treatment of these other animals to prevent spreading of the disease."

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

1983 Amendment: In (1), at beginning inserted "If there is no violation of law or department rule", and near end inserted "designated" before "supervising officer" and "law or" before "rules"; inserted (2) delineating expenses for which an owner, agent, or person in charge is liable; inserted (3) requiring notice of expenses to be served on the violator and outlining the violator's liability for expenses absent response; and inserted (4) allowing absence of a response to constitute prima facie evidence of the reasonableness of expenses and of the violator's responsibility for those expenses.

Case Notes

Only One Employee to Be Considered "Supervising Officer": The 1974 amendment to this section changed "supervising officer or officers" to "supervising officer", indicating a legislative intent to preclude only one employee of the Department from recovering his salary from the rule violator. St. v. Sand Hills Beef, Inc., 196 M 77, 639 P2d 480, 38 St. Rep. 2140 (1981).

Penal Nature of Statute as Requiring Strict Construction: As this statute seeks to redress a wrong to the public, it is penal in nature and is to be construed strictly. The phrase "all expenses" in the second sentence of this section must (prior to the 1983 amendments) be limited to those expenses directly related to one or more of the activities listed in the first sentence of this section. St. v. Sand Hills Beef, Inc., 196 M 77, 639 P2d 480, 38 St. Rep. 2140 (1981).

"All Expenses" Construed and Applied: The phrase "all expenses" in the second sentence of this section must (prior to the 1983 amendments) be limited to those expenses directly related to one or more of the activities listed in the first sentence of this section. The Department may not recover for expenses resulting from an investigation of a possible import violation. The Department may recover for travel and per diem expenses but must show that these expenses were reasonably related to the activities listed in the first sentence of this section. The Department may recover for the rental of a private airplane used to supervise a quarantine if it was the only effective method available. St. v. Sand Hills Beef, Inc., 196 M 77, 639 P2d 480, 38 St. Rep. 2140 (1981).

Recovery of Expenses Denied: Although a portion of the salaries of two Department officers was properly recoverable from the rule violator, the carelessness and overreaching of the Department in computing the amounts made recovery impossible, resulting in the denial of all expenses. St. v. Sand Hills Beef, Inc., 196 M 77, 639 P2d 480, 38 St. Rep. 2140 (1981).

the state special revenue fund; and in (4), near end after "compliance with", inserted "other state-administered or".

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 346, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the department of livestock is authorized in [section 1] [81-2-120] to adopt rules with regard to management of publicly owned wild buffalo or bison that enter Montana on private or public land and that are from a herd that is infected with a contagious disease that may spread to persons or livestock and may jeopardize compliance with federally administered livestock disease control programs. The department may determine that rulemaking is necessary with regard to feasible methods of taking wild buffalo or bison allowed within [section 1(1)] [81-2-120(1)] or with regard to disposal of the carcasses of wild buffalo or bison as provided for in [section 1(2) and (3)] [81-2-120(2) and (3)] .

A statement of intent is also required because [section 2] [87-1-216] authorizes the department of fish, wildlife, and parks to adopt rules with regard to wild buffalo or bison that have not been exposed to or infected with a contagious disease but are in need of management because of potential damage to person or property. The department may determine that rulemaking is necessary if management of wild buffalo or bison under the provisions of [section 2] [87-1-216] includes public hunting.

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 noted that practitioners, judges, and citizens find that the criminal codes intertwined within the fish and game laws in Title 87 are difficult to read, understand, and prosecute; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 directed that revision of the Title 87 criminal code should not include policy changes to current laws and should adhere to the intent of the legislatures that crafted the laws; and

WHEREAS, in 2008, the Director of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks appointed a Title 87 criminal code revision working group, consisting of Justices of the Peace, County Attorneys, an Assistant Attorney General, legal counsel and the enforcement administrator of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and legislative staff; and

WHEREAS, the working group met numerous times and spent countless hours crafting a revision that makes the Title 87 criminal code more understandable without making substantive or policy changes to present law; and

WHEREAS, revision of the fish and game criminal statutes will benefit the hunting and fishing public, magistrates, and prosecutors by codifying crimes and penalties in a separate chapter of Montana law, rather than being intertwined throughout Title 87."

Saving Clause: Section 131, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 132, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

Effective Date: Section 4, Ch. 540, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval." Approved April 27, 1995.

Coordination Instruction: Section 3(2)(b), Ch. 540, L. 1995, provided: "If Senate Bill No. 312 is passed and approved and if it transfers to the department of livestock primary management of publicly owned wild buffalo or bison that enter Montana on private or public land, then . . . a new section is enacted to read" (see 1995 Session Law for text). Senate Bill No. 312 was approved April 10, 1995, as Ch. 346, L. 1995; therefore, the coordinated version of 81-2-121 in sec. 3(2)(b), Ch. 540, L. 1995, has been appropriately codified.

Case Notes

Placing Person's Name on Brand Certificate Not Evidence of Joint Tenancy: Ron Shaw claimed that cattle owned by his deceased parents were his property as a joint tenant because his name was on the brand certificate. The Supreme Court held that although a person's name on the certificate was prima facie evidence of ownership, it did not address the nature of that ownership and that a joint tenancy could only be created by an express declaration that the parties are creating a joint tenancy. In re Estate of Shaw, 259 M 117, 855 P2d 105, 50 St. Rep. 709 (1993) 259 M 117.

Death of Partner — Disposition of Property Held Jointly by Partners: Robert and William, brothers, opened a joint checking account in 1947, paid all ranch expenses through the account, put all ranch income in the account, and equally split net profits. All cattle were branded with either of two brands, each of which was registered in the name of "William Palmer or Robert Palmer". The brothers were also joint tenants in a commodity brokerage account. The Supreme Court held that the cattle and both accounts were partnership property not held in joint tenancy and remained so upon Robert's death. Thus, they did not pass to William as the surviving joint tenant; rather, they remained in the partnership for the purpose of winding up the partnership and paying its liabilities, after which William must account to Robert's survivor, his widow, for Robert's share of the partnership. By its very nature, partnership property must be treated differently than property of individuals, including property held by individuals as joint tenants but who are not in partnership. This rule applies regardless of the formal legal manner in which the property is held. This is a rule of equity developed over hundreds of years and codified in the Uniform Partnership Act. In re Estate of Palmer, 218 M 285, 708 P2d 242, 42 St. Rep. 1585 (1985), followed in Fiedler v. Fiedler, 266 M 133, 879 P2d 675, 51 St. Rep. 691 (1994).

Improper to Include in Marital Estate Cattle Whose Brand Not Registered to Either Husband or Wife: In determining the size of the marital estate for the purpose of a division of property in a dissolution of marriage proceeding, the District Court included within the estate cattle whose brand was registered to the parties' adult children. The Supreme Court reversed because no evidence had been produced at trial to rebut the presumption that the person whose brand appeared on cattle was the owner of those cattle. Therefore, the court held that the cattle should not have been included in the marital estate since they were not owned by the husband or wife. In re Marriage of Schultz, 199 M 332, 649 P2d 1268, 39 St. Rep. 1435 (1982).

Ownership of Cattle:

Although under this section and 70-1-307, prima facie owners of the recorded brand have the same interest in the cattle bearing their brand as shown in brand record, joint ownership of the cattle may be contradicted and overcome by other evidence under 26-1-102. Marshall v. Minlschmidt, 148 M 263, 419 P2d 486 (1966).

In action by administrator of estate of deceased partner against surviving partners to recover assets transferred by deceased during his last illness, evidence that deceased had a half interest in partnership cattle and failure of defendants to produce any of the partnership records at the trial in the lower court overcame the prima facie showing of one-third interest in the partnership cattle arising from the recording of the brand in name of three persons. Marshall v. Minlschmidt, 148 M 263, 419 P2d 486 (1966).

A transfer of a herd of cattle, at the time in the possession of a lessee, after they were segregated from other cattle, identified and counted out in the presence of seller and buyer, the lessee at the time agreeing to the substitution of owners, was sufficient to transfer possession, even though the brand of the transferor was not vented, there being uncontroverted evidence to overcome the prima facie presumption flowing from the fact that they still bore the brand of the seller. Costello v. Shields, 99 M 335, 43 P2d 879 (1935).

It was prima facie evidence that one was the owner of cattle bearing his recorded brand. Klind v. Valley County Bank of Hinsdale, 69 M 386, 222 P 439 (1924).

Vented Brand Prima Facie Evidence of Sale or Transfer: The recorded brand on livestock was prima facie proof of ownership of livestock bearing it. The presumption was rebuttable. One of the best methods of rebutting it was prescribed by section 3300, R.C.M. 1935 (since repealed), which provided that the venting of brands was prima facie evidence of sale or transfer of animals. Bohart v. Songer, 110 M 405, 101 P2d 64 (1940).

Evidence of Ownership of Brand: The best evidence of ownership of a livestock brand is the certificate of ownership executed by the recorder of marks and brands provided for by this section; therefore admission of the oral testimony of the secretary of the state Livestock Commission (now Board of Livestock) as to the owners of various brands found on horses shown by an inspector's reports with regard to shipments made by one charged with having received stolen animals was technical error. St. v. Keays, 97 M 404, 34 P2d 855 (1934).

Damages Granted for Trespassing Cattle — Sufficient Fence: A landowner who had a fence that was not a legal fence but that was sufficient to turn away cattle was entitled to damages for injury caused by defendant's trespassing cattle. Davis v. Desch, 118 M 252, 164 P2d 1015 (1946).

81-4-101. Legal fences defined.

Case Notes

Recovery for Damages for Trespassing Livestock — Livestock Owner Strict Liability: Madrid was injured while recovering defendant's bull that had trespassed onto the ranch where Madrid was employed. Madrid sued defendant for damages under a theory of strict liability in trespass, but the District Court held that 81-4-215 did not provide for strict liability and granted summary judgment for defendant. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that, in addition to the history and policy behind 81-4-215, the plain language of the statute indicates a strict liability standard because it states that the livestock owner is liable. Here, it was undisputed that defendant's bull broke through a legal fence into an enclosure and injured Madrid, who was a proper occupant of the enclosure. Thus, Madrid met all the requirements necessary to recover under 81-4-215 because defendant was strictly liable for the actions of the trespassing bull. Summary judgment was reversed, and the case was remanded for a determination of damages. Madrid v. Zenchiku Land & Livestock, 2002 MT 172, 310 M 491, 51 P3d 1137 (2002). On remand for determination of damages, defendant sought to pursue its previously raised defense of assumption of risk. The District Court concluded that defendant should be allowed to raise that defense. Plaintiff asked the Supreme Court to exercise supervisory control, which was accepted on grounds that the District Court proceeded under a mistake of law. Under Stroop v. Day, 271 M 314, 896 P2d 439 (1995), and Madrid, supra, it was held that if a strict liability statute does not expressly provide for a particular defense, that defense may not be raised. Section 81-4-215 is a strict liability statute, and the only defense supplied by the statute arises if the enclosure breached by the animal is not legal (but see 2003 amendments). Because the statute does not allow for an assumption of risk defense, the District Court committed reversible error in allowing that defense to be raised at trial. The case was remanded again for a determination of damages. Madrid v. District Court, 2002 MT 291, 312 M 517, 60 P3d 438 (2002). See also Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205 (2000).

Cause of Action for Erection of Spite Fence Solely Intended to Injure Neighbor — Availability of Injunctive Relief or Nuisance Claim — Bordeaux Overruled: Kottas built a 200-foot long, 7 feet 3 inches to 7 feet 9 inches high wooden fence that obstructed Haugen's view. Haugen sought injunctive relief for removal of the fence, alleging that it was a spite fence. The District Court concluded that it was indeed a spite fence, but declined to issue an injunction or recognize any remedy under Montana law, citing Bordeaux v. Greene, 22 M 254, 56 P 218 (1899), in holding that a person with a legal right can enforce the enjoyment of that right without inquiry into motive. The Supreme Court noted the many changes in property law since 1899 and overruled Bordeaux, adopting instead the rationale in Sundowner, Inc. v. King, 509 P2d 785 (Idaho 1973). Sundowner rejected the older rule that erection of a spite fence is not an actionable wrong and held that a property owner cannot erect a structure for the sole purpose of injuring a neighbor, such as a spite fence, which is of no beneficial use to the owner but is erected and maintained for the purpose of annoying a neighbor. A spite fence gives rise to an action for both injunctive relief and damages and may also be addressed through a nuisance claim. The Supreme Court reversed for a determination of the proper remedy. Haugen v. Kottas, 2001 MT 274, 307 M 301, 37 P3d 672 (2001).

Purpose of Legal Fence Statutes Is to Prevent Trespass by Livestock, Not Create Cause of Action for Motorists: Larson-Murphy struck a bull while driving at night and suffered extensive injuries. The lower court dismissed her case with no accompanying legal memorandum providing a legal basis for its decision. However, the bull's owners had argued that they could not be held liable based on the no duty rule of open-range law. Larson-Murphy argued that the defendants were negligent per se for failing to maintain a legal fence as required by law. The Supreme Court held that its past decision in Indendi v. Workman, 272 M 64, 899 P2d 1085 (1995), was incorrect in substituting the court's judgment for the Legislature's by creating a statutory duty on livestock owners for maintaining legal fences for the protection of motorists. The Supreme Court stated that the purpose of legal fence statutes is to prevent livestock from trespassing on the land of others and that the statutes apply strictly to the relationship between the livestock owners and landowners. The Supreme Court held that the statutes requiring a legal fence do not create any statutory duty on the part of livestock owners with respect to motorists; therefore, a violation of the statutes cannot serve as the basis for a finding of negligence per se in the case of an injured motorist. The Supreme Court went on to state that whether or not a livestock owner has violated common-law duty of care with respect to fencing livestock in areas where injuries to motorists may be foreseeable is for the finder of fact and depends on the individual circumstances involved in each case. Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000).

Failure to Maintain Legal Fence as Basis for Finding of Negligence Per Se: Nothing in this section limits the civil liability of the owner of a defective fence to injury to livestock or precludes liability for other types of injuries to persons or property resulting from the livestock owner's failure to properly contain animals by means of a legal fence. Therefore, a violation of this section can be the basis for a finding of negligence per se when that violation results in injury to a motorist or passenger traveling on the highways. Indendi v. Workman, 272 M 64, 899 P2d 1085, 52 St. Rep. 644 (1995), overruled, to the extent that Indendi holds that a violation of this section may serve as a basis for a finding of negligence per se with regard to an injury to a motorist on a public highway, in Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000). See also VanLuchene v. St., 244 M 397, 797 P2d 932 (1990).

Trespass on Unfenced Lands:

One turning his cattle out to graze unrestrained on lands where he had a right to do so was under no obligation to prevent them from entering on another's uninclosed premises and was not responsible for damage occasioned by their entry thereon through following their natural instincts, but absence of lawful fence did not justify willful trespass. Dunbar v. Emigh, 117 M 287, 158 P2d 311 (1945).

A lawful fence entirely surrounding his lands was a condition precedent to the right of a landowner to recover damages from owners of livestock trespassing thereon unless the latter, with knowledge of the private ownership of unfenced land, willfully herded them thereon or drove them to a point so near the boundaries that they were certain to go upon and feed thereon. Schreiner v. Deep Creek Stock Ass'n, 68 M 104, 217 P 663 (1923).

Where a livestock owner, claiming a strip of land 30 feet wide and one-half mile in length within plaintiff's inclosure, turned his cattle loose under circumstances which showed that it was intended that they should go into plaintiff's inclosure and graze upon his lands, he was liable for the damage done by them to plaintiff's pasture, the fact that plaintiff did not maintain any fence between the strip and defendant's land being no defense. Dorman v. Erie, 63 M 579, 208 P 908 (1922).

Right to Build Fence: The provisions prescribing what are legal fences and defining the duty to maintain and repair partition fences did not affect the right of an adjoining owner to build a division fence partly on the other's land. Hoar v. Hennessy, 29 M 253, 74 P 452 (1903).

81-4-102. Construction of auto pass not to deprive legal fence of character.

Case Notes

Purpose of Legal Fence Statutes Is to Prevent Trespass by Livestock, Not Create Cause of Action for Motorists: Larson-Murphy struck a bull while driving at night and suffered extensive injuries. The lower court dismissed her case with no accompanying legal memorandum providing a legal basis for its decision. However, the bull's owners had argued that they could not be held liable based on the no duty rule of open-range law. Larson-Murphy argued that the defendants were negligent per se for failing to maintain a legal fence as required by law. The Supreme Court held that its past decision in Indendi v. Workman, 272 M 64, 899 P2d 1085 (1995), was incorrect in substituting the court's judgment for the Legislature's by creating a statutory duty on livestock owners for maintaining legal fences for the protection of motorists. The Supreme Court stated that the purpose of legal fence statutes is to prevent livestock from trespassing on the land of others and that the statutes apply strictly to the relationship between the livestock owners and landowners. The Supreme Court held that the statutes requiring a legal fence do not create any statutory duty on the part of livestock owners with respect to motorists; therefore, a violation of the statutes cannot serve as the basis for a finding of negligence per se in the case of an injured motorist. The Supreme Court went on to state that whether or not a livestock owner has violated common-law duty of care with respect to fencing livestock in areas where injuries to motorists may be foreseeable is for the finder of fact and depends on the individual circumstances involved in each case. Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000).

Failure to Maintain Legal Fence as Basis for Finding of Negligence Per Se: Nothing in 81-4-101 limits the civil liability of the owner of a defective fence to injury to livestock or precludes liability for other types of injuries to persons or property resulting from the livestock owner's failure to properly contain animals by means of a legal fence. Therefore, a violation of 81-4-101 can be the basis for a finding of negligence per se when that violation results in injury to a motorist or passenger traveling on the highways. Indendi v. Workman, 272 M 64, 899 P2d 1085, 52 St. Rep. 644 (1995), overruled, to the extent that Indendi holds that a violation of 81-4-101 may serve as a basis for a finding of negligence per se with regard to an injury to a motorist on a public highway, in Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000). See also VanLuchene v. St., 244 M 397, 797 P2d 932 (1990).

Failure to Provide Auto Pass — No Illegal Fence: Where appellant contended that under this section the Department of Highways' (now Department of Transportation's) failure to provide an auto pass resulted in an illegal fence, the court held that this section merely allows auto passes without making an otherwise legal fence illegal and that failure to provide an auto pass did not invoke liability under 81-4-103. Ambrogini v. Todd, 197 M 111, 642 P2d 1013, 39 St. Rep. 400 (1982).

81-4-103. Civil liability.

Case Notes

Duty of City to Inspect City Property for Hazards: Plaintiff was injured after tripping on a fence wire while walking her dog at night in an unmaintained grassy area on city right-of-way next to a city street. Plaintiff contended that the city was negligent in allowing a dangerous and hazardous condition to exist on a public right-of-way and guilty of negligence per se under this section for allowing a public nuisance. The District Court granted summary judgment, determining as a matter of law that the city owed plaintiff no duty of care because: (1) she was not walking on a sidewalk, street, or path of any kind; (2) the city did not invite her to travel in that area; and (3) there were no city lights or signs in the vicinity. On appeal, plaintiff cited Richardson v. Corvallis Pub. School District No. 1, 286 M 309, 950 P2d 748 (1997), contending that the city ignored its duty to maintain the public streets, sidewalks, and rights-of-way within corporate limits in a reasonably safe condition for public travel by never going onto the premises, mowing it, raking it, or removing debris and that if routine maintenance had been done, the wire would have been found and removed. The Supreme Court agreed. The city's contention that it did not owe a duty of care in this case, because there was nothing in the area suggesting that it was a walkway or inviting the public to use it as such, failed under the Richardson test because of the city's neglect in exercising ordinary care or skill in the management of its property. Reasonable minds could differ on whether the city should have taken some action to inspect or maintain the property, so summary judgment was improper and thus reversed for a jury determination of negligence, including possible contributory negligence. Dobrocke v. Columbia Falls, 2000 MT 179, 300 M 348, 8 P3d 71, 57 St. Rep. 718 (2000).

Failure to Establish Negligence Per Se When City Not Owner of Fence That Caused Injury: Plaintiff was injured after tripping on a fence wire while walking her dog at night in an unmaintained grassy area on city right-of-way next to a city street. Plaintiff contended that the city was negligent per se for creating or maintaining a public or private nuisance in violation of this section. The District Court found, and the Supreme Court agreed, that the city was not negligent per se because in order to establish negligence per se, it must be proved among other things that a defendant violated a particular statute and that the statute was intended to regulate a member of the defendant's class. This section applies to the owner of a nuisance fence, but nothing in the record indicated that the city owned a fence in the area of the accident that would make the city a member of the regulated class or that the city created or maintained a nuisance fence. The city could not be in violation of a statute that it had no duty to observe. Dobrocke v. Columbia Falls, 2000 MT 179, 300 M 348, 8 P3d 71, 57 St. Rep. 718 (2000).

Livestock on Roadway — Coverage of Statute: Plaintiff sued defendant alleging that injuries he sustained in a motorcycle accident were caused by the presence of defendant's goats on the road. Defendant contended that 81-4-201 and 81-4-202, enacted in 1895, were enacted to protect the property of landowners, and therefore motorists were not a protected class under the statutes. Defendant moved for summary judgment. The court found that the continuing in effect of these statutes and their amendment in 1945 was part of the historical process of conforming the open-range law to the needs of the modern world. The court held that the complaint stated a cause of action and denied the motion for summary judgment. Read v. Buckner, 514 F. Supp. 281, 38 St. Rep. 735 (D.C. Mont. 1981).

Trespassing Stock — Fence of Landowner: When a defendant turned his goats out without fencing them and without a herder, the court did not err in holding that the plaintiff was not precluded from recovering by reason of the condition of his fences. Doornbos v. Ihde, 124 M 570, 228 P2d 235 (1951).

81-4-203. Open range defined.

Case Notes

Open-Range No Duty Rule Not Applicable to Legal Relationship Between Livestock Owners and Motorists: Larson-Murphy struck a bull while driving at night and suffered extensive injuries. The lower court dismissed her case with no accompanying legal memorandum providing a legal basis for its decision. However, the bull's owners had argued that they could not be held liable based on the no duty rule of open-range law. The Supreme Court held that the no duty rule under the open-range doctrine does not apply to the legal relationship between livestock owners and motorists. However, the law of the open range remains the law of the state, and the term "open range" includes all highways outside of private enclosures used by the public unless modified by the Legislature. (See 27-1-724 enacted in 2001.) Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000).

Absence of Proof of Open Range or Fenced Highway — Directed Verdict Improper: Indendi hit a horse on Highway 84, killing the animal, sustaining personal injuries, and totaling her vehicle. She alleged negligence on the part of the horse owner as well as violations of fencing and livestock herding laws and open-range exceptions. The horse owner counterclaimed for loss of the horse. The District Court directed a verdict in favor of the horse owner. A directed verdict may be granted only when it appears that the nonmoving party cannot recover on any view of the evidence, including the legitimate inferences drawn from that evidence. Absent proof that the land was open range and that Highway 84 was a fenced highway, it was improper for the court to direct a verdict premised on the horse owner's satisfaction of the duty exclusion in 60-7-202(2). Indendi v. Workman, 272 M 64, 899 P2d 1085, 52 St. Rep. 644 (1995), following Ambrogini v. Todd, 197 M 111, 642 P2d 1013 (1982).

Livestock Wandering on Open Range — Public Nuisance Doctrine Inapplicable: As a matter of law, the public nuisance abatement statutes should not be used to require a livestock owner to prevent stock from running free on county roads in an open range area. State ex rel. Martin v. Finley, 227 M 242, 738 P2d 497, 44 St. Rep. 1050 (1987), followed in Williams v. Selstad, 235 M 137, 766 P2d 247, 45 St. Rep. 2254 (1988).

Overgrazing Damages Remanded — No Offset — Open Range Law: The District Court ruled that Helehan was liable for $3,000 in overgrazing damages caused to Ueland's property by horses allowed on Helehan's land and that Ueland was not entitled to reimbursement for a $3,000 fence. The court offset these amounts. The Supreme Court remanded, finding that the costs did not offset since damages flowed from Helehan to Ueland but not from Ueland to Helehan. However, the error was harmless since under Montana's open range law Helehan could not be legally obligated to restrain the horses and could not be held liable for damages occurring prior to the time the fence was built. Helehan v. Ueland, 223 M 228, 725 P2d 1192, 43 St. Rep. 1679 (1986).

Erosion of Open Range Law: Generally, an open range designation implies that an owner is not liable for his wandering livestock. Prior to 1974, a rancher was liable only for willful failure to keep his livestock off a federal-aid primary highway. However, with the 1974 amendment of 60-7-201, ranchers are now liable for negligent conduct that results in the presence of their cattle on the rights-of-way of such highways. Ambrogini v. Todd, 197 M 111, 642 P2d 1013, 39 St. Rep. 400 (1982).

Recovery for Damages for Trespassing Livestock — Livestock Owner Strict Liability: Madrid was injured while recovering defendant's bull that had trespassed onto the ranch where Madrid was employed. Madrid sued defendant for damages under a theory of strict liability in trespass, but the District Court held that this section did not provide for strict liability and granted summary judgment for defendant. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that, in addition to the history and policy behind this section, the plain language of the statute indicates a strict liability standard because it states that the livestock owner is liable. (See 2003 amendment.) Here, it was undisputed that defendant's bull broke through a legal fence into an enclosure and injured Madrid, who was a proper occupant of the enclosure. Thus, Madrid met all the requirements necessary to recover under this section because defendant was strictly liable for the actions of the trespassing bull. Summary judgment was reversed, and the case was remanded for a determination of damages. Madrid v. Zenchiku Land & Livestock, 2002 MT 172, 310 M 491, 51 P3d 1137 (2002). On remand for determination of damages, defendant sought to pursue its previously raised defense of assumption of risk. The District Court concluded that defendant should be allowed to raise that defense. Plaintiff asked the Supreme Court to exercise supervisory control, which was accepted on grounds that the District Court proceeded under a mistake of law. Under Stroop v. Day, 271 M 314, 896 P2d 439 (1995), and Madrid, supra, it was held that if a strict liability statute does not expressly provide for a particular defense, that defense may not be raised. This section is a strict liability statute, and the only defense supplied by the statute arises if the enclosure breached by the animal is not legal (but see 2003 amendments). Because the statute does not allow for an assumption of risk defense, the District Court committed reversible error in allowing that defense to be raised at trial. The case was remanded again for a determination of damages. Madrid v. District Court, 2002 MT 291, 312 M 517, 60 P3d 438 (2002). See also Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205 (2000).

The Supreme Court stated that the purpose of legal fence statutes is to prevent livestock from trespassing on the land of others and that the statutes apply strictly to the relationship between the livestock owners and landowners. The Supreme Court held that the statutes requiring a legal fence do not create any statutory duty on the part of livestock owners with respect to motorists; therefore, a violation of the statutes cannot serve as the basis for a finding of negligence per se in the case of an injured motorist. The Supreme Court went on to state that whether or not a livestock owner has violated common-law duty of care with respect to fencing livestock in areas where injuries to motorists may be foreseeable is for the finder of fact and depends on the individual circumstances involved in each case. Erosion of Open Range Law: Generally, an open range designation implies that an owner is not liable for his wandering livestock. However, with the 1974 amendment of 60-7-201, ranchers are now liable for negligent conduct that results in the presence of their cattle on the rights-of-way of such highways. Ambrogini v. Criminal Sanctions Not Available: Available remedies for damage caused by trespassing cattle did not include a criminal sanction. St. v. Blakely, 181 M 118, 592 P2d 501, 36 St. Rep. 567 (1979).

Complaint — Sufficiency:

In action to restrain trespass by livestock and to recover for partial loss of a growing crop of barley then being trampled and grazed down by livestock after defendant had removed a long-standing section line fence bounding one side of a field that plaintiff had just planted in barley, the complaint alleging a malicious removal of the fence was sufficient to state a cause of action for trespass of cattle upon plaintiff's property, although he did not allege a secure enclosure of the barley field but did so testify. Thompson v. Mattuschek, 134 M 500, 333 P2d 1022 (1959).

In an action on an implied contract to recover the reasonable value of the pasturage of livestock, the complaint alleging ownership and right of possession in plaintiff, the ownership of the animals in defendant, that the lands were enclosed by a fence that the defendant broke down, that the defendant pastured the animals on the land, and the reasonable value of the pasturage per head a month, stated a cause of action. Dorman v. Erie, 63 M 579, 208 P 908 (1922).

Range Law: Under common law, livestock had to be fenced in, but under range law, they had to be fenced out. Thompson v. Mattuschek, 134 M 500, 333 P2d 1022 (1959).

Trespass on Unfenced Land:

Under the fence statute, one turning his livestock at large on land where he had the right to do so was not liable in damages for their invasion of private lands of another failing to maintain lawful fence, though he expected and intended such trespass to be committed. Dunbar v. Emigh, 117 M 287, 158 P2d 311 (1945).

When a plaintiff, the owner of unenclosed lands within a forest reserve in which defendants had a permit to graze their cattle, in his action for damages for depasturing his land relied upon the allegation in the answer that the defendants were running their cattle "under herd" and "in charge of herders" as an admission that the animals were placed upon his premises by the defendants' agents and did not introduce evidence that they were willfully or negligently driven or permitted to remain thereon, it appearing on the contrary that the herders endeavored to keep them off his premises and drove them therefrom when found there, a judgment in his favor was unwarranted under the above rules. Schreiner v. Deep Creek Stock Ass'n, 68 M 104, 217 P 663 (1923).

When a livestock owner, claiming a strip of land 30 feet wide and one-half mile in length within plaintiff's enclosure, turned his cattle loose under circumstances which showed that it was intended that they should go into plaintiff's enclosure and graze upon his lands, he was liable for the damage done by them to plaintiff's pasture. The fact that the plaintiff did not maintain any fence between the strip and defendant's land was no defense. Dorman v. Erie, 63 M 579, 208 P 908 (1922).

The owners of animals could not knowingly and willfully drive or herd them upon the lands of another, whether such lands were protected by an enclosure or not, and to avoid encroaching upon his neighbor, he must at his peril ascertain the line at which his rights end and his neighbor's begin. Herrin v. Sieben, 46 M 226, 127 P 323 (1912), overruled on other grounds in Simonson v. McDonald, 131 M 494, 311 P2d 986 (1957).

This section and the custom of the state making the maintenance of a legal fence by a landowner a prerequisite to recovery for trespass by domestic animals of another did not charge the landowner with the duty to keep cattle lawfully at large from coming on his land or make their entry thereupon rightful so as to make him liable for injuries to such animals caused by the existence of dangerous agencies on the land, but not wantonly or intentionally caused. Beinhorn v. Griswold, 27 M 79, 69 P 557 (1902).

There could be no recovery for damages sustained to the owner of unenclosed lands by reason of sheep straying or being driven thereupon and destroying the grass and verdure unless it appeared that they were maliciously driven upon such lands for the purpose of causing injury. Fant v. Lyman, 9 M 61, 22 P 120 (1889).

A lawful fence entirely surrounding the grounds or premises entered or some obstruction equivalent thereto was a condition precedent to the right to bring an action against the owner of trespassing animals for damages sustained by reason of such trespass. Smith v. Williams, 2 M 195 (1874).

Herd Animals: The provisions of this section applied to all domestic animals but had no application to animals in charge of a herder. Herrin v. Sieben, 46 M 226, 127 P 323 (1912), overruled on other grounds in Simonson v. McDonald, 131 M 494, 311 P2d 986 (1957).

Unlawful Fencing of Public Domain: A person who unlawfully fenced a portion of the public domain acquired only a tortious possession that did not authorize him to maintain an action against another for depasturing such land or entitle him to restrain the latter by injunction from continuing to depasture the land. Clemmons v. Gillette, 33 M 321, 83 P 879 (1905).

Nonapplicability to Willful Appropriation of Another's Herd: This section applied to trespasses committed by animals running at large without the knowledge of the owner and not to a case where one knowingly and willfully appropriated the use of another's land. Monroe v. Cannon, 24 M 316, 61 P 863 (1900). See also Rea Bros. Sheep Co. v. Rudi, 46 M 149, 127 P 85 (1912); Light v. U.S., 220 US 523, 55 L Ed 570, 31 S Ct 485 (1911); Musselshell Cattle Co. v. Compiler's Comments 1995 Amendment: Chapter 92 in third sentence of (3), at beginning, substituted "owner or person in charge of the animal" for "defendant" and in two places substituted "claimant" for "plaintiff"; in (4), after "misdemeanor", substituted "punishable as provided in 46-18-212" for "and shall be fined not less than $100 or more than $500"; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: In (1), reduced the written notice period from 72 to 24 hours and deleted a final sentence that read: "In all cases a copy of the notice shall also be posted at a point where the animal was taken."

Case Notes

Dismissal for Insufficient Evidence Not Appealable: Where the defendants were charged with the theft of calves belonging to another and the charges were dismissed for insufficient evidence because the State did not prove the defendants' failure to give notice under 81-4-217, the dismissal of the charges could not be appealed by the State. Under the rationale of St. v. Cool, 174 M 99, 568 P2d 567 (1977) (citing U.S. v. Ball, 163 US 662 (1895), and Fong Foo v. U.S., 369 US 141 (1962)), a dismissal for insufficient evidence under the circumstances of this case operates as an acquittal and an appeal constitutes a violation of the defendants' rights against double jeopardy. St. v. Greenwalt, 204 M 196, 663 P2d 1178, 40 St. Rep. 767 (1983).

Personal Injury in Removing Animal: The notice requirements of this section were irrelevant to an action against the owner of a trespassing mule for personal injuries sustained in attempting to remove the mule. Ekwortzel v. Parker, 156 M 477, 482 P2d 559 (1971).

Constitutionality: This statute is constitutional. Doornbos v. Ihde, 124 M 570, 228 P2d 235 (1951).

Extent of Damages — Evidence: When evidence was conflicting as to the value of goats and as to the extent of damages and there was ample evidence to show that the value of goats was not disproportionate to damage caused, the Supreme Court could not say that trial court was not justified in retaining all the goats to satisfy his claim. Doornbos v. Ihde, 124 M 570, 228 P2d 235 (1951).

Fence — Necessity: Under some circumstances a person was permitted to take animals into possession regardless of whether the premises were enclosed by a legal fence. Doornbos v. Ihde, 124 M 570, 228 P2d 235 (1951).

Injury to Animals: When the evidence was conflicting as to whether goats were injured by failure of the taker up to milk them, the trial court did not err in not awarding damages on a cross-complaint especially when the owner could have milked them himself where confined or could have regained possession of them by giving bond. Doornbos v. Ihde, 124 M 570, 228 P2d 235 (1951).

Notice — Waiver of Defects: When the owner of goats was personally served with notice and went and examined the goats in the corral and also examined the field in which they were grazing to determine damage, he waived any defect in notice. Doornbos v. Ihde, 124 M 570, 228 P2d 235 (1951).

Place of Posting Notice: A notice, required to be posted under former law (deleted by amendment, 1983), where goats were confined was a notice where they were "taken up", although the place where they were found grazing was from one to one and one-half miles from the place where they were confined. Doornbos v. Ihde, 124 M 570, 228 P2d 235 (1951).

Grazing District Law — Effect:

No provision of the grazing district law (Title 76, ch. 16) gave the owner of land within a grazing district, but not owned or controlled by it, the right to impound livestock of another on such land or claim a lien for the keep thereof under this section. McKee v. Clark, 115 M 438, 144 P2d 1000 (1943).

Under law pertaining to open range, when plaintiff's land was unfenced and there was no evidence that defendant herded his horses upon the plaintiff's land or overstocked his own range so that horses would be compelled to go on plaintiff's land for food, the plaintiff was not entitled to any damages for trespass of the horses or compensation for care and feed for them while he held them impounded. McKee v. Clark, 115 M 438, 144 P2d 1000 (1943).

Jurisdiction of Court: When the plaintiff might have sued under this section for $350 because of the wrongful rescue of animals which had been trespassing upon his premises, but his demand was for only $286, a Justice's Court had jurisdiction of the cause. Reynolds v. Smith, 48 M 149, 135 P 1190 (1913).

Part 3
Herd Districts

Part Case Notes

Notice to Landowners Jurisdictional: Prior to amendment by Ch. 171, L. 1931, the notice required by 81-4-301 through 81-4-304 to be given by the Board of County Commissioners of the presentation of a petition for the creation of a herd district to landowners in the proposed district was jurisdictional, substantial compliance with the requirements of the statutes being indispensable to action by the Board. State ex rel. Keane v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 83 M 540, 273 P 290 (1929).

Width of District at Point Where City Located: When the record on appeal did not show that a county seat lying within the district was an incorporated city, the contention of relator that upon elimination of the area embraced within the city limits the district was less than 3 miles in width, contrary to the former provisions of 81-4-301 through 81-4-304, could not be upheld. State ex rel. Keane v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 83 M 540, 273 P 290 (1929).

Width of District Measured at Right Angles: When a petition for the creation of a herd district, lying north and south, showed that its eastern boundary was a river bank and that its width, measured at right angles to the base line (a line projected as nearly parallel to the course of the river), was at all points at least 3 miles in width, this was sufficient despite the fact that at the point where the river formed a bend toward the west extending about 2 miles within the territory of the proposed district, the distance between the peak of the bend and a point on the western boundary, when measured at an acute angle northwestward, was but a mile and a half. The width of a tract of land must be measured at right angles to its length. State ex rel. Keane v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 83 M 540, 273 P 290 (1929).

Case Notes

Right-of-Way Applicable to Operation and Maintenance Road in Herd District Within Irrigation Project: As part of the Huntley irrigation project, Yellowstone County constructed an operation and maintenance road along one side of an irrigation canal. A nearby property owner later used the road to move cattle, and after plaintiffs complained to the County Sheriff several times over a period of years, plaintiffs installed cattle guards. The county subsequently removed the cattle guards, claiming that the road was a county road and that the county had a 60-foot right-of-way, giving it the right to remove obstructions, including cattle guards and overgrowth from trees obstructing the road. The county then trimmed and killed several of plaintiffs' trees, and plaintiffs sued the county, contesting the county's right-of-way. The District Court examined the historical use of the road and determined that the county's right-of-way was about 20 feet. The court also held that because the property was in a herd district and because all the parties preferred cattle guards to gates, the county was required to replace the cattle guards. The county appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The county road was superimposed on the operation and maintenance road and thus was not more or less extensive than the operation and maintenance road, so the easement was 20 feet as the road currently existed. Further, because the project was a federal operation, the rights of the federal government prevailed. A witness for the federal government testified that cattle guards were preferable, so ordering the replacement of the cattle guards was also not erroneous. Weatherwax v. Yellowstone County, 2003 MT 215, 317 M 119, 75 P3d 788 (2003).

Open-Range No Duty Rule — Applies Only to Relationship Between Livestock Owner and Motorists: Larson-Murphy struck a bull while driving at night and suffered extensive injuries. The lower court dismissed her case with no accompanying legal memorandum providing a legal basis for its decision. However, the bull's owners had argued that they could not be held liable based on the no duty rule of open-range law. The Supreme Court stated that open-range laws allow certain livestock to legally occupy a highway but that state laws also permit a motorist to legally occupy the same highway. There is no statute that provides that a livestock owner is not liable for injuries suffered by motorists colliding with the livestock owner's livestock. Therefore, the Supreme Court stated that any assertion of legal duties arising from the legal relationship between owners of livestock and motorists is beyond the scope of Montana's statutory open-range doctrine. The Supreme Court held that because both livestock and a motorist may have an equal right to lawfully occupy a highway, the livestock owner and the motorist each owe the other a legal duty to use the highway so as not to injuriously interfere with the other's right of use. Therefore, ascertaining the precise standard of care that each owes the other must be viewed in light of the circumstances under which the harm occurs. The Supreme Court reversed the directed verdict in favor of the defendants and remanded the case for a determination by the trier of fact to determine if the bull's owners had violated their duty of care to Larson-Murphy. (See 27-1-724 enacted in 2001.) Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000).

Open-Range No Duty Rule Not Applicable to Legal Relationship Between Livestock Owners and Motorists: Larson-Murphy struck a bull while driving at night and suffered extensive injuries. The lower court dismissed her case with no accompanying legal memorandum providing a legal basis for its decision. However, the bull's owners had argued that they could not be held liable based on the no duty rule of open-range law. The Supreme Court held that the no duty rule under the open-range doctrine does not apply to the legal relationship between livestock owners and motorists. However, the law of the open range remains the law of the state, and the term "open range" includes all highways outside of private enclosures used by the public unless modified by the Legislature. (See 27-1-724 enacted in 2001.) Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000).

Horse on County Highway — No Duty to Motorists — Open Range Doctrine Not Changed: Plaintiff sued for injuries she received when a horse ran onto a county highway located within a herd district. The lower court granted defendants summary judgment on the basis that the livestock owners owed no duty to the plaintiff as a matter of law. The Supreme Court affirmed. The herd district statutes were designed only to protect other landowners and thus were not exceptions to the open-range doctrine. The herd district statutes were not designed to protect motorists, but were only intended to protect landowners and owners of livestock. Williams v. Selstad, 235 M 137, 766 P2d 247, 45 St. Rep. 2254 (1988), overruled, to the extent that Selstad holds that the open-range no duty rule applies to the legal relationship between livestock owners and motorists, in Larson-Murphy v. Steiner, 2000 MT 334, 303 M 96, 15 P3d 1205, 57 St. Rep. 1411 (2000) (see 27-1-724 enacted in 2001).

Strict Compliance Necessary: The provisions of the herd law had to be strictly followed in order to afford protection to those responsible for the impounding and sale of animals under its authority, and where they are not so followed, the taking constitutes a taking of private property without due process of law and a conversion of the property. Part 5
Roundup of Abandoned Horses

Part Case Notes

Constitutionality: One had no right to use his property so as to injure others and no vested right to the enjoyment of property if he failed to pay taxes thereon; hence this part, designed to rid the public range of abandoned horses, i.e., such as are unbranded or escaped taxation the previous year and as such declared a public nuisance, was not objectionable as retroactive legislation as interfering with the owner's vested right in the animals. The law afforded him an opportunity to protect his right if he saw fit to do so and in effect did no more than provide a further means of enforcing his obligations not to use his property so as to injure others and to pay taxes on the animals. Durocher v. Myers, 84 M 225, 274 P 1062 (1929).

Strict Compliance Required: To afford protection to those in charge of a roundup of abandoned horses and their subsequent sale, the provisions of this part had to be strictly followed, and if not and the sale was held before the hour of 8 a.m. (see 81-4-510), it was illegal and constituted a conversion of the animals. Failure to Make Report: The owner of abandoned range horses seeking to recover funds in the county treasury realized from their sale could claim only the balance in the county treasury over and above the charges against the horses for taxes, penalties, and roundup fees. Therefore, when there was no balance to be claimed, the owner's property rights were not affected by failure of the roundup foreman to make the report required by this section within the proper time. His contention that this section and 81-4-512 construed together were unconstitutional if not construed in a certain way could not be considered. Durocher v. Myers, 84 M 225, 274 P 1062 (1929).

Code Commissioner Correction: The Code Commissioner has substituted the department of justice for the division of motor vehicles in this section, because sec. 14, Ch. 503, L. 1985, repealed 2-15-2002, which had statutorily created the division, and sec. 1, Ch. 503 amended Title 61, Motor Vehicles, to substitute "department" for "division" throughout that title. The apparent intent was to eliminate the statutory status of the division, and therefore the Code Commissioner has changed statutory references accordingly (see 1-11-101(2)(g)).

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 175, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent for this bill is necessary because it requires the department of livestock to adopt rules implementing a permit system for the transportation of sheep within or out of the state. The legislature intends that the rules be designed to provide the owner with protection against the theft of his sheep by requiring a permit for the removal of sheep:

(a) from one county to another county within the state; and

(b) out of the state.

Provision must be made for the form of the permit and for issuance of the permit by state livestock inspectors. The department shall also determine a fee for the issuance of the permit, commensurate with the cost of operating the permit system.

It is the intent of the legislature that the department of livestock monitor this permit system to determine the system's effectiveness prior to the termination date of this legislation."

Case Notes

Lack of Evidence of Harassment by Dog — Conviction Upheld Despite Misapplication of Statute: Walter shot a dog on March 7, 1993, and was subsequently convicted of misdemeanor cruelty to animals under 45-8-211. Walter defended on the basis that his actions were justified under this section. The Supreme Court held that Walter, the state, and the District Court applied the version of this section effective October 1993, but should have applied the version effective in March that did not authorize the shooting of a dog that harasses livestock. However, the Supreme Court also found that the Deputy Sheriff witness testified that there was no evidence that the dog was harassing livestock, as the owner of the sheep testified. Citing St. v. Bower, 254 M 1, 833 P2d 1106 (1992), the Supreme Court noted that the credibility of witnesses and weight of evidence are for the trier of fact to determine and, citing Higham v. Red Lodge, 247 M 400, 807 P2d 195 (1991), that the Supreme Court will affirm a correct result regardless of the reasoning used by the lower court. Because there was no evidence of any action by the dog falling within either version of this section the Supreme Court affirmed the conviction. St. v. Walter, 266 M 429, 880 P2d 1346, 51 St. Rep. 903 (1994).

Application of Section: This section applied to any dog regardless of its value. Granier v. Chagnon, 122 M 327, 203 P2d 982 (1949).

"Livestock" Defined: "Livestock" as employed in this section meant domestic animals or beasts generally collected, used, or raised on a farm or ranch, such as cattle, sheep, swine, goats, horses, mules, donkeys, and similar stock. (See 1995 amendment.) Granier v. Chagnon, 122 M 327, 203 P2d 982 (1949).

Sufficiency of Evidence: In action for damages for killing of dog, evidence that defendant had suffered the loss of several sheep due to unidentified raiders and that on one occasion when there was a disturbance among the sheep, the defendant with others went to the place from which the sheep came and finding a dog tearing at a freshly killed sheep, killed the dog, was sufficient to sustain a verdict in favor of defendant although there was no evidence that anyone had seen the dog kill the sheep. Granier v. Chagnon, 122 M 327, 203 P2d 982 (1949).

81-7-402. Liability of owner of dog for damages to livestock or poultry.

Case Notes

Common-Law Rule Regarding Killing of Dog in Defense of Property Not Abrogated by Statute: The defendant acted reasonably under the common law when he shot the dog that was killing his chickens. At common law, an owner of domestic fowl has a right to kill a dog attacking or menacing their safety if it is necessary for their protection, and that right was not abrogated by this section on the subject that does not limit, either expressly or impliedly, that right. Grabenstein v. Sunsted, 237 M 254, 772 P2d 865, 46 St. Rep. 780 (1989). See also St. v. Walter, 266 M 429, 880 P2d 1346, 51 St. Rep. 903 (1994).

81-7-502. Rulemaking authority.

Compiler's Comments

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 497 (Ch. 704, L. 1979) provided: "Section 4 [81-7-503] of this bill requires the Department of Livestock to adopt rules regulating aerial hunting. It is the intent of this bill that any rules so adopted not interfere with the needs of livestock producers protecting their livestock from predation. At the same time it is the intent of this bill that such rules protect the interests of persons who do not wish aerial hunting to occur over land in their control. Finally, such rules shall reflect the purpose that aerial hunting is permitted for the purpose of reducing livestock losses due to predation." The reference in this statement of intent to section 4 is apparently in error. Section 2, codified as 81-7-502, is apparently the correct reference, because it provides for rulemaking authority.

The Department of Livestock is given, under section 4 [81-8-231], authority to enforce and to adopt rules necessary to carry out the act. It is the legislative intent in delegating this rulemaking authority that the discretion granted the Department of Livestock is for the purpose of supervising and regulating livestock markets, livestock brokers, and livestock dealers in the state; of regulating the properties, facilities, operations, services, and practices of all livestock markets, livestock brokers, and livestock dealers; and of supervising and regulating livestock markets in all matters affecting the relationship between the livestock market and owners of livestock and between the livestock markets and purchasers of livestock.

A major concern of the act is to establish stiff penalties for unfair, deceptive, and fraudulent market practices. It is intended that by providing stricter penalties and that by giving the Department of Livestock authority to assess civil penalties for some violations, livestock marketing in Montana will be strengthened.

It is the intent of this bill that in the adoption of rules under section 4 [81-8-231] and in the general enforcement of this act that the Livestock Department's first function is to protect livestock producers consigning livestock to markets or selling livestock to or through dealers and brokers. Secondly, it is the intent of the legislature that so long as the purpose of protecting livestock producers is met, the enforcement and rules under this act not unduly interfere with the operations of the businesses of livestock markets, livestock dealers, and livestock brokers."

Attorney General's Opinions

Title Information: In enacting this section the Legislature did not intend to require the Department to act as an insurer of title to livestock; rather, the intent was to provide a clearinghouse at each major market where title information on branded livestock would be readily available. 38 A.G. Op. 69 (1980).

Change of Policy — Registering Security Interest in Livestock: By following the Montana Administrative Procedure Act, Title 2, ch. 4, part 3, the Department could adopt a new policy interpreting its responsibilities under this section. The policy did not need to provide the markets with tally sheets giving the state of title of individual animals or groups of animals. 38 A.G. Op. 69 (1980).

Case Notes

Plaintiff's Failure to Establish Actual Damages by Defendant's Conduct — Summary Judgment on Punitive Damage Claim Affirmed: Stipe asserted that defendant intentionally and maliciously violated 81-8-303 and that because of defendant's negligence per se, punitive damages were proper. However, Stipe failed to establish that any actual damages were suffered. Actual damages are a predicate for punitive damages, and a person with no real or actual damages has no right of action for punitive damages. Thus, the District Court did not err in summarily dismissing Stipe's claim for punitive damages absent a showing of actual damages. Stipe v. First Interstate Bank-Polson, 2008 MT 239, 344 M 435, 188 P3d 1063 (2008), following Paulson v. Kustom Enterprises, Inc., 157 M 188, 483 P2d 708 (1971).
